2317a. Workman with heart disease—Death from strain.]—A workman, employed in a mine, exerted himself in the ordinary course of his employment in lifting & replacing the wheels of a tub which had left the rails. He immediately complained of pain. He went to work the following day, & on his way home fell dead. Death was due to the bursting of the right auricle, owing to the walls of the heart having steadily become thinner over a period of years. Medical evidence was given to the effect that the strain of lifting would tend to make the workman's condition more critical & so lead to the collapse. The county ct. judge held the workman's death was caused by an accident, & he awarded compensation:—Held: it was a question of fact, as to which there was evidence to support the finding.—FLANAGAN v. ACKERS WHITLEY & Co. (1926), 19 B. W. C. C. 399, C. A.

2317b. -.]—A stevedore, who for many years had done his work without ailing, while employed unloading a ship had to fill a tub with iron ore, & at a certain point in the transit of the tub to deflect it so as to allow it to clear an obstacle. While pulling the tub into the right position he suddenly said "Oh!" & ceased work for a moment, but, recovering, put some iron ore into the tub, when he again felt ill & stopped. He lay down, & within half an hour from his saying "Oh!" was dead. On a post mortem examination it was found that he suffered from coronary disease of the heart, which sooner or later would have caused death:—Held: death resulted from a strain incurred in the ordinary exercise of the man's work, & this amounted to an accident, as to establish an accident it was not necessary to find a sudden or special strain, & an award should be made in favour of the dependant.—MCFARLANE v. HUTTON BROTHERS (STEVEDORES), LTD. 2317c. —— ——.]—A workman was employed loading & unloading a ship, & on May 25, 1931, started the work at 6 a.m. of loading bags of sugar & china clay weighing a hundredweight each or more slung on board by a crane. It was common ground he had a diseased heart. He was a man of small stature, forty-six years of age. He worked till 8 a.m., & at breakfast felt queer, but resumed work, & at 9.30 tried to stop a sling of sacks swinging; there was a jerk, & he injured his finger, but continued work. There was a slight pause, when the men were sitting down, but the deceased workman got up to hook a bag, tried to strike his hook in the bag, but fell & died. The question arose whether he died purely from disease of the heart, or whether the work contributed to the death, in which latter event the death would be an accident arising out of the employment. The county ct. judge held the accident was due to disease & not to the employment. The death was certified to be caused by myocarditis & syncope:—Held: there was no evidence on which the county ct. judge could find as he did, & the death was contributed to by the ordinary course of the work, it not being necessary, in order to so hold, to prove there had been some abnormal strain caused by the work; consequently the accident arose out of the employment, & the dependent on the earnings of the deceased was entitled to compensation under sect. 1 (1), of 1925 Act.—TRELOAR v. FALMOUTH DOCKS & ENGINEERING CO., LTD. There was no evidence that he did slip when the tibia snapped in Aug. 1925. 2340b. Distinction between negligence & performance of act in unusual manner—Question of fact.]—Deceased was the driver of a steam lorry. He left the lorry, which had been proceeding along the high road, for purposes of his own for a few minutes. Returning to the road he beckoned to the steersman of the lorry to come on. Apparently he attempted to board the lorry when in motion; he slipped & fell under the wheels & was killed. His widow claimed compensation. The county ct. judge held that the act of the deceased was not done for the purposes of & in connection with his employers' trade or business & made an award in favour of the employer:—Held: the distinction between negligently doing an act which was within the authority & doing an act which you are employed to do in such an unusual way as to take it outside the authority had not been sufficiently considered by the county ct. judge. 2342a. —— —— ——.]—A dock labourer was employed to load cargo into a steamer in a dock. He could have reached the shed where he worked by a provided route over a metalled road, but as this was a long way round he took a shorter cut, which involved his crossing a number of railway lines on the level, & while doing so was knocked down & killed by a light engine. The county ct. judge found that deceased could have used the provided way through the docks, but as he did not do so, but used an unauthorised route, albeit one commonly used to the knowledge & with the implied permission of the co.'s officials by a large number of workmen, & as at the time when the accident happened he was not doing anything which he was under any obligation to do, the accident did not arise in the course of the employment:—Held: this was a misdirection. On the facts, the workman was on the employers' premises, proceeding to work over an accustomed & permitted, though not a provided, route, & the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment.—HOWELLS v. GREAT WESTERN RY. e i. Workman riding in jigger belonging to fellow workman.]—Pltf. was employed by deft. corpn. as a platelayer on a length of tram line, approximately two miles in length, running between the H. waterworks dam & quarry. A construction camp had been erected near the dam, & pltf. & other workmen elected to live at this camp. Pltf.'s work was confined to the section of the line running between the dam & the quarry. Pltf. often spent week-ends at the H. Bay, & with other workmen he frequently returned from H. Bay to the camp on a jigger owned by one of the men. Such use of the jigger was known to & acquiesced in by the corpn.'s officers. Pltf. was returning to the camp on the morning of Aug. 3, 1929, on the jigger, when the latter was derailed & pltf. seriously injured. The place of the accident was some two miles & a half from the nearest part of the section of line at which he would normally have reported for duty:—Held: though pltf. had a right to be at the place where the accident happened, at the time he was not then there in pursuance of his obligation to deft. & his claim must fail.—FLOWERDAY v. AUCKLAND CITY CORPN., [1930] N. found in the water a thousand yards from the ship:—Held: deceased, by taking on the special duty of night watchman, did not divest himself of the character of a seaman, & as he must be inferred at the time of the accident to have been on the private premises of the harbour in which the ship lay, & sustained the accident by reason of risks incidental to his employment, which he would not have encountered but for his employment, therefore the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment. The principle in all the cases of a seaman returning from shore leave to his ship in a public harbour is that the question to be decided must be whether the risk run was shared with all the public, or was incidental to the seaman's employment.—NORTHUMBRIAN SHIPPING CO., LTD. v. MCCULLUM (1932), 101 L. 2355a. —— Road repairer—Accident on scene of repairs.]—Applt. was a workman who was employed by resps. in road repairing & tar spraying. The work consisted in sweeping & tarring the road; the last portion of his work for the day was to sweep another portion of the road above the section which had been tarred. On July 5, 1929, the foreman blew his whistle at five o'clock, & the men knocked off work. Applt. got to his work on a bicycle, which he left just off the road, & when work ceased he proceeded in the ordinary way to get his bicycle. At the end of the swept portion of the road were some horses belonging to a separate contractor & used for moving the tarring machines. As he passed the horses he was kicked by one of them, knocked off his bicycle & severely injured. On those facts the county ct. judge found that the accident did not arise in the course of applt.'s employment:—Held: the decision of the county ct. judge raised a question not of fact but of law, & the proper legal inference to be drawn from the facts was that the accident did not occur in the course of applt.'s employment. When he mounted his bicycle & started off to ride home he had resumed his freedom of action as a citizen on the public highway.—SPAREY v. BATH RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1932), 146 L. T. 285; 48 T. L. 2367a. —— —— Accident while riding motor cycle.]—A fruiterer had a business in N. & a small branch at L. One of his sons lived at L., but not over the L. premises. The son periodically travelled between L. & N. to assist his father in N. & would tell him of the requirements of the L. branch. He travelled by motor cycle except in wet weather, when he went by train. While riding his motor cycle from L. to N. the son collided with a lorry & was killed. The widow claimed compensation. There was no evidence forthcoming in the arbn. as to whether the son had called at the L. branch before leaving for N. The county ct. judge made an award in favour of the widow. The employer appealed:—Held: there was no evidence that at the time of the accident the workman was engaged on his employer's business & it was not therefore proved that the workman was in the course of his employment at the time. Appeal allowed.

In the present case the facilities had been provided by the employer, & the deceased chose to travel to his work by motor cycle (LAWRENCE, L.J.).—MEDLER v. MEDLER (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 345, C. A.

2368 i. Conveyance provided by farmer.]- A berrypicker was engaged to work on a fruit farm eight miles distant from her home, on the undertaking that wages would be paid her at a daily rate & that she would be conveyed by her employer to & from her work. The hour of commencing work on the farm was generally 7 a.m., but was sometimes 8 a.m., & each evening the workers were informed when the employer's conveyance would call for them on the following morning. No other means of conveyance was available to the berrypicker, & she would not have accepted the employment except on the condition that her employer conveyed her to & from work. While travelling to work on a lorry belonging to her employer she was injured through the lorry being accidentally overturned:—Held: the accident to the worker had not arisen in the course of her employment.—CRAW v. FORREST, [1931] S. their work, to walk back to the employers' yard, where the lorry was waiting. On a particular day the worker, having finished her work, was standing in the yard with her fellow-employees, & the employers' foreman told them to load up on the lorry. The women sat as usual with their legs dangling over the side of the lorry. As the lorry left the yard one of the worker's legs was crushed between the lorry & a gate-post. The county ct. judge held that the worker was not in the yard under any express or implied term of her contract of service, that the yard was not within the ambit of her work, & that it was unnecessary for her to be there either for the performance of her duties or for the purpose of going home, & made an award in favour of the employers. The worker appealed:—Held: the case was covered by authority, & the accident arose out of & in the course of the worker's employment. If he had orders to deliver, he rode a bicycle, & on Dec. 17, 1926, he was told he might go for his tea, & was to deliver an order on the way, & take two orders coming back. He delivered the order, had his tea, & was bicycling back, but before he had called for the two orders he was knocked down by a motor lorry & injured. The county ct. judge found that at the time of the accident the boy was engaged on his own affairs in returning from tea, & that the accident did not arise out of & in the course of his employment:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding, & no misdirection.—LYE v. BRITISH & ARGENTINE MEAT CO. 2388a. ——.]—A watchman was employed on an estate in which sewers were being constructed in a trench by the side of a highway. He could go anywhere on the estate, but had to give special attention to the open trench & to look after the red lights at night-time. He was provided with a watchman's box & a coke brazier. During one of his watches, which was twenty-four hours in length, he took the brazier into a workman's day shelter on the estate, but 300 yards from the trench, covered the shelter completely over with a tarpaulin, took his boots off, & lay down to sleep. He was later found dead in this situation, having been suffocated by the fumes from the coke brazier. On a claim by the widow the county ct. judge held that, as the deceased was on his employer's premises in pursuance of his duty, the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment. The employers appealed:—Held: there was, on the evidence, no causal connection between the employment & the death, &, therefore, the accident did not arise out of & in the course of the employment.—BUCKLAND v. FRENCH (W. & C.) 2417a. Workmen repairing hydraulic apparatus—Not using ladder provided—Electrocution.]—Deceased workmen, whilst employed on Oct. 24, 1929, by resps. in the repair of hydraulic apparatus, met with a fatal accident. When the repair was effected it was necessary to go about 100 yards in the works to turn on a valve starting the water power to see whether the repair would resist the water pressure, & if it failed to resist the pressure some one had to turn off the valve as soon as possible. The obvious & proper route to the valve was up a ladder & along an air pipe, using the hydraulic pipe as a handrail, & for an ordinary able workman this was neither difficult nor dangerous. Deceased went to the valve by this route, turned it on, but returned another way, which involved his going along the crane-way, on which there was a danger from moving cranes & a live electric wire, & he put his hand on this wire & was electrocuted. Directly the valve was turned on the workman gave or received a signal from the workmen at the place of repair. The county ct. judge found that one of the objects of the deceased in returning by the way he did was to give or receive a signal as soon as possible, but held that the deceased workman, in adopting that route for the purpose of effecting that object, had acted in an unnecessary & unreasonable way & had by so acting stepped outside the sphere of his employment, & therefore the accident did not arise out of the employment, & consequently s. 1 (2) did not apply:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding of the county ct. judge, & being a question of fact the Ct. of Appeal could not interfere with the finding.—SHEPHARD v. LONDON, MIDLAND & SCOTTISH RAILWAY (1930), 143 L. T. 220; 23 B. W. C. C. 105, C. A.

2419a. Workman putting hand into exhaust pipe—To find hammer.]—The workman was employed as a labourer by resps., & occasionally as a grinder. The grinders' shop had some fifteen pipes running into it, all of which except one were inhaust pipes to draw the dust, arising from the grinding, out of the air. One was an exhaust pipe with a strong draught of air into the shop. Some days before the accident the workman, whilst employed in the shop, mislaid his hammer, & being told that sometimes the hammers were put in the mouth of a pipe he put his hand in one of the inhaust pipes & drew out his hammer, the end of the hammer being visible. He again mislaid the hammer, & next day, Sept. 19, 1928, put his hand again in the same pipe, but not finding it there, tried the next pipe which was the exhaust pipe which had a fan close to the mouth, & his fingers were cut off. He claimed compensation under the Act. It would have been possible without danger to have put his hand in any of the pipes except the exhaust one. The county ct. judge held that the act of the man in searching in the mouth of the pipe was an added peril to his employment, & a peril voluntary superinduced by him on what arose out of the employment; the accident did not arise out of & in the course of his employment, & further, the act being entirely unnecessary because the hammer could have been seen if it had been placed in the exhaust with the fan so near the mouth of the pipe, & absolutely unreasonable because the outward draught was very strong & quite sufficient to show that there must have been a rapidly revolving fan close to the outlet, the act was not within the sphere of the employment at all:—Held: the question whether this act of the workman was one within the scope of his employment was one of fact involving a question of degree, & therefore a question to be decided by the county ct. judge, & his award could not be interfered with.—DYSON v. VICKERS-ARMSTRONG, LTD. 2425a. —— Workman walking along line—Short cut.]—An electrician was employed in the erection of an overhead cable to convey electrical current across country. The work had reached a stage where the cable was being carried over a single line of railway. The workman entered his employment when he met his foreman in the morning, but he had to walk a mile & a half after meeting the foreman, to the spot where he had to work. The proper route to this spot was along a road, then along a footpath, & then across a field, but a considerable distance could be saved by walking part of the way along the railway line. The workman chose to trespass along the line, but, as a gale was blowing, he walked with his head down against the wind. He thus failed to notice the approach of a train which struck & killed him. The widow claimed compensation. The county ct. judge made his award for the widow on the ground that the workman was merely acting negligently in the course of his employment. The employers appealed:—Held: the workman was not employed to trespass on the railway, & the accident arose out of the added peril to which he had thereby exposed himself & not out of the employment. Appeal allowed.—STEPHENSON v. BRITISH INSULATED CABLES, LTD. (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 549, C. A.

2430a. —— Taking short cut through danger area.]—The deceased workman was a general labourer employed by resps. as a stand-by man around a mechanical navvy to assist the engine-driver. During a short interval when he was not required at the navvy, he went away to a neighbouring kiln to warm his hands or to warm himself, which he was entitled to do. He returned to his proper place for his work by taking a "short cut" which brought him under the bucket of the navvy. This he had been warned by his employers not to do. As he was proceeding back to work by this "short cut," the engine-driver's foot slipped off the controls, with the result that the bucket fell on the workman's head & killed him:—Held: the workman was performing the work which he was employed to do in a way in which he was warned not to do it, but he was, nevertheless, doing something for the purposes of his employment. The case therefore came within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1 (2), & the widow was entitled to compensation.—BROTHERTON v. JACKSON (J. & A.) (1928), 98 L. J. K. B. 76; 140 L. 2437a. Attempt to board lorry in motion.]—Deceased workman at the time of the accident was twenty-five years old, & an active man. He was employed by resp. as driver of a motor steam lorry of about 7 tons burden, & a steersman was also employed on the lorry. On Apr. 12, 1929, whilst driving, he got down & went across a field, in which he had seen his father, to get some tobacco from him. After he had got the tobacco he relieved nature against the hedge, & joined the road some 300 yards in front of the lorry. He beckoned to the steersman, who then drove on at three miles an hour, & whilst it was moving the deceased attempted to get on, but fell & was run over by the hind wheel & killed. The steersman did not see what happened, but felt a bump when the lorry went over the deceased. There was a step about 17 inches from the ground, & then an iron platform 12 inches by 13 inches next to the small door leading into the cab where the driver sat. The door opened outwards on to the iron platform. There was no handrail or handle on the outside of the lorry to give any help to any one entering the cab. There was evidence that men got on to these lorries every day when going at three miles an hour. The question arose whether the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment. The county ct. judge held that it was a question of degree, & taking into consideration the speed of the steam lorry, its weight, its construction, & its accessibility whilst moving at three miles an hour, the deceased, in attempting to enter it & trying to get through the open door or clambering over it, added a hazard & needless peril to his employment, & was thereby doing something different in kind from what he was employed to do, & voluntarily exposing himself to a risk which was not reasonably incident to his employment; & therefore the accident did not arise out of & in the course of the employment:—Held: the county ct. judge had not misdirected himself in law & there was some evidence on which he could come to the conclusion he did, therefore his award could not be interfered with.—TAYLOR v. LOCK (No. 2) (1930), 144 L. 2439a. Farm hand adjusting mower.]—A workman employed as a harvest hand on a farm was engaged in driving a two-horse mower with a cutting-blade for cutting the corn, & had occasion to replace a chain which had become detached from the back-band of one of the horses. He did not put the cutting-blade out of gear, but stood up from his seat on the machine & attempted to walk out on the pole between the horses in order to reach the detached chain. There was no express prohibition against walking on the pole, but the customary & proper method of replacing a chain was to stop the mower, put the cutting-blade out of gear, fasten the reins, dismount from the machine & walk to the horses' heads. The weight of the workman on the pole caused the horses to start, setting the cutting-blade in motion. He fell on to the blade & was seriously & permanently injured. In a claim for compensation the arbitrator found that the injury sustained was not due to an accident arising out of the employment. On appeal by the workman it was held by the Second Division of the Ct. of Session that there was evidence on which the arbitrator could make that finding. The workman again appealed :—Held : the accident arose from an added peril to which the workman had voluntarily exposed himself & consequently did not arise out of his employment.—STEPHEN v. COOPER, [1929] A. 2439b. Riding bicycle along railway platform carrying heavy weight.]—A workman in the course of his employment had to take a mud-door from the ship on the repair of which he was engaged to get it repaired. The mud-door was a piece of metal about 9 in. by 4 in. & weighing 7 lb. to 8 lb. He walked with it down the pier to the shore-end where the repairing shop was, & when it was mended got on to a bicycle & rode along a platform on the east side of the pier reserved for passengers. A railway ran down the centre of the pier & on each side was a raised platform about 7 ft. wide, the one on the eastern side for passengers the other for traffic. Public notices were put up at the water end of the pier that the eastern platform was for pedestrians only, & at the other end that the western platform was for traffic only. The man fell in front of an approaching train & was killed. His widow claimed compensation as being dependent on the earnings of the deceased workman, but the county ct. judge held that she was not entitled, as though the accident arose in the course of the employment it did not arise also out of the employment, as the getting on the bicycle was an act which it was no part of his employment to hazard or do, & therefore the accident, not being within sect. 1 (1) of the Act, it was immaterial that in fact the act was done for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' trade or business, since before sect. 1 (2) was applicable, the workman must show that the act arose out of the employment within sect. 1 (1) :—Held : the riding of the bicycle along the pier was something different in kind from anything the man was required or expected to do in his employment, & such an act was outside of the sphere of the employment, consequently the accident did not arise out of the employment, & sect. 1 (2) of the Act of 1925 had no operation.—QUICKFALL v. LONDON & NORTH-EASTERN RY. 2439c. Postman using motor cycle—Permission to use bicycle—Accident at level crossing.]—An auxiliary postman was employed to deliver letters in relief of his father who was sub-postmaster of a country post office. Ten years earlier the father had obtained permission to use a bicycle on the round. In the course of this round it was necessary to go across a level crossing. The son went on the round on a motor cycle & crossed the level crossing in front of an approaching train riding his motor cycle with the engine in gear. As he was crossing the engine of the train caught the motor cycle. He was thrown off & died of his injuries. His widow claimed compensation. At the arbn. it was conceded on behalf of the employer that the permission granted to the father to use a bicycle extended to the son, but it was also argued on the employer's behalf that the deceased workman by using a motor cycle instead of a pedal cycle had added a peril to his employment & was doing something different in kind from what he was employed to do. The county ct. judge found that the permission to use a bicycle did not cover the use of a motor cycle & found that the accident did not arise out of the employment. The widow appealed :—Held : the deceased workman by riding a motor cycle as he did at the level crossing was doing an act outside the scope of his employment.

sq. Farm labourer taking gun to shoot crows.]—A man, who was employed by a farmer to do general work on the farm, was working in a potato field, grubbing potatoes. He was using, with the assistance of another man, a grubber, which was a machine drawn by two horses. He had taken his employer's gun from a storeroom in a house on the farm without his employer's permission, & he fired at a crow which flew down. He then placed the gun on the grubber, the gun shortly afterwards accidentally went off, & he received injuries from which he died. Evidence was given that a number of crows were in the field earlier in the day & that crows would injure the potatoes. The employer had a licence for the gun, enabling him to shoot over his own land. He did not use the gun himself & he had no ammunition. He never gave the workman permission to use the gun. The workman had no licence :—Held : the act of the workman in carrying a loaded gun was entirely different in kind from the class of acts which he was employed to do ; the risk occasioned by so doing was not a risk incidental to his employment ; & the workman was not acting in a manner which was reasonably within the contemplation of the parties when the contract of service was made, & accordingly that the accident did not arise out of the employment.—LOUGHREY v. MORRISON, [1930] 1. 2488a. Riding on engine.]—The duty of C., a workman in the employ of the S. Railway, required him to go from point A. to point B. on their premises. Instead of going by a public road he proceeded to walk along the permanent way, a shorter route, in disregard of an emphatic prohibition. It was a common practice, acquiesced in by the railway's responsible officers, though forbidden by their rules, for workmen passing between A. & B. to travel on an engine if one happened to be running at a convenient time. When C. had walked about three-quarters of the distance along the line an engine going in the same direction passed him at a low speed, &, to save himself the trouble of completing the journey on foot, he attempted to mount the engine in motion, with the result that he was seriously & permanently injured. The county ct. judge found that, although the prohibition was a very real one, C. was entitled to compensation, as he was acting "for the purposes of & in connection with" the railway's business within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1 (2):—Held: the above sub-sect. did not extend compensation to workmen who were not in their employment at all, &, as C. in going into a definitely prohibited area, had gone outside his sphere of employment, he could not recover.—CLARKE v. SOUTHERN RY. 2492a. ——.]—Some miners had been conveyed from their work at the face to the shaft in a train of tubs provided by the employers. Some conveyance was necessary in order to enable the men to leave the pit within the limit of seven hours permitted for each shift. Subsequently the employers provided a "spake," i.e., a train of special vehicles containing seats. On the occasion of the accident the driver in charge of the spake, for some purpose of his own, did what he had sometimes done before, namely, instead of using the spake used a train of tubs for conveying the miners, who knew that riding on tubs was prohibited, but did not complain. The train of tubs broke & overturned, & two of the miners were killed, & one was slightly injured:—Held: the prohibition was of the class that dealt with conduct within the sphere of the employment, & Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1 (2), applied. It was necessary for the employers that the men should leave within a specified time, & the act was done for the purposes of the employers' trade or business, & compensation should be awarded to the dependants of the two miners who were killed, but not to the slightly injured miner, who was, for that reason, not covered by sect. 1 (2).—EDWARDS v. GWAUNCAEGURWEN COLLIERY CO., JAMES v. SAME, JENKINS v. SAME (1926), 96 L. Whilst so engaged the train went over a stone & jolted him off, & the injury he received resulted in the loss of a leg. Riding on a waggon by means of a coupling pole was prohibited:—Held: the prohibition was not one defining the sphere of the man's employment, though the breach of it, apart from Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1 (2), would have prevented the accident arising out of the employment. 2499a. —— —— Order by unauthorised contractor.]—Resps., coal masters, employed a contractor to win coal in a pit they were working, & the contractor employed applt. as a mine worker for that purpose. It having become necessary to fire certain shots in this pit, the shot-firing was entrusted by the resps. to a duly appointed fireman, who alone was authorised to fire the shots. The fireman, in breach of Explosives in Coal Mines Order of Sept. 1, 1913, allowed the contractor to couple up the cable employed in the process of shot-firing to the shot, the fireman then connecting the other end of the cable to the firing apparatus & firing the shot. After six shots had been fired in this way, the contractor, without informing the fireman, instructed applt. to couple up the cable to the seventh shot, & while applt. was in the act of coupling up the cable, the charge exploded & seriously & permanently injured him. Upon an application by applt. for compensation from resps., the arbitrator found in law that the accident arose out of & in the course of his employment & made an award in favour of the applt.:—Held: the accident to applt. did not arise out of or in the course of his employment, but arose out of & in the course of the prohibited act, & 1925 Act, sect. 6 (1), did not apply, as applt. was not employed on any work which the contractor had undertaken with the principal to execute.—PALEOKAS (OR POLLOCK) v. MOUNT VERNON COLLIERY CO., LTD., [1931] A. 2506a. —— —.]—S., a stoneman, was employed by resps. driving a drift through rock by shotfiring & was found dead within three yards of the working face, his body being very badly damaged & his left arm practically blown off, he being a left-handed man. The drill & ratchet were found burnt, broken, & twisted a few yards from the working face, & the standard some way from the face & undamaged. The drill & ratchet together with the standard were used for drilling holes to put the shots in, but if a shot misfired & the stemming was drilled out the standard was not used. S. was a licensed shot firer, & his duty would be to deal with the case of a misfire, but the use of a hole in which a shot had misfired was prohibited, as also the drilling out of it the stemming in order to put in another charge, it being directed that a fresh hole must be bored not less than a foot from the old hole. There was no evidence that there had been any attempt to drill a fresh hole. The county ct. judge held the man was killed whilst doing a prohibited act, but, as his motive was to save himself the trouble of drilling a fresh hole, he was not at the time of the accident doing an act for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' trade or business within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1 (2), & his dependant was not entitled to recover compensation:—Held: the personal motive of the man in doing the prohibited act was not a criterion as to whether he was doing it for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' trade or business, & as the man was engaged at the working face within the sphere of his employment he must be deemed to have acted for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' trade or business, &, though doing a prohibited act, he was brought back within sect. 1 (1), & compensation was payable as for an accident arising out of & in the course of the employment.—STOKOE v. MICKLEY COAL CO., LTD. 2512a. ——.]—By the Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), s. 43 (11), an official of a mine is permitted to travel on foot on a haulage road while the haulage is in motion, but by sect. 43 (12) of that Act is not permitted in the circumstances of this case to ride on the tubs. An overman, whose duties took him to all parts of the mine, was at some distance from the bottom of the shaft at the time when it was his duty to hand over his duties to another. He got into a moving tub for the purpose of riding to the person to whom he had to hand over his duties, & whilst so riding received injuries which caused his death. On a claim by his widow the county ct. judge found that the workman's act in riding on the tub was done for the purposes of & in connection with his employers' business, but it was an act which was not within the scope of his employment. He therefore made an award in favour of the employers. A shifter, in contravention of Regulation 25 (a), made under Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), got into an open train, which was being hauled along the way by a pony, without the permission of the manager. In consequence he received injuries which caused his death. On a claim by his widow, the county ct. judge made a similar award. Both appcts. appealed:—Held: the question of whether the workman was acting within the scope of his employment at the time of the accident was one of fact, & there was evidence to support the finding that he was not. This being so, the accident did not arise out of & in the course of the employment, notwithstanding that the act of the workman was one done for the purposes of & in connection with his employers' business. The judge's decision was right & there was no misdirection.—DAVISON v. HOLMSIDE & SOUTH MOOR COLLIERIES, LTD., NAPPER v. LAMBTON, HETTON & JOICEY COLLIERIES, LTD. (1929), 140 L. T. 511; 45 T. L. 2512b. —.]—By Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), s. 43 (2), no miner may ride on sets or trains of tubs where the haulage is worked by gravity or mechanical power. A workman, when signing on for work at a colliery where he was employed as a salvage man, was supplied with a summarised copy of this provision. Men-riding trolleys were provided for carrying the men up the dips at the end of their shift. The workman, with two other salvage men, was ordered in the middle of a shift to move twenty-six pipes from the bottom to the top of a dip, a distance of about seventy yards. Half the pipes were loaded & hauled up on a timber-trolley. The workman, instead of walking down to assist in loading the remainder, got into an empty tub attached to the descending timber-trolley. In the descent the tub became derailed by an accident in the haulage engine-house & the workman was killed. His widow claimed compensation. The county ct. judge found that the workman rode in the tub for the purposes of & in connection with his employer's business in that he did it to save time, & held that he was still within the scope of his employment, although acting in contravention of the statutory prohibition, inasmuch as the prohibition was only concerned with the mode of carrying out his work. An award having been made in favour of the dependant, the employers appealed :—Held : the question was one of degree & therefore one of fact for the county ct. judge. In this case there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—HANNABY v. LLAY MAIN COLLIERIES, LTD., [1931] 1 K. B. 602; 100 L. J. K. B. 353; 144 L. T. 490; 23 B. W. C. C. 403, C. A.

2512c. Riding on journey of trams.]—A miner & his son, working on the same shift, had to return to the pit shaft by the main drift along which journeys of trams were being hauled. While they were returning, the cable of a journey of trams broke & ran back some twenty yards. The son was then found to be pinned underneath the corner of an overturned tram & the father was found lying across another derailed tram, holding the signal rope & seriously injured. The boy died immediately & the father died two days later. The widow claimed compensation on behalf of herself & her surviving children. The county ct. judge found that the workman had been riding on the journey of trams contrary to the prohibition contained in Coal Mines Act, 1911 (c. 50), s. 43 (2), & consequently was not acting in the course of his employment at the time of the accident. He therefore made an award in favour of the employers. The dependants appealed :—Held : there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—EDWARDS v. OCEAN COAL CO., LTD. (1929), 22 B. 2515a. Workman entering prohibited place by mistake.]—A series of cubicles for electrical works were in course of being fitted up, some of which had been completed & contained live electrical machinery, & were locked. There was an express order to the workmen not to enter the completed cubicles. The cubicles being worked upon were quite close to those finished, being in the same series. The workman, a very competent man at his job, was very short-sighted, & was found electrocuted in one of the completed cubicles, he having unlocked the others. The county ct. judge drew the inference that the workman had entered a completed cubicle by mistake, & was there for the purposes of his employers' trade or business, & that the accident arose out of & in the course of his employment :—Held : there was evidence to support this inference of fact, & although the workman was acting contrary to a prohibition, the accident must be deemed to arise out of & in the course of the employment.—CARTER v. BRITISH THOMSON-HOUSTON CO., LTD. sv. Fall from ship lying between barge & quay.]—A canal barge, with a cargo of grain, which was to be transferred to a ship lying alongside the quay, drew up on the river side of this ship & lay alongside it secured in that position by hawsers. The only reasonable way the men on the barge had of going ashore was to cross this ship & then cross the gangway between it & the quay. In the interval before the discharging of the cargo began, the master of the barge went ashore to obtain refreshments, cash a cheque, & to use a lavatory, there being no lavatory on the barge. On his return, having crossed the ship he was proceeding to get from it to the barge, there being no gangway between the ship & the barge, when he slipped & fell into the river & was drowned. There was some evidence that the crew of the barge could not go ashore without the permission of the master of the barge, but there was no evidence that the master could not go ashore without leave from some superior officer of his employers :—Held : the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment.—LAWLOR v. GRAND CANAL CO., [1929] I.R. 623.—IR.

quence suffered an accident which resulted in the loss of all the fingers of his right hand. The county ct. judge found that the workman was employed to operate the machine with a guard which would have prevented any possibility of injury & was never employed to operate the machine without the guard. The workman appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection.

2552a. Drowned when using boat not provided by employer.]—Five sailors got leave to go on shore. The bo'sun said that they were not bound to be back in the ship until 6.15 a.m. A launch had been provided to take the sailors on leave to the shore & back again, & the captain told the men that the last journey to the ship by the launch would be made at 8 p.m., & that if they came back later than that, they would have to find some other means of returning to the ship. The men desired to enjoy their leave till later than 8 p.m., & tried to arrange with the man who worked the launch to come for them at 10 p.m., offering to pay him 2*s.* each, but the launch never came for them at 10 p.m., so they got into the first boat handy, a dinghy, & borrowed a scull with which they propelled the dinghy from the stern. The dinghy, though the men were unaware of it, was rotten & sank, the result being that three of the five men were drowned:—Held: there was no contractual obligation on the deceased men to return to their ship by the boat they used, which was not provided by the employers, & as no such duty was on the men to use that boat, the accident by which they lost their lives was not in the course of performing some duty arising out of their contract of service, or, in other words, in the course of their employment.—ROBERTSON v. APPALACHEE (OWNERS), ROVIRA v. SAME (1926), 136 L. 2552b. Standing up in boat to take hold of gangway—Boat sinking.]—M. & W. were members of the crew of a ship lying in a river about twenty-five feet from the wharf. The ship provided no boat for the purpose of going to or from the shore. A game of football was being played on shore, at which the captain & some of the officers were present & in which M. took part. On returning to the wharf after the game M. hailed W., who got into a canoe at the foot of the gangway & fetched M. When M. got up to take hold of the gangway, the canoe filled, & both men were drowned. The county ct. judge held the accident was occasioned by a reasonable attempt to get hold of the gangway, & such attempt involved more than an ordinary risk of navigation to which any passenger would be exposed, & was an act specifically connected with his employment on the ship, & he made an award in favour of the dependants in both cases, on the ground that both men had been drowned in an accident arising out of & in the course of their employment:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding.—MORRISON v. ABOUKIR (OWNERS), WOODS v. SAME (1928), 21 B. 2552c. Seaman crossing barges instead of using boat.]—A sailor who was on shore on leave from his ship returned to the ship by walking over barges which lay between it & the quay, &, while doing so, fell into the water & was drowned. The employers had provided a boat & boatman for the members of the crew to get from & to the ship, but most of the crew used the way over the barges, & that was acquiesced in by the officers:—Held: the sailor being under no obligation or duty to his employers to return by this means, was not in the course of his employment in so doing, & therefore the accident did not arise in the course of the employment.—BLACK v. HESPERIDES S.S. OWNERS (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 295, C. A.

2552d. Fall from ship's bulwark.]—The deceased workman was a coal trimmer. On the day of the accident, he & the foreman of the trimmers had gone on resps.' steamship A. to place the chute in position, so that the coal could be shot into the hold. Having done that they both left the ship. The foreman stepped on to the ship's bulwark & from there he stepped on to the top of the handrail on the quay, a distance of about two feet, & then hopped on to the quay. The deceased workman followed, but in stepping off the ship's bulwark he slipped, fell, & was killed. After the accident the foreman noticed for the first time that there was a ladder provided to bridge the two-foot space between the ship's bulwark & the handrail on the quay, & it was admitted that stepping across from the ship's bulwark to the quay was not the right way of leaving the ship. The county ct. judge made an award in favour of the employers:—Held: the manner in which the deceased workman left the ship was not so far removed from anything contemplated by either party as to preclude the ct. from holding that the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment. The case must be remitted to the county ct. judge to assess compensation.—DIXON v. AYRESOME S.S. OWNERS (1930), 99 L. J. K. B. 250; 142 L. T. 455; 18 Asp. M. L. C. 115; 23 B. W. C. C. 29, C. A.

2557a. No order before accident—Liability to receive order to work on machine from which injury received.]—A workman employed in a brick factory had to work according to the instructions of a foreman. He might be put to work at any moment on any machine, including a plunger machine. He was instructed by the foreman to work a pressing machine & then to collect broken bricks. After collecting the bricks he was asked by a fellow workman to work a plunger machine. While working on this machine he was injured by an accident which resulted in serious & permanent disablement. The county ct. judge found as a fact that although he was working on the plunger machine without instructions from the foreman, the act was one within the scope of his general employment, & held that as the act was done for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' business, the accident must be deemed to have arisen out of & in the course of his employment. 2566a. Handling electric cable before permit given.] —A linesman of some experience was employed by contractors in their work of laying overhead electric cables. The work was done in three stages, unrolling, gunning, & lifting the wire on to the insulators on the poles. He had been instructed by his foreman that cables were not to be fixed to the insulators on the poles until information had been received that the current had been turned off from the live wires already in position. The first two stages of the work having been completed, the workman without waiting for the necessary permit, proceeded to lift a wire into position on top of the poles. While doing so he struck a live wire & sustained severe burns from which he died. On a claim for compensation by the dependants, the county ct. judge though he found the foregoing facts & also that the workman was a quick workman who was anxious to proceed with the job, & that, provided care was used, there was no danger from the live wires, held that, as the workman was instructed not to work in the area where he met with his accident until the current had been turned off, the accident did not arise out of the employment within sect. 1 (1), & made his award in favour of the employers. The dependants appealed:—Held: on the facts found by the county ct. judge the accident must be deemed to have arisen out of the employment within sect. 1 (2). Appeal allowed. 2574a. —.]—Deceased was a mosaic worker employed by applts., who had a flooring contract at K., & deceased was carrying out at K. mosaic work for the purposes of the contract. It was the duty of deceased to travel by train from L. to K. daily, & he was paid by applts. for the time occupied in so travelling, & his railway ticket was also paid for by applts. Deceased, having gone to sleep, got out of the train whilst it was in motion leaving K. & slipped on the platform as he landed, fell heavily on his back, his head striking the platform violently, & died of the injuries received:—Held: though deceased was in the course of his employment while travelling in the train, he was committing an illegal act in getting out of the train while in motion, & was doing an act which did not arise out of the employment, but under the above sect. it must be deemed to arise out of & in the course of the employment as having been done in pursuance of & for the purposes of the employers' trade or business, & the act done was not so contrary to law as to put the man wholly outside the sphere of the employment, & his widow was entitled to compensation.—ALTOBELLI v. JOHN ELLIS & SONS, LTD. 1 i. Workman fetching hot water for tea.]—Following a practice or custom known to his employer, a worker left the job upon which he was working to go from one part of his employer's premises to another during his employer's time, in order to procure hot water for tea for the midday meal of himself & his fellow-workers; he was doing this for the purpose of more conveniently supplying them with the hot water which the employer habitually provided, generally as a matter of statutory obligation, sometimes without that compulsion, but in like case. Whilst on the way to the employer's boiler containing the hot water, he was injured by a motor car on a road on the employer's premises:—Held: the accident arose in the course of his employment, & he was entitled to compensation.—PEARSON v. FREMANTLE HARBOUR TRUST (1929), 42 C. 2589a. ——.]—A porter employed by furniture & upholstery makers claimed compensation for injury by accident arising out of an assault committed upon him in the course of his employment. Whilst engaged in loading furniture into a railway van outside resp.'s premises an altercation arose between appct. & the van driver in consequence of a suggestion made to the driver that he should assist in expediting the work. The driver struck appct. in the face, & so injured one of his eyes that it had to be removed. The county ct. judge dismissed the application, finding that though the assault was an accident, it was not one of the risks of appct.'s employment that he should be assaulted, & it was not the result of doing anything of service to his employer, & it was not an accident arising out of the employment :—Held : the decision was right, as there was evidence upon which the judge could support his decision, & no misdirection.—LEE v. BRECKMAN (S. & I.) & Co. 2589b. ——.]—A ship's fireman who had been on shore was carried back to the ship quite drunk. The ship sailed with the drunken man absent from his duty. An hour after the ship had sailed a fellow-workman was ordered to go & fetch him. The workman found the drunken man in his bunk & gave the message, whereupon the drunken man seized a razor & inflicted severe injuries on the workman. The injured man claimed compensation. The county ct. judge found that the workman was injured by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment & made an award in his favour. The employers appealed :—Held : there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—RENNIE v. DALGLEISH STEAMSHIPPING CO., LTD. (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 501, C. A.

2594a. Attendant of urinal—Assault by drunkard.]—A workman employed as an underground urinal attendant in the East End of London, was struck in the eyes by a drunken sailor who refused to pay a penny for using a water-closet. As a result, the workman, who already suffered from partial loss of sight, was totally blinded. The county ct. judge heard no evidence as to the quantum of compensation, but decided as a point of law that he could not hold that the accident arose out of the employment in the absence of evidence that the employment exposed the workman to some risk of assault. He therefore made an award in favour of the employers. The workman appealed :—Held : the workman, by the nature of his employment, was exposed to risks to which ordinary members of the public were not exposed & the accident arose out of the employment.—SMITH v. STEPNEY CORPN. 2594b. Workman murdered by mad fellow-workman.]—A workman was murdered in a rubber factory by a fellow-workman, who suddenly developed homicidal mania. His father claimed compensation as a dependant. The county ct. judge made an award in his favour, holding that, though there was no special risk attached to the nature of the employment, the workman was bound by his duty to work near the man who ultimately went mad, & was therefore exposed to a risk not equally shared with the rest of the community. The employers appealed, & it was argued on behalf of the dependant on appeal that a risk was attached to the locality in which the workman was murdered by reason of the presence of a madman :—Held : the risk of being attacked by a madman did not arise out of the employment either by reason of the duties performed by the workman or by reason of the locality in which they were performed.—HOLDEN v. PREMIER WATERPROOF & RUBBER CO., LTD. 2602a. —— ——.]—A ship's fireman was found injured at midnight at the bottom of a roped-in hold, after having been helped on board three hours earlier in a hopelessly drunken condition. The accident happened when he was engaged in carrying food, it being no part of his duty to do so, on that night. The county ct. judge found that the workman must have crawled through the ropes round the hold without having any duty whatsoever to do so, & held the accident arose neither out of nor in the course of his employment :—Held : the judge could have come to no other conclusion on the evidence, & there was no misdirection.—WATSON v. ALEPPO (OWNERS) (1927), 20 B. 2612a. Splinter in finger—Workman making packing-cases.]—A workman engaged in making wooden packing-cases complained to a welfare worker in his employers' works that he thought he had a splinter in the little finger of his right hand, but she could find nothing except a small black speck. It was a frequent occurrence for a workman to request the welfare worker to remove a splinter from a finger, & this particular workman had done so on several occasions. The finger became red & swollen, & five days later a doctor found a small bleb on it containing pus. The workman was feverish & was sent to hospital, where he died of septic pneumonia ten days after his complaint to the welfare worker. In his evidence the house-surgeon of the hospital said, " There was no sign of a foreign body. In my view there must have been some injury or crack at place of bleb. Crack might be microscopical or it might be a foreign body entering there. The latter is the most usual." There was no evidence that the workman did any work at home which might cause a similar injury. On a claim by the dependants, the county ct. judge found the following facts : (a) sepsis was due to the entry of a foreign body, the point of entry being indicated by the bleb, (b) deceased had previously got splinters in his hand, such as led to festering, (c) such a splinter would be likely to produce the condition of deceased's finger. From these facts he drew the inference that the deceased was infinitely more likely to get a splinter at work than elsewhere, & that he, therefore, died from an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. The employers appealed :—Held : there was evidence to support the findings of fact, & the county ct. judge was entitled to draw from those facts the inference which he did.—HURST v. WALTER'S PALM TOFFEE CO., LTD. 2618a. Scratches—Furniture remover.]—A workman, employed to drive a lorry & move furniture, frequently received scratches in the course of his work, but usually took no notice of them. On returning from his work one evening he showed his wife that his fingers were scratched. He suffered great pain under the arm during the night & died within seven days of septic poisoning. He had no hobby or occupation at home which exposed him to scratches. The county ct. judge found that death was due to an injury arising out of the employment. The employers appealed :—Held : there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—PIPER v. DE'ATH BROS. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 73, C. A.

2647a. —— ——.]—A colliery repairer, fifty-eight years of age & apparently in excellent health, was scooping out a hole in the earth with an iron bar. After kneeling at this work for a minute or two he fell forward without a word & died some hours later without regaining consciousness. There was no post mortem or inquest as the medical man called to the deceased was alleged to have said at the time that death was due to " natural causes." At the arbn. brought by the widow the same medical man in his evidence said that he did not understand the meaning of the phrase " natural causes " in its legal significance, & that he now thought that the work was connected with the death. The county ct. judge, sitting with a medical assessor, said that on the evidence he was entitled in law to find either way, but having discussed the medical aspect with the medical assessor he did not feel that appct. had discharged the onus of showing that the death had any connection with the work on which deceased was engaged at the time of his collapse, & made his award in favour of the employer. There was no explanation of how he met with the accident, but when last seen shortly before he was acting in the course of his duty. 2668a. Dispenser—Scratch.]—Appct. was employed by two doctors in partnership as a dispenser, her duties being to fill medicine bottles & clean instruments. On Nov. 9, 1926, at 10.30 a.m., whilst so employed, she noticed that her right thumb was bleeding, but was not sure how the scratch which caused the bleeding had occurred, & she had not felt pain. She inferred that she must have knocked it at the time on a rough bit of wood at the side of the sink or on the edge of a cork box. She applied iodine, but as the bleeding did not stop she went to the assistant, who bandaged her thumb, & she continued at work until 11.30, when she went to one of the partners, who dressed the wound. On Nov. 16 she felt too unwell to go to work, & subsequently was in the infirmary until Jan. 18, 1927, suffering from septic poisoning:—Held: (1) there were sufficient facts proved before the county ct. judge to enable him to draw an inference one way or the other, so that there was no necessity for surmise, conjecture, or guess; (2) the employers had had knowledge of the accident, & notice was not necessary.—GILL v. PERROTT (1928), 21 B. 2668b. Workman moving gutters with sharp edges.]—On May 16 a workman was employed as a labourer in moving semi-circular rain gutters with somewhat sharp edges, & returned home with a slight wound in his right shoulder. On the following day he told a fellow-workman that he was "feeling his shoulder," but he continued at work until May 21. A doctor was called in on May 23, but the workman rapidly grew worse & died on May 25 from septicæmia. The widow spoke to the employers' time-keeper of the death & gave formal notice on June 11. The county ct. judge held he was entitled to infer an injury resulting from an accident which arose out of & in the course of the employment, & also held the employers were not prejudiced by any delay in giving notice:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings, & no misdirection.—FLETCHER v. SINCLAIR IRON CO., LTD. 2675a. —— Cut finger—Sheet metal worker.]—An engineer's fitter was employed in cutting, shaping & filing metal sheets, a work likely to cause cuts to those engaged in it. The workman showed his finger to his mate at work on a Monday, when the mate said it looked inflamed. He then went to the ambulance room & returned with the finger dressed. Septicæmia set in, & after some weeks the workman died. His parents claimed compensation as dependants. At the hearing the workman's panel doctor said that he had seen the cut which was very small, & it was of a kind consistent with having been caused in numerous ways. Another doctor said that definite signs of inflammation after such a cut would appear in about twelve hours. The county ct. judge held that there was ground for comparing the balance of probabilities in this case, & that it was more probable that the workman sustained a cut while at work than at some other time, & made his award for the dependants. The employer appealed:—Held: on the medical evidence the balance of probabilities was against the dependants' contention, & they had not discharged the onus of proving that the accident arose out of & in the course of deceased's employment.—DAVIES v. ARMSTRONG-WHITWORTH (SIR W. 2690a. —— —— Chronic glaucoma.]—A stoker, who was already blind in his left eye, complained that he had become completely blind. He alleged that a foreign body had entered his right eye, but at the time of the alleged accident he made no complaint of anything having entered his right eye. A doctor, who examined him, diagnosed the case as one of chronic glaucoma. The county ct. judge found that the workman was at all material times suffering from chronic glaucoma, & that there was no injury by accident arising out of or in the course of his employment:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding, & no misdirection.—WARSAWA v. WATSNESS (OWNERS) (1921), 21 B. 2690b. —— —— Cataract.]—A foreman electrician had since the age of seven worn spectacles in order to save a permanent squint. On Apr. 16, 1926, an ignition tube burst, & some particles of dust & carbon struck his right eye. The right side of the face was blackened, but after his eye had been bathed & particles of carbon washed out, he continued at work until Jan. 1928, although from time to time the right eye became inflamed. In Feb. 1928, cataract was diagnosed, & in Oct. 1928, the right eye was excised. After the operation the workman resumed his work with the same employer & earned the same wages. On an application for compensation the county ct. judge said he was not satisfied that the workman had made out a primâ facie case of incapacity due to the accident in 1926 & did not call on the employers, but dismissed the application with costs. The workman appealed on the ground that the award was against the weight of evidence:—Held: the evidence justified the county ct. judge in finding that the incapacity was not due to the accident.—JONES v. PETTIFER (A. & E.), LTD. 2693a. —— Railway guard travelling as passenger.]—A railway guard, instructed to travel from Glasgow to Gourock in order to take charge of a train there, got into an empty compartment at Glasgow. On arrival of the train at Gourock he was missing, but articles belonging to the man were found on the seat of the compartment. He was afterwards found lying unconscious in a tunnel between Glasgow & Gourock at the left side of the direction of the train, & he died from a fractured skull without recovering consciousness. The compartment at Gourock had its left door shut but the window open. Upon a claim by his dependants for compensation, the arbitrator negatived violence & suicide, & found that the man met his death by falling accidentally from the window of the compartment, & on these facts he concluded that the accident arose out of & in the course of the deceased's employment & awarded compensation:—Held: the arbitrator was entitled on the facts found to draw the inference that the accident to the deceased arose out of as well as in the course of his employment.

The rule to be deduced from the authorities for application to unexplained accident cases is that where the evidence establishes that in the course of his employment the workman was properly in a place to which some risk particular thereto attaches, & an accident occurs capable of explanation solely by reference to that risk, it is legitimate, notwithstanding the absence of evidence as to the immediate circumstances of the accident, to attribute the accident to that risk, & to hold that the accident arose out of the employment, but the inference as to the origin of the accident may be displaced by evidence tending to show that the accident was due to some action of the workman outside the scope of his employment (per CUR.).—SIMPSON v. LONDON, MIDLAND & SCOTTISH RY. b 1. —— Workman leaving work to relieve nature.]—The premises of a coal importer adjoined the Grand Canal Docks. Although a considerable number of men were employed on these premises, no lavatory accommodation was provided, & it was customary for the employees to go across a paling on to a track about three feet wide which passed along the edge of the docks & to relieve nature either on the track, which was on the employer's premises, or at some little distance outside the premises at steps which led down to the water's edge. The dinner hour for the men was from 1 to 2 o'clock. One of the workmen was told by the foreman to return to work one day before 2 o'clock to do certain work, & he returned as ordered. But when he returned he found that the work, which it was intended he should do, was not required to be done. As it was then only a short time before the ordinary hour for resuming work, he remained on the employer's premises in a shed in the company of some of his fellow-workmen. He subsequently went out of the hut, making use of a slang expression used by the men when retiring to relieve nature. He was never seen alive again. Several hours later his body was found floating in the Canal Basin. The cause of death was, admittedly, drowning:—Held: there was evidence from which the judge could infer that when the workman left the hut he had gone for the purpose of relieving nature; there was also evidence that the death of the workman was caused by an accident; & that accident arose out of & in the course of the employment.—TRACEY v. KELLY, [1929] I. R. 634.—IR.

2702a. —.]—A fireman on a ship moored at Port A. in Brazil went to sleep on deck, a practice against which there was no prohibition. It was a warm, clear night. He slept some distance from the side of the ship. The lower of the two bars of the rail at the very edge of the deck had been removed for mooring purposes, leaving a space of about three feet between the upper bar & the deck. The workman was found missing in the early hours of the morning, & his body was found in the water on the following afternoon with a cut over one eye. No explanation could be given as to how he came to fall overboard. On a claim being brought by his dependants, the county ct. judge, on the facts proved before him, drew the inferences that the workman met his death by accident by going overboard in some manner unknown, & that that accident arose in the course of the employment, but he held that the dependants had failed to discharge the burden of proving that the accident arose out of the employment. He therefore made his award in favour of the employers. The dependants appealed :—Held : the county ct. judge had directed himself correctly in law, & his judgment on the facts could not be disturbed. Appeal dismissed. — ROSEN v. S.S. 2710a. — ——.]—A miner, who was known to be suffering from valvular disease of the heart, returned to work against his doctor's advice. His condition was such that he was liable to collapse or sudden death at any moment. He went down the mine at 10.30 p.m., & was alive & well at 3 o'clock. At 4 o'clock he was found dead in his stall, lying back as though asleep. There was no evidence of any fall of roof, & he had no pick in his hand. He was alone at the time of his death, & there was no evidence of what the man was actually doing :—Held : there was no evidence that the man's death was caused by any strain at work, & no evidence that death resulted from any injury by accident arising out of the employment.—MUSCROFT v. STEWARTS & LLOYDS, LTD. 2710b. —— ——.]—A plasterer's labourer was whitewashing while standing on a plank supported by trestles. He suddenly fell dead on to the floor. A post-mortem examination showed that he had been suffering from advanced disease of the heart. The widow claimed compensation. The county ct. judge held that there was no evidence of any accident. The dependant appealed :—Held : it was purely a question of fact for the county ct. judge & there was no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—POGSON v. TUNNACLIFFE (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 86, C. A.

2710c. —— ——.]—A miner was engaged in filling a tram, & in the course of his work had to reach over a tram to get a piece of coal with a pick. He reached over the tram, said "Oh !" twice, & died. The post mortem examination showed that he had been suffering from a large rupture of the left ventricle of the heart which burst & caused his death. The dependants filed a request for arbn. At the hearing a fellow-workman gave evidence that chipping coal was no heavy work & there was no unusual strain, while one of the medical witnesses said that the workman might just as well have died in his bed so far as physical condition went. The county ct. judge in his award stated that he was unable to find that the work contributed to the death, & made his award in favour of the employer. The dependants appealed :—Held : as to whether the workman's death was accelerated by the work he was doing in any material degree was a question of fact. The evidence supported the judge's decision & there was no misdirection.—DAVIES v. VIPOND (JOHN) & CO., LTD. (1932), 146 L. T. 498 ; 25 B. W. C. C. 47, C. A.

2720a. Hernia strangulated in fresh employment.]—On Feb. 6, 1930, a blacksmith ruptured himself while at work. A doctor showed him how to reduce the hernia & he was able to continue his work without any outward sign of incapacity until on May 14, 1930, he was discharged owing to slackness of trade. On June 25 he entered the employment of fresh employers as a blacksmith & on the same day, while lifting a steel bar weighing a hundredweight, strangulated the hernia & an immediate operation became necessary. The lift was not an abnormal one, but was in the ordinary course of a blacksmith's work. He was totally incapacitated for seven weeks & claimed compensation for that period from the previous employer. The county ct. judge found that the incapacity caused on June 25 was a direct consequence of the accident on Feb. 6. The employers appealed :—Held : it was a question of fact for the county ct. judge, & there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection. 2731a. Death from drinking caustic soda in tea.]—A workman was entitled to refresh himself with a cup of tea while he was working. Near to his place of work there was a bucket of caustic soda which was occasionally used to wash the walls. On drinking from his cup he felt a burning sensation & became totally incapacitated from the effects of drinking caustic soda. There was no evidence as to how, or by whom, the caustic soda could have been put into the cup. The county ct. judge held that the accident did not arise out of the employment, & made his award for the employer. The workman appealed :—Held : on the evidence no inference could be drawn that the accident arose out of the employment. Appeal dismissed.—GEARY v. MATHEW BROWN & Co., LTD. (1931), 24 B. W. C. 2734a. -A miner was about to insert a fuse in a detonator in the course of his duties when the detonator exploded & injured him. The sheriff-substitute held that the cause of the explosion was not proved &, the workman having discharged any onus laid on him by proving that the explosion caused the injury, found that the accident arose out of the employment & made an award in his favour. The employers appealed. The First Division of the Ct. of Session by a majority affirmed the award. The employers appealed to the House of Lords :—Held : it followed from the facts of the case that the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment.—LOCHGELLY IRON & COAL Co., LTD. v. LINDORES (1929), 22 B. 2735a. Seaman stooping in course of duty—Burst blood-vessel.]—The chief officer of a vessel, fifty-eight years old, while on duty on the bridge, stooped to get some string out of a cupboard in the course of his duty & then stated to the captain that he felt queer, sat down, & later fell unconscious on the bridge. He recovered consciousness in five minutes, but died about eight hours afterwards. There was no inquest or post mortem. At the hearing of a claim by the widow the doctors on both sides agreed that he died very probably from cerebral hæmorrhage. His own doctor, who had attended him for twenty-five years, said he was a healthy man, & there was no evidence of anything wrong with his heart. The county ct. judge found that the cause of death was the breaking of some blood-vessel due to the stooping which caused the fall which subsequently led to the death, but held that he would not be justified in making an award for the dependant. The dependant appealed :—Held : on the finding that death was due to the stooping, it followed that death resulted from injury by accident arising out of the employment.—HORE v. GENERAL STEAM NAVIGATION Co. 2737a. —— Fumigation of ship with sulphur—Gastritis from fumes.]—At 6 p.m. on July 30, 1930, a ship was fumigated with sulphur, all hatches being battened down. All hatches were opened at 2 a.m. on July 31, & at 8 a.m. a body of workmen came on board to remove gear. Among them was a man in good health & forty-six years old, who worked at a winch about two feet from one of the hatches & nearer to the fumes than any other of the workmen. The fumes from the sulphur were coming up the hatches at that time but were not bad. At midday the workman felt very ill & complained that it was due to the fumes. He vomited during the dinner hour, but worked in the afternoon on another ship. He worked on & off feeling very ill until Aug. 8, when he was sent to hospital suffering from gastritis. None of his fellow-workmen appeared to suffer from the sulphur fumes. At the subsequent arbitration the county ct. judge found, in accordance with medical evidence, that the illness was due to the fumes & also that the occurrence was an accident. He therefore made his award in favour of the workman. The employers appealed :—Held : there was evidence on which the judge could find that there had been personal injury by accident within the Act & there was no misdirection. The workman unbridled one of the horses in order to use the straps to tie up his furniture, but the horse took fright, knocked him down, & killed him. The county ct. judge found as a fact that the accident arose out of the employment & made an award in favour of the widow. The employer appealed :—Held : the question was one of fact for the county ct. judge. There was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed. JACKSON v. FROST (1930), 23 B. 2768c. .]—A quarryman, aged thirty-seven & in good health, was working a pneumatic drill on a ledge when the drill jumped causing him to fall six feet off the ledge & then to roll down a slope of twenty feet to the bottom of the quarry. Although bruised on the legs he resumed work, but the foreman gave him a lighter job for the rest of the day. After work he bicycled 2½ miles home & slept well, but it was noticed that he was not his usual self. On his return to work the next morning the foreman took care not to put him to work on too high a spot. After a while he was missed & was found dead in a shallow stream eighty yards from his work to which he had probably gone to relieve nature. The medical witnesses agreed that he had not drowned but had died from shock. The county ct. judge held that there was no break in the chain of causation between the accident & death, & that falling into the stream did not amount to a novus actus interveniens. He therefore made his award in favour of the widow of the deceased workman. the medical assessor that the condition of the teeth had perpetuated the injury. He had received medical attention throughout the two years. On a claim made by the widow for compensation, the county ct. judge found that the workman was not insane when he committed suicide, & that death did not result from the injury, & made an award in favour of the employers. 2836b. ——.]—A baker suffered from dermatitis, which was pronounced incurable. He became depressed &, it was said, had delusions, one of which was that, by receiving weekly compensation, he was robbing his employers. Six months after being certified as suffering from dermatitis, he committed suicide. On a claim for compensation by his widow, as dependant, the county ct. judge made an award in favour of the employers on the ground that death was not due to causes directly attributable to the accident:—Held: the award of the county ct. judge amounted to a finding of fact that there was no insanity. 2836c. ——.]—A miner was certified in Jan. 1926, as suffering from miner's nystagmus. He had been a cheerful man before the onset of the disease, but gradually became depressed & ultimately showed signs of marked nervous & mental derangement. He walked unsteadily & failed to recognise his friends. On the evening of Oct. 12, 1928, he attended on the certifying surgeon & was afterwards put on a tram, his home being not far from the tram terminus. A friend found him at a spot about 400 yards from the tram terminus & about 400 yards from his home, crawling on his hands & knees. The friend led him to a fence which led to his house. His body was subsequently found in a canal 2½ miles from where his friend had left him. The widow claimed compensation on the grounds that her husband committed suicide, that he committed suicide while he was insane, & that the insanity was a direct effect of the nystagmus. The county ct. judge made an award in her favour, in which he said, "I do not say he was insane, but that the suicide was due to mental derangement." The employers appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection.—DIXON v. SUTTON HEATH & LEA GREEN COLLIERY, LTD. (NO. 2) (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 135, C. A.

On Feb. 21, 1931, he was found dead, having committed suicide by cutting his throat. His dependants made a claim for compensation. The county ct. judge, who sat with a medical assessor, found that the depression was due to the nystagmus & that the suicide was due to the depression, but held that there was no evidence of insanity which would entitle him to attribute the suicide to the accident. He therefore made his award in favour of the employer. 2849a. —— —— Error in entry—Verbal notice correctly given.]—The workman, a miner, met with an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment with applts. He went into his employers' ambulance room & received treatment. An entry was made in the accident book describing his injury as an injury to the left knee. The injury was in fact to the right knee, & the workman subsequently developed tubercular trouble in his right knee. In answer to a claim for compensation, the employers relied on the entry in the accident book & said that they had had no notice of the injury to the right knee, in accordance with Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 14. The county ct. judge found on the evidence that the workman's right knee was in fact injured by the accident & that the entry in the accident book was an error. He also held that the entry in the accident book referred to the accident & that notice of the accident was given orally by the workman in the ambulance room, & that that notice complied with sect. 14 (2); that the incorrect entry was no bar to the claim for compensation, & that the employers were not prejudiced, & he made an award in favour of the workman :—Held : the employers were not prejudiced by the incorrect entry in the accident book, as notice of the accident had been properly given to them in compliance with sect. 14. Therefore the award of the county ct. judge must be affirmed.—Crouch v. Appleby Iron Co., Ltd. (1930), 143 L. T. 264; 23 B. W. C. C. 69, C. A.

2849b. Contents—All injuries need not be specified.]—The mere fact that notice has to be given does not imply that all injuries must be specified.

A workman gave notice of an accident, in which he complained of injury to his ribs, & his employers paid him compensation. He returned to work after two months. He then began to suffer with his hip, & eventually had to cease work on that account. His employers resisted a second claim for compensation, on the ground that no injury to the hip was specified in the notice of the accident. The county ct. judge found that the injury to the hip was due to the original accident, that the employers had not been prejudiced by any failure to mention the hip in the notice of accident, as they had paid compensation to the workman after an examination by their own doctor :—Held : there was evidence to support the findings, & no misdirection.—Wiles v. Ellerman's Wilson Line (1928), 21 B. He continued at work for about a month, when his thumb became swollen & he had to go to the infirmary, where a week later he died of blood-poisoning. Notice of the accident was not given to the employers until a month after the workman's death. The county ct. judge found that notice of the accident had not been given as soon as practicable, & that the employers were prejudiced by the want of notice :—Held : it was a question of fact, as to which there was evidence to support the finding.—Evans v. Simpson (James) & Son (1926), 19 B. 2900a. —— Opportunity to examine workman lost.]—On Nov. 29, 1929, applt. suffered some hurt to his right arm while in the employment of resps., but with assistance worked till the end of the shift. He went home & lay on a sofa, which he was unable to leave until he was removed to hospital on Dec. 9, 1929. He remained in hospital until May, 1930, where he was operated on nine times & became totally incapacitated. On July 31, 1930, he filed a request for arbn. proceedings claiming compensation under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925. The stepfather & mother of applt. said that whilst he lay on the sofa he was not in complete possession of his mental faculties, but the panel doctor gave evidence that his mentality was not affected until the third or fourth day & his temperature was normal. The question was raised whether before the accident the applt. suffered from osteo-myelitis or whether the osteo-myelitis had developed after the injury at the seat of the injury. No notice of the injury was given to the resps. until Mar. 1930: —Held: (1) the only conclusion on the evidence was that resps. were prejudiced in their defence by the delay in giving notice of the injury, as they were deprived of the opportunity of obtaining medical evidence as to applt.'s condition during the first three days of his illness upon the issue whether there had been pre-accident osteo-myelitis, & it was irrelevant to consider whether the employers would have been likely to take advantage of the opportunity or not; (2) the failure to give notice earlier was not occasioned by reasonable cause. Applt., therefore, having failed to give notice of the accident as soon as practicable after the happening thereof within sect. 14 (1) of the Act, was not excused from such failure on either of those two grounds, within the meaning of clause (a) of the proviso to that sub-section.—WHITE v. LEICESTERSHIRE COLLIERY & PIPE CO. 2912a. —— & failure to hear counsel.]—An agreement made between an injured workman & employers was embodied in an award given by a county ct. judge in 1929. By this agreement the employers agreed to pay a certain sum weekly to the workman on the basis of partial incapacity. In 1930 the employers applied for a review of the weekly payments before another county ct. judge, who sat with a medical assessor. At this hearing the judge at an early stage in the case expressed the view that the material question for him to decide was the present condition of the workman, & that he was not concerned with the condition in 1929. Counsel for the workman took no objection to this expression of opinion, & did not attempt to tender evidence as to the workman's previous condition. The judge then suggested that the workman should be examined by the medical assessor, which was done, neither counsel offering any objection. On receiving the report of the assessor the judge immediately proceeded to make an award ending the compensation on the ground that the workman had entirely recovered, without first calling on counsel to address him. No objection was taken by counsel for the workman, nor did he ask for an opportunity to address the ct. The workman appealed on the grounds (a) that the judge had refused to hear evidence as to the workman's condition in 1929, & (b) that he had given no opportunity for counsel to address him on behalf of the workman before making his award:—Held: counsel for the workman, having by his silence allowed the judge to think that he acquiesced in the manner in which the trial was being conducted, could not now raise objections which could, & should, have been raised in the ct. below.—NAVY, ARMY & AIR FORCE INSTITUTES v. LINDSEY (1930), 23 B. 2941a. —— ——.]—In Jan. 1925, a miner was struck in his right eye by a piece of coal. He never went off work, but from the first suffered pain in the eye which increased. A year after the accident a white patch appeared on the eye. In Apr. 1928, he was run over by an omnibus & prevented by that accident from working. He then began to go blind in the right eye. In Sept. 1928, he first gave notice to his employers of the accident to his eye in 1925, & subsequently claimed compensation. At the hearing medical evidence was given to the effect that the condition of the eye was consistent with the blow it received in 1925. The county ct. judge said in his award, that he was satisfied that the blindness was caused by the blow received in 1925, but that the workman never thought that the injury was in any way serious. He therefore held that, in those circumstances, there was reasonable cause for giving no notice of the accident until Sept. 1928. The employers appealed: —Held: there was misdirection; on the evidence the injury was serious to the man's knowledge from the first, & the workman had shown no reasonable cause for failing to give notice of the accident at the time it occurred.—SHARROD v. WARWICKSHIRE COAL CO., LTD. 2948a. ——.]—A quarryman, while lifting a granite block on Nov. 13, 1930, cracked one of his fingers which bled. He did not visit his employer's doctor who was stationed at the quarry to attend to injuries, but tied up the finger & continued at work. He worked on Nov. 14 although in pain. On Nov. 15, a Saturday, he stayed at home & put a poultice on it. On Monday, Nov. 17, the finger was so swollen that he sent for his panel doctor who diagnosed septic poisoning & treated him accordingly. It was not disputed that the treatment prescribed by the panel doctor from Nov. 17 onwards was correct. The doctor asked the workman on Nov. 17 whether he had reported the accident & the workman replied that he had not. Notice of the accident did not reach the employer until Dec. 1 through the workman's friendly society. The employer contended that notice of the accident had not been given in accordance with the requirements of the Act, but the county ct. judge found as facts that Nov. 17 was the first practicable date on which notice could have been given as that was the first date on which the workman knew his finger was septic & did not until then realise he had received an injury for which he would be entitled to claim compensation. He further found that the employer was not prejudiced by want of notice after that date. He accordingly made his award in favour of the workman. She refused, on the ground that he would be a necessary witness on her behalf in any arbn. proceedings. The employers applied for suspension of weekly payments until the examination had taken place. The county ct. judge granted the application, on the ground that the reason given for the refusal was itself unreasonable :—Held : to find that the refusal was unreasonable merely because the workman objected to being examined, at the instance of the employer, by a consultant at the hospital at which she had been treated, was not sufficient. She refused on the ground that he would be a necessary witness on her behalf in any arbn. proceedings. On an appln. by the employers under sect. 18 to suspend the weekly payments, the county ct. judge held that her refusal was unreasonable & granted the appln. 3025a. ——.]—A workman, who had been employed by the same employers for thirty-nine years, received a jerk while helping to pull a barrow through loose sand on Jan. 5, 1926. He felt pain & reported that he thought he had ruptured himself, but he continued at work until June 17, 1927, when he became very ill after attempting to lift a heavy article & went to bed. On the following day he was found to have a hernia. He made a claim for compensation on Aug. 3, 1927, giving the date of the accident as Jan. 5, 1926. The employers contended that no claim had been made within six months of the alleged accident. The county ct. judge held that there was reasonable cause for failing to make a claim within six months, because the workman believed that the pain was temporary, & that he would soon recover. The employers appealed :—Held : there was misdirection, & the workman had shown no reasonable cause for failing to make a claim within six months.—

3021 iv. ——.]—In Apr. 1924, a colliery drawer injured his back in assisting to replace a derailed hutch. With the exception of a fortnight in Sept. 1927, when he was off work for medical treatment, he continued at his usual occupation, earning full wages, until Mar. 1928, when he left his employment to undergo treatment for trouble arising from the injury. In Oct. 1928, while still incapacitated, he made a claim for compensation. In addition to the above facts it was established that the workman was suffering from muscular rheumatism & sciatica, & that these troubles arose from the injury in Apr. 1924; that ever since the date of the accident the workman had associated his trouble with the accident; but that he had not intended to claim compensation so long as he was able to earn full wages. It was also established that, immediately after the accident, the workman had notified the fireman of the injury, but that the latter, considering the injury trivial, had not reported it to his superiors, & that prior to Oct. 1928, the employers had no knowledge, either actual or imputed, of any intended claim :—Held : although the workman was throughout aware of his injury, the fact that he was able to earn full wages in his ordinary employment for four years after the accident showed that he was not unreasonable in assuming that the injury was not such as would cause him to become incapacitated; &, accordingly, that his delay in claiming compensation was due to a "reasonable cause."—FORDYCE v. SHOTT'S IRON CO., LTD., [1929] S. 3025b. ——.]—A workman, on Jan. 6, 1927, trod on a piece of pipe, causing him to fall on his right arm. He made no claim until Aug. 1929. At the hearing he said : " I felt sick, but could not find the first-aid man. Fourteen days after I went to a doctor. I carried on with my work ; it was difficult & painful. . . . At the time I realised there was an accident. I thought a good deal of the injury, but I thought it would work off. I made no claim because I thought it would work off & there would be no necessity to make a claim. That was why I made no claim. I was able to earn my money." He continued working until Nov. 1928, when he went off work on account of bursitis until Apr. 1929. After Apr. he worked for two months, & then, owing to slackness of trade, was discharged. In Nov. 1929, a medical man reported that from Nov. 1928, to Apr. 1929, his incapacity was due to the bursitis, & in all probability the bursitis dated from the fall in Jan. 1927. The county ct. judge decided that on those facts he was bound to hold that the workman had shown no reasonable cause for not making the claim within six months of Jan. 6, 1927 :—Held : there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—HALSEY v. ERITH OIL WORKS (1930), 23 B. He gave notice to his employer of the accident on Feb. 23, but neither he nor his employer considered the injury serious as he had frequently got chips in his eye without serious results. Though the eye gave trouble he was able to continue his work until May when he was discharged owing to slackness of work. He had been advised to go to an eye hospital in Apr., but he alleged that it was not until Aug. 20, 1931, that he realised that the condition of his eye was serious. He made a claim for compensation on Aug. 29. The employer denied liability on the ground that the claim had not been made within six months. At the arbn. the workman in cross-examination said, " At the end of June I knew the sight had gone." The county ct. judge stated that the workman was entirely honest in giving his evidence, although it contained flagrant inconsistencies, & he was convinced that the man did not realise his condition was serious until Aug. 20, 1931. He therefore found that there was reasonable cause for failure to make the claim within six months as throughout that period the injury had honestly been treated as a trivial one. 3031a. ——.]—On Apr. 16, 1926, a workman fell & injured his knee. He was paid full wages, although incapacitated, until Sept. 3, when he was summarily dismissed from employment for misconduct. In the hope of being reinstated, he threatened to bring an action for wrongful dismissal, but made no claim under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), until two days after the statutory six months had expired. The county ct. judge found that the workman never intended to claim within the necessary period of six months, & there was no reasonable cause for the delay, & he refused to award compensation :—Held : the evidence supported the findings, & there was no misdirection.

When the workman knows that the injury he suffers from was occasioned by an accident giving him a right to compensation, & fails to make a claim within six months, if that failure was prompted by his own interests, & was not induced by any action of the employer which would lead him to believe he could get compensation without making a claim, he shows no reasonable cause (SCRUTTON, L.J.).—DREWITT v. BRITANNIC ASSURANCE CO., LTD. 3033b. Expectation of compensation without necessity of making claim.]—In Apr. 1925, a chef severed the ligaments of his right hand in handling a dish which broke, but he continued his work at his full wages. His employers knew of the accident, but were not aware the chef could not do his full work. In July, 1926, he was dismissed, & in that month made a claim for compensation. The county ct. judge found that the workman did not refrain from making a claim because he formed the view that he would receive compensation should incapacity supervene in the future without the necessity of making a claim, & that the employers did nothing to encourage such a view, & there was no reasonable cause for not making the claim within six months of the accident :—Held : there was evidence to support the findings, & no misdirection.

There would be reasonable cause for not making a claim within six months, if the workman could prove that there was a tacit understanding that the employers knew all about the possibility of a claim & were prepared to give him compensation, even though his claim might fall outside the six months (LORD HANWORTH, M.R.).—SOYER v. JOHNSON, MATTHEY & CO. 3038b. Omission of date of disablement in medical certificate.]—A miner suffered from nystagmus in 1914 & again in 1919, but after each attack resumed his work underground. He again had to cease work owing to the same disease on Dec. 28, 1930. The employer & his insurers both knew by Feb. 5, 1931, that a claim was being contemplated by the workman for compensation as from this date. On Feb. 6 the workman obtained a certificate from a certifying surgeon, but it did not give any date for the commencement of the disablement. The workman filed an application for arbn. based on this certificate, but claiming compensation as from Dec. 28, 1930, for a recurrence of the attack in 1919, but when the arbn. came on in Apr. these proceedings were abandoned. The workman then obtained a fresh certificate in Aug. 1931, which gave the commencement of the disablement as Dec. 28, 1930. From this the employers appealed to the medical referee, who gave a certificate in accordance with that of the certifying surgeon, but stating that the workman was fit for surface work. Proceedings on the basis of these certificates were commenced on Oct. 19, 1931. At the arbn. the employers contended that the claim was out of time as it had not been made within six months from Dec. 28, 1930, & there was no reasonable cause for the delay. The county ct. judge made his award in favour of the workman, & ordered that the partial incapacity should be treated as total under the 1931 Act. The employers appealed :—Held : (1) on the evidence the workman had always intended to claim as from Dec. 28, 1930, to the knowledge of all parties. In view of this & that the certifying surgeon had omitted to fill in the date of disablement in the Feb. certificate, there was reasonable cause for the delay in making the claim ; (2) though the medical referee had certified only partial incapacity, the judge was at liberty on the evidence to make his award on the basis of total incapacity under sect. 9 (4) as amended by 1931 Act. The employers ceased making the weekly payments, & the workman appealed to the county ct. judge as to the effect of the certificate. The judge, sitting with the same medical referee as assessor, who explained his certificate as being one of complete recovery, held the man was fit for work on the date when compensation ceased, but awarded compensation from the date of cessation of the weekly payment to the date of his award :—Held : (1) compensation was not payable after incapacity had ceased ; (2) the certificate of the medical referee was sufficient & conclusive.—PULLEN v. ENTHOVEN & SON (1927), 20 B. A counter-notice having been served, the issue was referred by the registrar to the medical referee, who certified that the workman was totally incapacitated, but that such incapacity was due to other causes than nystagmus. On an application by the workman for an arbitration in Jan. 1929, evidence was tendered that nystagmus had once more become active, but the employers raised the preliminary objection that the medical referee's certificate was conclusive against the workman, & destroyed the effect of the certifying surgeon's certificate of Dec. 1925. The county ct. judge upheld the objection & made an order dismissing the application for arbitration. The workman appealed:—Held: the certificate of a medical referee being only conclusive as to the matters therein certified, & miner's nystagmus being a recurrent disease, the certificate was not of itself a bar to the claim of the workman for compensation, & it was for the county ct. judge to decide whether there had been in fact any 3076a. —— ——.]—A stevedore earning 65*s.* a week injured his knee on Mar. 14, 1928, & remained totally incapacitated until Mar. 16, 1929. He was then given light work, but left it on Aug. 1, 1929, stating that he was once more totally incapacitated. Correspondence followed between the representatives of the workman & the representatives of the employer ; in the course of this correspondence the latter repudiated the suggestion that the workman was totally incapacitated but eventually agreed to pay certain sums to the workman as compensation, partly in the form of a lump sum for arrears & partly in the form of weekly payments for the future. In accordance with this agreement the workman on Jan. 21, 1930, signed a receipt agreeing to accept the sum, " being weekly compensation at the rate of £1 a week from Aug. 1, 1929, to Jan. 23, 1930." The wording of the receipt continued : " This weekly payment is to be continued during my partial disablement resulting from the accident in accordance with the provisions of the (Workmen's Compensation) Act, the amount of any payment due during decreased partial disablement to be settled hereafter." Weekly payments of £1 were paid to the workman under this agreement. On Nov. 5, 1930, the workman filed an original request for arbn. asking for compensation on the basis of total incapacity at 30*s.* a week from Aug. 1, 1929, and claiming the difference. The county ct. judge found that a binding agreement had been made between the parties as to the amount payable for partial incapacity, but on a finding that the workman was in fact totally incapacitated, he held that, though there had been no change in the workman's physical condition since Aug. 1, 1929, he could make an award for 30*s.* a week on the basis of total incapacity from that date, as the agreement did not purport to deal with anything but partial incapacity. On appeal by the employer the Ct. of Appeal held that the agreement dealt with the question of the extent of the incapacity as well as with the rate of compensation, & the judge could not disregard the agreement that the man was in fact only partially incapacitated, which was binding. They allowed the appeal & set the award aside with costs. The workman appealed to the House of Lords :—Held : the agreement precluded the workman from claiming compensation on the basis of total incapacity between Aug. 1, 1929, & Jan. 23, 1930, but it did not preclude him from applying for a review of the weekly payments paid under the agreement for any period subsequent to Jan. 23, 1930, on proof of " change of circumstances or knowledge " justifying such a review. The proceedings brought by the workman in the county ct. were misconceived & should have been by way of review & not by way of original arbn. Appeal dismissed with costs to applt. 3098a. ——.]—An infant workman lost his left arm below the elbow as a result of an accident. The employers admitted liability, & paid full compensation. On Nov. 5, 1926, the workman signed a receipt for payments in the form of an agreement, by which he agreed that the payments were to be continued only so long as he was totally disabled, but that the amount of payment in respect of any subsequent partial incapacity should be settled if & when the question arose. In Jan. 1927, he applied for registration of an agreement in the terms of Form 24, that the weekly payments should continue during partial or total incapacity or until the same should be ended or diminished in accordance with 1925 Act. The employers objected to that agreement being recorded, on the ground that the terms of the real agreement of Nov. 5, 1926, were not therein correctly stated, & thereupon the workman filed a request for arbn. on Feb. 23, 1927. The boy obtained work as a messenger boy on Feb. 11, 1927.

The county ct. judge ordered the document of Nov. 5 to be recorded as the agreement between the parties, & dismissed the request for arbn.:—Held: a totally incapacitated workman in receipt of full compensation under an admission of liability was entitled, either to a recorded memorandum of agreement stating his rights in the terms of Form 24, or, if the employers objected to that, he was entitled, on the question so raised, to apply in arbn. proceedings for the judge to grant an award in such terms; the document of Nov. 5 did not give the workman his full rights as expressed in Form 24, & was not binding on the workman, being an infant, & when the employers objected to the recording of a memorandum in the terms of Form 24 a question was raised fit for arbn., & an award should have been made having regard to the terms of Form 24, & there was no power on the proceedings to order a memorandum of agreement to be recorded, & the case must be remitted for the proper award to be made to suit the circumstances of the workman having actually returned to work.—PARKER v. LONDON BRICK CO. & FORDERS, LTD. 3140a. —— ——.]—An infant workman lost a little finger while handling a machine. He was paid varying amounts of compensation for some months, & when this was stopped asked for an award. The county ct. judge allowed the employers to give evidence as to the scope of the workman's employment, & found as a fact that he was not employed to touch or handle any machinery:—Held: the employers were not estopped by previous payments of compensation from putting the true facts of the workman's employment before the judge, & his finding thereon was purely a question of fact.—NOMERACSKY v. CANTERBURY DRESSING WORKS (1928), 21 B. 3145a. -.]—A workman was certified as suffering from dermatitis, & applied for arbn. At the hearing in the county ct. it was agreed between the parties that the dermatitis had come to an end, & the county ct. judge made an award for a lump sum in respect of past liability. A fortnight after the making of this award the workman obtained a fresh certificate which certified that he was again disabled by dermatitis, the fresh disablement being certified as commencing on a date subsequent to the making of the award. The workman applied for a new trial on the ground that the parties were under a mutual mistake of fact when they agreed that the dermatitis had come to an end. The county ct. judge granted the application. The employer appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge had power to grant a new trial by virtue of rule 29 of Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926, & sect. 93 of County Cts. Act, 1888 (c. 43), & the order made was within his discretion. Appeal dismissed. Leave to both parties to raise at new trial all questions arising on both certificates.—NASH v. NANI (1932), 25 B. Upon an application for compensation by a mine-worker, whom the medical authority had certified to be suffering from pneumaconiosis & tuberculosis to the degree mentioned in the schedule, the joint committee, refused to make an award upon the ground, amongst others, that the mine-worker had received compensation in respect of his disablement through lead poisoning under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1916:—Held: the receipt of compensation by a mine-worker under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1916, was a matter outside the ambit of the jurisdiction of the joint committee, &, the action of the joint committee in taking into consideration extraneous matters which were outside its jurisdiction, amounted in law to a failure to hear & determine the application, & a writ of mandamus should issue.—Re ATKINSON, Ex p. ROWE (1928), 28 S. The employers applied for the termination or diminution of the weekly payments on the ground that the incapacity due to the injury had ceased. The county ct. judge sat with a medical assessor. In his award the county ct. judge said : " The medical assessor took the view, which was upheld by the ct., that, although there might still be disability due to resp.'s flat feet, this disability was not due to the accident, any disability due to that having come to an end." The workman appealed on the ground that the decision was that of the assessor & not the judge :—Held : the county ct. judge had rightly taken the burden of the decision on himself & had not left it to the medical assessor. The employers then discontinued the weekly payment after serving a notice under 1925 Act, s. 12. The workman's application for resumption of the compensation was resisted on the ground that the incapacity, if any, was due, not to the accident, but to ulceration due to syphilis. The county ct. judge sat with an assessor to whom, after hearing the medical evidence, he addressed three questions which were stated to counsel & were not objected to. On receiving the answers of the assessor the county ct. judge made his award in favour of the workman. The employers then applied for a review on the ground that he had partially recovered. At the hearing the workman was not called, but the county ct. judge examined his arm. The only evidence given was that of two doctors, one called by each side, who agreed that the workman was suffering from a 40 per cent. incapacity. The judge made an award diminishing the compensation payable, in which he said that he was unable to find on the evidence that the workman was either an " odd lot " or came within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 9 (4). The workman appealed on the ground that no sufficient evidence had been given that he had regained sufficient capacity to work to take him out of the category of " odd lot," & that, therefore, the onus was upon the employers of proving that there was in fact work available at which the man could earn wages which onus had not been discharged :—Held : taking into consideration the judge's power to use his own knowledge of the local labour conditions, there was evidence to support the finding & no misdirection.—GLADSTONE SPINNING CO. v. NANGLE (1928), 98 L. At the hearing the panel doctor who had granted the certificate gave evidence to the effect that the workman's right eye had lost 50 per cent. of its visual power. Compensation was paid, but was determined upon the certificate of the employer's doctor that the workman was no longer incapacitated. In proceedings instituted by the workman medical evidence was given on his behalf that his grip was weakened, that the muscles were still tender, & that he was still partially incapacitated. The doctor called on behalf of the employers agreed that the grip was weak, but stated that the workman was capable of doing some work which would be beneficial. The county ct. judge found that the workman had fully recovered, & made a declaration of liability only:—Held: there was no evidence to support the finding, & the case must be remitted for compensation to be assessed.—BUCK v. DENNING (1926), 19 B. 3228 iii. ——.]—A workman was awarded compensation in respect of total incapacity in Feb. 1925. On May 13, 1926, he became fit for light work. He made efforts to obtain such work, but, owing to abnormal economic conditions, he was unable to do so. If he had obtained light work the effects of his injury would have worn off, & he would have recovered full capacity by Sept. 13, 1926. Owing, however, to his failure to obtain light work he was still partially incapacitated at the latter date. Apart from this failure to obtain work, his condition was not due to any failure on his part to take reasonable measures to promote the recovery of capacity. The arbitrator having suspended payment of compensation as from Sept. 13, 1926:—Held: the continuance of incapacity, not being due to any unreasonable conduct on the workman's part or to the intervention of any new cause apart from economic circumstances, was still attributable to the original accident; &, accordingly, that the arbitrator was not entitled to suspend payment of compensation.—KENNEDY v. SHOTTS IRON Co., [1929] S. As a result, in May, 1912, the middle finger of that hand was amputated & he returned to work on the surface as a trimmer. His earnings as a trimmer exceeded his pre-accident earnings, & his compensation was therefore reduced to a penny a week. In Jan. 1929, the pit was closed down. The workman was unable to obtain work & applied for compensation. The employers contended that the workman was fully able to work, & that his inability to obtain work was due to labour conditions. The county ct. judge made an award for 2*s.* 2*d.* a week. The employers appealed:—Held: there was evidence of partial incapacity & no misdirection.—WOODCOCK v. TYDESLEY COAL Co. (1929), 22 B. W. After a period of total incapacity he resumed his work as a wheelwright, but was unable to drive a van, & he was ultimately discharged for business reasons. In respect of his injury he obtained an award of compensation, first, for partial incapacity, &, afterwards, on his application for a review in consequence of his inability to get work owing to his obvious disfigurement, for total incapacity. After he had become nearly blind owing to cataract in his right eye, the employers' insurance co. offered him employment as a cleaner in their office at a wage which was double the market rate of wages for that work, but the workman refused this offer by reason of his infirmity. Upon an application by the employers for a review terminating or reducing the compensation, the county ct. judge found that the offer of the insurance co. was a genuine offer & reduced the compensation to half the difference between the workman's pre-accident wages & the wages offered him by the insurance co.:—Held: there was no evidence on which the county ct. judge could properly find that the workman's proved inability to earn wages by reason of the loss of his left eye had ceased to exist, inasmuch as the offer of the insurance co., in the circumstances in which it was made, had no evidential value as a test of the man's earning capacity in the open market.—BIRCH BROS., LTD. v. BROWN, [1931] A. 3235a. —— ——.]—The amount of the average weekly earnings of a workman before accident was 50*s.* After the accident he returned to lighter work, but was paid at exactly the same rate as before the accident. He, however, only earned an average weekly amount of 37*s.* 8*d.*, owing to slackness of trade. He brought a claim for compensation at the rate of 6*s.* 2*d.* a week, being one-half the difference between his pre-accident & post-accident earnings. The county ct. judge made a declaration of liability only on the ground that he found no loss of earning capacity due to the accident since the return to work. The workman appealed:—Held: the loss of earnings after the accident being entirely due to labour conditions & not to the fact that the workman was injured, the decision of the county ct. judge was right.—LYON v. TAYLOR BROS. 3235 i. Whether incapacity within the Acts—Slackness of work.]—A workman, employed as a drawer in a mine, who had been injured, was paid compensation first as for total, & later as for partial, incapacity. He then obtained work with the same employers as a pump engineman at wages higher than he had earned as a drawer, & compensation was suspended by agreement. The pit in which he was employed as a pump engineman having been closed, the workman was thrown out of employment. He was unfit, owing to his injury, for his former work as a drawer, but he was fit for various jobs, including that of pump engineman, at which he could earn his former wage. He was unable to find work owing to the state of the coal mining industry & not owing to his injury. The arbitrator having ended compensation in the meantime as at the date when the workman obtained work as a pump engineman:—Held: as the workman was fit for work at which he could earn as high wages as he had earned as a drawer, he was not entitled to compensation.—INVERARITY v. EDINBURGH COLLIERIES, LTD., [1929] S. 3243b. -.]—A coal miner, who had worked for many years underground, became, by reason of an attack of nystagmus, only able to do surface work at a lower wage. This work was unavailable, owing to the state of the labour market, though the workman, but for the nystagmus, would probably have been able to obtain employment underground :—Held : the effect of Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 43), s. 16, which was re-enacted as Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 9 (4), was necessarily to exclude the idea that the words "able to earn" in Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (c. 58), Sched. I., applied to any circumstances not personal to the workman himself. It dealt expressly with the case of the man who could not find work, & it set the criterion whether the failure to find work was due wholly or mainly to the accident, but failure to find work due solely to the state of the labour market was expressly excluded by the sect., & it was impossible to say that Cardiff Corpn. v. Hall, No. 3284, post, when applied to a case after the passing of 1923 Act, was wrong.—BEVAN v. NIXON'S NAVIGATION CO., LTD., [1929] A. 3243c. ——.]—Applt., who was totally incapacitated by an injury by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment by resps. whilst working as a fitter in the erecting department of their works, on becoming fit for light work, was employed by resps. in the gauge department of their works. A claim by him for compensation in respect of the difference between his pre-accident earnings & his present earnings was opposed by resps. on the ground that the full week's work in that department was five & a half days, but that owing to trade conditions the department was only working five days, & that, if applt. had worked a full week, as he was physically capable of doing, his earnings would have exceeded his pre-accident earnings. The arbitrator awarded compensation :—Held : on the facts, resps. had failed to prove that a normal week's work in the gauge department was more than five days & that the award was rightly made.

The question whether, where a partially disabled workman is actually earning wages, the compensation to which he is entitled is to be assessed by reference to the normal earnings under normal market conditions in that employment or by reference to his actual earnings in the conditions prevailing at the time was left open by the House.

Semble : it does not necessarily follow from Bevan v. Nixon's Navigation Co., No. 3243b, where a man is actually earning wages in a suitable employment & the wages which he is receiving are the wages usually paid at the time in that employment, that the arbitrator is bound to assess his compensation on the basis of what he would have been earning if the conditions of employment in that occupation had been more prosperous.—WHITE v. LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RY. He returned to work for a short period, but did not do overtime, & threw up the work on the ground that it was unsuitable. He was nervous of losing the sight of the other eye. The employers called medical evidence that he was fully able to do his work. The county ct. judge made an award in favour of the workman on the basis of partial incapacity. 3269a. —— ——.]—A collier suffered a succession of accidents, but was given work with partial compensation until, in 1921, he left the colliery & became a club steward at higher wages. In 1922 he was granted a declaration of liability against the colliery co. In 1928 he was dismissed from his position of club steward & failed at three clubs where there were vacancies to obtain the position of a club steward. He claimed that he was unfit to work as a collier at the coal face, & his old employers refused to employ him otherwise. He therefore made a claim for compensation against his old employers in the form of a review of the declaration of liability. The county ct. judge made an award in his favour of 7*s.* 6*d.* a week on the grounds that, although he could do surface work, he was unable to work at the coal face, & that the job of a club steward was not a well-known branch of the labour market, & should therefore be disregarded:—Held: there was no evidence on which the county ct. judge could find that the work of a club steward was exceptional; it was a well-known class of employment in which the man was capable of working. The case must be remitted for a rehearing, taking this fact into consideration.—STATHAM v. OXCROFT COLLIERY CO., LTD. (No. 2) (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 330, C. A.

3269b. —— After retirement.]—A workman lost the use of an eye by accident & wore a shade over it in consequence. Liability being admitted he received full compensation until he was able to do his ordinary work again. An agreement was recorded whereby the employers undertook to provide the workman with employment, & admitted their liability to pay compensation "as & when their liability shall arise." The workman continued doing his work without compensation until having reached the age of sixty-six he was compulsorily retired under his employers' superannuation scheme, but at the same time became entitled thereunder to a pension of 10*s.* per week. After his retirement the workman filed a request for arbitration, claiming to be entitled to be paid full compensation as from the date of his retirement. He gave evidence that he had tried to obtain work since his retirement but had failed. The county ct. judge held that although the workman was physically capable of performing his old work with his old employers, his age & the loss of the eye prevented him getting fresh work in the labour market. He made an award in his favour of 10*s.* a week. He found the workman's average weekly earnings before the accident to be £3 5*s.* & his post-accident earnings £2 2*s.* The first figure included payment for overtime & the second did not. Furthermore there had been a fall in the rate of wages since the accident. The employers appealed on the grounds that the workman was not incapacitated, & that, if he was, compensation had been calculated on the wrong basis, because the judge had not taken into consideration the question of overtime & fall in the rate of wages:—Held: there was evidence on which the county ct. judge could find that the workman was partially incapacitated, but, in arriving at the amount of compensation payable he had not taken into account the high rate of pre-accident wages & overtime. Also the question of pension must be considered.—STEVENS v. BIRMINGHAM CORPN. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 311, C. A.

3274a. -.]—A workman, whose left eye was defective, suffered, in 1919, an injury to his right eye while working as a miner, for which compensation was received until the beginning of 1924, when he was given work underground. This was found to be unsuitable, & he was given surface work on the screens, & was paid compensation for partial incapacity. He left this work at the commencement of the stoppage due to a dispute in the coal trade in 1926, but was not re-employed at the conclusion of the stoppage, in Dec. 1926. In Feb. 1927, the workman applied to have his compensation increased, on the ground that the work on which he had been employed was a special kind of surface work found for him by his employers. The county ct. judge held resps. were not liable to pay compensation as claimed on the grounds set out in their particulars. The particulars referred to in resps.' answer contained the allegation that the workman was not incapacitated from doing ordinary surface work:—Held: the award must be taken to mean that the judge had found as a fact that the workman was capable of doing ordinary surface work, & there was evidence to support such a finding.—CUSHION v. TREDEGAR IRON & COAL CO., LTD. 3275a. -.]—A miner, in 1916, lost his right eye by accident, & received compensation. He subsequently returned to work at the face, but in June, 1924, had another accident through which his left eye was injured, & he was paid compensation. In Mar. 1925, he returned to light work, receiving also a weekly sum by way of compensation. On July 1, 1925, the employers applied for a review & termination of the weekly payments. The workman stated in evidence that he was afraid to work below ground again, & the county ct. judge held work at the coal face was not suitable, & the man's refusal to do it was reasonable:—Held: the case must go back for the judge to decide whether the unsuitability of the work resulted from the first accident or the second, or both, & to assess the compensation payable only in regard to incapacity from the second accident.—ASTON COAL CO., LTD. v. STANCIL (1926), 20 B. 3283a. Accident to infant—Inability to do work of employer on becoming adult.]—An infant employed by a railway co. lost his left foot in an accident while at work. He was fitted with an artificial foot & given suitable employment until he came of age. His employers, being then unable to find him work in an adult grade, dismissed him. The workman claimed compensation as a totally incapacitated adult worker, but the employers refused to pay except on the basis of partial incapacity. The county ct. judge held that the workman was not entitled to be treated as totally incapacitated either as an "odd lot" or under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 9 (4). 3288d. —— —— ——.]—A carpenter was seriously injured by an accident for which his employer admitted liability & paid him full compensation. He was subsequently given light work, sitting on a bench making boxes, the materials being brought to him. It was work which had to be done in the normal course of the employer's business, & was done satisfactorily. On an application for compensation he was awarded 4*s.* a week, & received this in addition to the wages paid to him for the light work. After a year & a half he had to be discharged owing to trade depression. After his discharge he applied for & received unemployment benefit & was still receiving it at the date of the hearing of an application by him for the review of his weekly payment of 4*s.* by an increase to 30*s.* At the arbn. the medical evidence was to the effect that the workman was in the same condition as when he was awarded 4*s.* a week, but he claimed an increase to 30*s.* a week on the ground of total incapacity. The county ct. judge found that the workman was as capable of doing work as when the award for 4*s.* a week was made, but that owing to trade conditions he had lost his employment & had since drawn, & was still drawing, unemployment pay on the ground that he could do the work if he could get it. He found he was not an "odd lot," & further held that the 1931 Act had rendered it impossible for the workman to obtain an increase, & made his award for the employer. The workman appealed : —Held : the award was unsatisfactory as it might be read as meaning that the receipt of unemployment benefit by the workman before the date of the hearing had disentitled him from claiming full compensation, contrary to the decision in Goodman v. Ruston & Hornsby, Ltd., No. 3288c, ante.—ROBINSON v. ENGLISH STEEL CORPN., LTD. 3289a. Unable to find former employment.]—A miner who had lost the sight of his right eye in an accident recovered sufficiently to be fit to resume his old work. Although he had taken all reasonable steps to obtain work as a miner or quarryman, he failed to obtain any. The sheriff-substitute found that the workman's failure to obtain employment was mainly a consequence of the injury & treated his incapacity as total under sect. 9 (4). On appeal to the First Division of the Ct. of Session the decision of the sheriff-substitute was reversed on the ground that sect. 9 (4) did not apply to a case where the workman had recovered sufficiently to be fit for his former employment. The workman appealed to the House of Lords:—Held: the words "employment of a certain kind," in sect. 9 (4) are applicable although the employment which the workman is fit for & is attempting to obtain is his pre-accident employment.—TANNOCH v. BROWNIESIDE COAL CO., [1929] A. 3290a. ——.]—In May, 1923, a miner suffered a permanent injury by accident to his left foot & was paid compensation. In May, 1924, he was given by his employers light employment as a signalman, together with compensation for partial incapacity, & he continued to do the work satisfactorily until the general stoppage in 1926. His services were then dispensed with, & he was unable to obtain employment elsewhere. At the hearing it was proved that the workman could not do work which involved activity of the feet. The sheriff-substitute found that the workman was fit only for a special & limited class of work which he would have no chance of obtaining in the competitive labour market, & awarded him compensation for total incapacity. On appeal this decision was affirmed by the First Division of the Ct. of Session. The employers again appealed: —Held: there was ample evidence to support the finding of the arbitrator.—WEMYSS COAL CO., LTD. v. WALKER (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 366, H. L.

3291a. Charitable employment given by employer.]—An hotel employee was in 1922 injured by an accident which converted him for all practical purposes into a one-armed man. He received compensation until 1926, when, as a result of an arbn., the county ct. judge made an order that the employers were liable to pay him compensation, & that he was at liberty to apply to the ct. "should he at any time be so advised." No other award was made, as the employers undertook to find him employment at 30*s.* a week. The employment found for him was to stand in the street holding a sign advertising the hotel. In 1930 he was dismissed for pilfering & applied to the ct. for compensation by way of review. The county ct. judge made an award in his favour on the basis of total incapacity. The employers appealed:—Held: (1) the award of the county ct. judge must have been made on findings that the workman was totally incapacitated & that the employment found for him by his employers was only a charitable employment, & there was evidence to support these findings; (2) the workman, being found to be in the category of "odd lot" labour, the fact that he had been dismissed for misconduct was irrelevant in coming to a decision as to whether or not there was incapacity for work. Appeal dismissed.—JENSEN v. JONES (R. E.), LTD. (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 518, C. A.

3291b. One hand becoming useless.]—As a result of an accident a workman lost the third finger of his left hand, the second & fourth fingers were shrunken, & the thumb & first finger became weak, thus making the hand practically useless. The county ct. judge found that the workman was an "odd lot," & also that he should be treated as totally incapacitated under 1925 Act, s. 9 (4). The employers appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings, & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed. — EVANS v. THOMAS W. WARD, LTD. (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 364, C. A.

3295a. -.]—In 1911, a workman lost his right arm as a result of an accident. From 1913 to 1922 his employers engaged him on light work. In 1922 it was agreed that he should in the future be paid 7*s.* 6*d.* a week compensation in respect of the estimated difference between what he could earn at light work & what he would have been earning if he had not been injured. After 1924 he was given the work of record-keeping. On Dec. 24, 1927, he was discharged, the works being closed on account of trade difficulties. On Jan. 9, 1928, after sixteen days, he was re-engaged on light work on the terms of the 1922 agreement. The workman received unemployment benefit for the period he was unemployed & also the weekly compensation of 7*s.* 6*d.*, & did not try to obtain other employment. On May 13, 1928, he filed an application for arbitration, claiming an increase of compensation during the period he was unemployed on the basis of total incapacity. It was agreed that the amount recoverable in these proceedings, if successful, was 55*s.*, being two sums of 35*s.* a week less the two payments of 7*s.* 6*d.* The arbitration was begun in Aug. 1928, & continued in Oct. In his evidence the workman said that he was " a storekeeper plus messenger," & that he could act as a watchman-gatekeeper. At the hearing in Oct. the county ct. judge intimated that he was prepared to accept the argument put forward on behalf of the workman that he was an " odd lot," but again adjourned the case to Feb. 1929, for further consideration. In Feb., after hearing further argument, the county ct. judge found that the workman was partially incapacitated, that there were classes of employment in which he could earn his pre-accident wages, & that 7*s.* 6*d.* was sufficient compensation during the two weeks in question. The workman appealed :—Held : the findings of the county ct. judge amounted to a finding of fact that the workman was not an " odd lot," & there was evidence to support such a finding & no misdirection.—EVANS v. EBBW VALE STEEL, IRON & COAL CO., LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 274, C. A.

3295b. - - - ——.]—A partially incapacitated workman in receipt of reduced compensation was unable to obtain work & claimed compensation on the basis of total incapacity on the ground that the injury was responsible for the fact that he was now only fit for light work, which was in fact unobtainable. The county ct. judge found that the workman was neither an " odd lot " nor within 1925 Act, s. 9 (4), but fit for light work. He also found that his failure to obtain employment was due to industrial conditions & not to his physical disability, & that the employers were right in reducing the compensation. The workman appealed :—Held : the findings of the county ct. judge were the exact findings in the case of Cardiff Corpn. v. Hall, No. 3284, which was approved in Bevan v. Nixon's Navigation Co., Ltd., No. 3243b, & there was no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—WILLIAMS v. WATSON (H. J. & S. A.) (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 151, C. A.

3298a. ——.]—A wood-working machinist cut his hand on a circular saw. He was paid full compensation for over two months, but when the cut had healed the compensation was stopped & he applied for continuance of the compensation. After filing the application he obtained a job with fresh employers & cut himself again. At the hearing, at which it was alleged that the workman was suffering from traumatic neurasthenia, the county ct. judge found that he was able to do light work on the ground in the open air, but away from machinery, if such work could be found, but that he was quite unfit to go back to his old job. On the ground that there was no evidence that there was any light work available of that particular limited kind, the judge awarded him continuance of compensation at the full rate from the date when it had been stopped. The employers appealed :—Held : there was no evidence to justify an award for payment of compensation at the full rate. Appeal allowed. Case remitted.—ATKINS v. SPRECKLEY (CHARLES) & CO., LTD. 3299a. -A workman met with an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment which resulted in the loss of his right arm. He received full compensation based on total incapacity for some time, when it was reduced. Owing to failure to obtain work he again claimed full compensation. Arbn. proceedings having taken place, the county ct. judge made an award based on partial incapacity, holding that the failure to obtain work was not " wholly or mainly " due to the injury, but to the state of the labour market :—Held : there was material upon which the county ct. judge could base his decision. The workman having failed to prove that his failure to obtain work was a consequence, wholly or mainly, of the injury, & there being no misdirection, the appeal failed.—MOTHERSDALE v. CLEVELAND BRIDGE & ENGINEERING CO. 3300a. —— ——.]—A workman, in Dec. 1924, lost his left eye in an accident, & received compensation until he was re-employed at full wages at his old work in Mar. 1925. In Aug. 1925, he was discharged owing to slackness of trade & received unemployment benefit for a year. He was unable to give any clear evidence of what he had done subsequently, but from Oct. 1928. to June, 1929, he was employed by the guardians. From June, 1929, he was again in receipt of unemployment benefit. He made a claim for compensation in Aug. 1929. Evidence was given that he had applied three or four times to his old employers for work, but unsuccessfully, & that he had been unsuccessful in his applications for work to two other firms. The employers alleged that the only reason why they had been unable to re-employ him was because he had always applied for work at times when there was no work to be had, but that there had been work available for him in the past, & there was work available for him at the date of the hearing. There was no evidence that the refusal of work by the other two firms was due to the fact that he had lost an eye. The judge found that the workman had failed to obtain employment wholly or mainly in consequence of his injury, & made an award in his favour under sect. 9 (4) on the basis of total incapacity.

The employers appealed on the ground that there was no evidence of either partial or total incapacity & no evidence to bring the case within sect. 9 (4) :—Held : there was misdirection & no evidence to support a finding of incapacity due to the injury.—HUGHES v. PWLL-HELI GRANITE CO., LTD. 3301a. Ability to do work in ordinary course of employer's business.]—On Jan. 5, 1923, the workman, who was at the time of this appeal fifty-nine years old, while working as a general labourer, was injured by an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment by resps. His left foot & leg thickened & swelled, & ever since he has walked with a limp with the aid of sticks, & been unable to do any work involving standing up. In Jan. 1924, an award was made in his favour for full compensation on the ground that his injuries left his labour as an " odd lot," but on resp.'s undertaking to give him some work suitable to his impaired powers & to pay him a wage equal to his pre-accident earnings. the only award made was a declaration of liability. He was given the work of cleaning valves to do, for which he could sit at a bench, & he continued so to work till Nov. 1929, when, owing to slackness of trade, he, with many other able-bodied & injured men, was discharged. Since that time he had been unable to obtain any work, employers having told him they were slack & had nothing to suit him. Applts. having refused to pay him compensation, he filed a request for arbn. & the county ct. judge awarded him full compensation on the basis of total incapacity on the ground that he was the class of man for whom employers were called upon to find special jobs of light work, & that consequently his labour was an " odd lot " :—Held : the workman being able to do, & having done, the job for six years, of cleaning valves, a job necessary to be done in the ordinary course of business of his employers, his labour was not an " odd lot," that was to say, he was not only able to do certain very special jobs depending on finding a very special employer who either from compassion or because he had a special job was able to give him employment, therefore he was not totally incapacitated.—EARL v. THOMAS W. WARD, LTD. (1930), 143 L. T. 745 ; 23 B. W. C. C. 229, C. A.

3301b. Occasional unemployment.]—A workman recovered from an injury by accident sufficiently to return to his old work though he was unable to do all that he could do before the accident. After his return he was occasionally without work, owing to slackness of trade. While still employed he made a claim for compensation. The county ct. judge found that he was fit only for light work but had failed to obtain employment wholly or mainly in consequence of his injury, & held that under the 1931 Act his incapacity must be treated as total. He ordered payment to him by his employer of £1 10*s.* a week from the date of his return to work, & to continue. The employers appealed :—Held : the award could not be supported. Appeal allowed. On Feb. 11, 1926, his finger was cut by a rope, & he was paid compensation until July 2, when he was certified fit for light work. He then obtained a situation on a trawler, until Sept., payment being on a profit-sharing basis, & his share of the profits being £21. He next worked on another trawler until Feb. 1927, payment being on the same basis, but there were no profits. On Nov. 5, 1926, he filed a request for arbn. claiming half the difference between his pre-accident wages & what he was able to earn on the trawlers on the profit-sharing basis. The county ct. judge assessed his weekly earning capacity since July 2, 1926, at £2 5*s.*, & awarded him 7*s.* 6*d.* a week compensation :—Held : (1) there was no evidence that the workman suffered any loss of earnings by reason of his injury, & no evidence to support the award ; (2) the workman had not discharged the onus of showing a reasonable probability that incapacity would ensue in the future, & was not entitled to a declaration of liability. —MCLEOD v. BLACK (1927), 20 B. sf. Disfigurement—No evidence of difficulty in obtaining employment.]—The employers of a dock labourer, who had lost his left index finger by accident in their employ & had been receiving compensation, obtained a medical reference as a result of which the referee reported that the workman had again become fit for his ordinary work. It was, however, not in dispute that the workman was permanently disfigured by the loss of his finger. In arbn. proceedings brought by the employers, the arbitrator refused a motion at their instance that he should end compensation, & pronounced a suspensory award, on the ground that the workman's disfigurement might make it difficult for him to obtain employment. The workman tendered no evidence to show that his prospects of employment had been prejudiced by the disfigurement : —Held : in the absence of evidence showing that the workman's disfigurement would make it difficult or impossible for him to secure employment, the arbitrator was not entitled to make a suspensory award, but was bound to end compensation. How calculated—Period of calculation—Posthumous child.]—A workman having been killed by accident arising out of his employment, his widow claimed compensation for herself & her posthumous child born some ten weeks after the workman's death. The employers paid a sum of money into ct. in respect of the child's allowance based on 15 per cent. of £2 a week for 780 weeks or fifteen years:—Held: the child was entitled to a sum calculated by taking 15 per cent. of £2 a week over a period from the death of the workman to the date when the child in fact would attain the age of fifteen, which, in this case, was some ten weeks more than fifteen years.—Athey v. Pickerings, Ltd. 3359d. —— Amount of lump sum.]—A workman died as the result of an accident, having previously received from his employers £65 5*s.* 5*d.* in weekly payments as compensation. On his death his employers paid into ct. £534 14*s.* 7*d.*, made up of £234 14*s.* 7*d.*, i.e., £300 less £65 5*s.* 5*d.*, for the lump sum payable to the widow, & £300 for children's allowance. The total amount to which the children would have been entitled, if not limited in any way, was calculated to be £617 14*s.* The county ct. judge decided that the amount paid in was reasonable &, at the request of the widow, made an order for payment out of part of the amount:—Held: (1) the amount paid into ct. by the employers was insufficient, & the dependants were entitled to the full £600, since if the lump sum calculated under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 8 (2), was reduced below £300, then, if the figures warranted it, the children's allowance under sect. 8 (3) might exceed £300, provided that the lump sum & the children's allowance together did not exceed £600; (2) the widow was not deprived of her right of appeal by having accepted payment of part of the amount paid in, because, although she might have approbated the order on her own behalf, she had reprobated it in the interests of her children. (3) Semble: a request for arbn., & not an appeal, was the proper procedure for the widow.—Malcolm v. Barber, Walker & Co., Ltd. (1927), 137 L. T. 470; 20 B. W. C. C. 516, C. A.

3359e. —— One child over fifteen partially dependent.]—A workman died as a result of an accident leaving a widow & two children under fifteen all wholly dependent, & also one daughter over fifteen partially dependent. The county ct. judge held the presence of the daughter over fifteen, & only partially dependent, required him to calculate the children's allowance on the basis of partial allowance, & not from the aggregate of the lump sum & the allowance; &, accordingly, such portion of the children's allowance, calculated according to the rules, as was necessary to raise the aggregate to the maximum of £600, fell to be added to the lump sum after deduction from the latter of any payments made to the workman.—Farrell v. Murdostoun Colliery Co., [1931] S. 3348 iv. —— Contributions from unemployment benefit.]—A workman who was fatally injured in his employment was, at the time of his death, living in family with his father, mother, & two sisters. The family was maintained out of a common fund, to which the workman, his father, & other members of the family contributed weekly, the whole fund being expended upon necessaries. During the year preceding the workman's death, his father was in employment only for eleven weeks; during the remainder of the year his father's sole contribution to the fund consisted of unemployment benefit. The workmen's own contribution to the fund during the year amounted to rather more than one-third of it; his averaged £1 13*s.* 9*d.*, & he contributed to the fund, on an average, 13*s.* 9*d.* more than he received from it. The other members of the family were all partially dependent on his contribution; &, on his death, they claimed compensation:—Held: the compensation payable to claimants fell to be measured by the extent to which the workman's death had in fact deprived them of the ordinary necessaries of life.

Opinions that, in determining the extent of the claimants' partial dependency on the workman's earnings, the arbitrator was entitled to take into account the father's contributions to the common fund from unemployment benefit.—Pollock v. Baird (William) & Co., Ltd., [1931] S. C. 667.—SC T.

The magistrate found that the cost of the keep of deceased came to more than the amount which he paid into the family & that applts. were not dependent on him:—Held: the magistrate was entitled to find that applts. were not dependent on deceased.—Edmondstone v. Greaves (1926), 29 W. 3377a. Accident occurring before operative date of 1923 Act—Compensation to be calculated by reference to 1906 Act.]—A workman earning £1 18*s.* 6*d.* a week was injured by an accident on July 10, 1923. Liability was admitted & compensation paid. The 1923 Act did not come into operation until Jan. 1, 1924. In Sept. 1924, he resumed work at lighter employment, but was in receipt of higher wages. In Dec. 1928, he was discharged. In June, 1929, he filed an application for arbn. The county ct. judge found that he was still partially incapacitated & made an award for a weekly payment of £1. The employers appealed :—Held : the accident having occurred before Jan. 1, 1924, compensation for partial incapacity should have been awarded in accordance with the 1906 Act, & the judge, in making the award he did, must have applied the principles of the later Acts.—WILLIAMS v. ENGLEFIELD COLLIERIES, LTD. 3377b. Duty of court to apply 1925 Act, sect. 10.]—A workman was injured on Feb. 6, 1929. Out of the fifty-two weeks prior to that date he had been in work for twenty-three weeks & out of work for twenty-nine. He had been employed by the same employer since 1914, but owing to bad trade his contract of service had since 1921 become terminable at a day's notice, & it was the practice of the employer to put up notices from time to time announcing that the particular mill in which the workman was engaged would cease work on the following week. Whenever he was thus thrown out of work the workman attempted to get other work, but always failed & had to draw unemployment benefit. He would, if the mill happened to have reopened, apply at the works on the chance of being taken on again. Liability for the accident was admitted by the employer, but a dispute arose as to the amount of the average weekly earnings on which the rate of compensation should be calculated. The county ct. judge held that the total earnings during the fifty-two weeks should be divided by twenty-three, representing the number of weeks of employment. There was no evidence before the judge that the irregular cessation of work was a normal incident of the workman's employment beyond the statement of the workman that employment had been irregular since 1921. The employer appealed :—Held : the county ct. judge had not computed the workman's average weekly earnings in the manner best calculated to give the rate per week at which the workman was being remunerated. Appeal allowed. Case remitted for reconsideration on the basis of 1925 Act, s. 10 (i), & the proviso thereto.—MCGEE v. UNITED STEEL COMPANIES, LTD. (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 273, C. A.

3377c. —.]—At the hearing of an arbn. at which the county ct. judge found partial incapacity only, a dispute arose as to the average weekly earnings of the workman, a stevedore. The workman claimed that they amounted to £5 10*s.*, but the employer contended that they were £3 10*s.*, being the actual weekly amount paid by them to the workman while in their employment. The county ct. judge, without considering the provisions of 1925 Act, s. 10, in calculating the average weekly earnings, took the figure of £5 10*s.* for the purpose of assessing the amount of compensation. The employer appealed :—Held : average weekly earnings must be calculated in accordance with 1925 Act, s. 10. Appeal allowed. Case remitted for reconsideration of compensation on the basis of both sects. 9 & 10.—FENTON v. CHARLTON (J. E.), LTD. (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 176, C. A.

workman filed an application for arbn. claiming the continuance of compensation for total incapacity. The judge referred certain questions to the medical referee who, in his replies, stated that the workman suffered pain in his right leg which would prevent him standing eight hours as a storekeeper or lampman; but which would not prevent him doing the full work of a clerk. The judge examined letters written by the workman & found that he was sufficiently well educated to earn 30*s.* a week as a clerk &, on the answers given by the medical referee, made an award for 7*s.* 8*d.* a week with costs. His average weekly earnings before the accident amounted to £3 1*s.* 11*d.* The co. offered him, first at B. & then at S., work which he was capable of doing & in which he could earn £2 6*s.* 9*d.* a week; & they made him weekly payments of 7*s.* 7*d.* The workman refused the employment offered as not being "suitable" on the grounds that, as he alleged: (a) in neither of the places mentioned could he find accommodation for his family, & (b) that his wife's health would suffer if she had to live in either of them; & he applied to the county ct. for an award of compensation:—Held: the lack of accommodation for the family of the workman & the possible or probable injury to his wife's health were irrelevant to the question whether available employment was "suitable."—BROUGHTON v. LONDON & NORTH-EASTERN RY. 3401a. —— Must be paid in respect of incapacity.]—By Local Government & other Officers' Superannuation Act, 1922 (c. 59), s. 6 (3), where a servant of a local authority adopting the Act has attained the age of sixty-five, he shall cease to hold his employment, provided that the local authority may, with the consent of the servant, by resolution extend the period of employment for one year or any less period & so from time to time as they may deem expedient. A dustman, aged sixty-seven, employed by a local authority which had adopted the above Act was injured & became entitled to be paid compensation. He was paid full compensation for a short time & then given a small weekly pension. The workman claimed compensation on the basis of total incapacity. There was no evidence as to whether the employment of the workman had been extended by resolution, or as to whether the pension was paid in respect of the incapacity. The county ct. judge found partial incapacity & held that the pension was being paid by the employers in respect of such incapacity. He, therefore, made an award of compensation for partial incapacity, reducing the weekly payment by the amount of the weekly pension. The workman appealed:—Held: there were insufficient materials before the county ct. judge to enable him to come to a proper decision as to whether the pension was in respect of incapacity or not. Appeal allowed. Case remitted for rehearing.—YATES v. HEMSWORTH RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 649, C. A.

3423a. Payments received under part-time agency agreement.]—A workman was employed as a fitter by a firm of engineers, & at the same time was acting under an agreement with a benefit society as their part-time agent. Under this agreement he agreed to obey the orders of the society & perform all his duties in accordance with official instructions. He was to be paid a weekly salary calculated on a percentage basis. The workman suffered an accident in the course of his employment as a fitter. The county ct. judge, in order to compute his average weekly earnings, added together the weekly payments received from both sources. The employers appealed on the ground that the relationship between the society & the workman was that of principal & agent, & not master & servant, & that his payments under the agreement should not be taken into account:—Held: the judge had rightly construed the agreement as establishing the relationship of master & servant between the society & the workman.—ROBERTS v. GARDNER (WILLIAM) & SONS (1928), 21 B. Occasional increased wages when working away from home.]—The workman, a ganger, aged fifty-five years, met with an accident in the course of his employment & two fingers of his right hand were injured. After receiving compensation on the basis of total incapacity for about four months, he resumed work with his old employers. He was afterwards discharged & was out of work for about two months. He then obtained work with a municipal authority, his weekly wages varying from £2 to £3 1*s.* 6*d.* He claimed compensation under the Act, on the basis of partial incapacity, alleging that his average weekly earnings before the accident were £4 & that he was able to earn £2 10*s.* 8*d.* after the accident. At the hearing he stated that his average pre-accident weekly earnings as a ganger when at home amounted to £3 15*s.*, & when not at home £5. The county ct. judge made an award in favour of the workman of £1 a week to take effect from the date of the accident. The county ct. judge said that he thought he had arrived at that figure by taking into account the workman's occasional pre-accident earnings of £5 a week :—Held : there was no ground for interfering with the award of £1 per week, as the county ct. judge had not considered anything irrelevant. He returned home in Apr. 1927, & in June, 1927, his employers agreed to pay him full compensation. In Apr. 1928, he underwent a second operation for hernia, which was completely successful. In Dec. 1929, the employers applied for a review of the weekly payments, specifying in their application that they asked only for diminution. He also ordered the employers to pay the costs:—Held: (1) the order was a right order, as liberty to apply carried out the effect of a declaration of liability; (2) the employers having failed to establish their right to termination of the weekly payments, the judge rightly exercised his discretion in ordering that the employers should pay the costs.—SIDNEY LEE (EXETER), LTD. v. JAMES (1928), 21 B. 3558a. ——.]—A coppersmith was injured by an accident which caused permanent partial incapacity by loss of the left index finger & was paid full compensation for a short period. He was then re-employed, earning an average weekly amount equal to his pre-accident wages. Help was given him where heavy work was involved, but his capacity was nearly as good as before the accident. From time to time his employers before the accident had to stand men off from work as the amount of work varied, & after the accident the workman was stood off work in the same way for periods of two & six weeks in 1928 & of seven weeks up to the middle of June, 1930. Alleging that he had been stood off more than other men on account of his injury, the workman made a claim for varying amounts of compensation as from the date of his first return to work & for a declaration of liability. The employers submitted to a declaration of liability. The county ct. judge found that the workman had not been stood off more than other workmen, that he was receiving his pre-accident rate of pay, & that that rate of pay was really being earned by him. He therefore held that the workman was only entitled to a declaration of liability. The workman appealed:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—DOUGHTY v. BRAITHWAITE (H.) & CO., LTD. (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 437, C. A.

3558b. —— Recurrence of incapacity.]—In 1915 appct. met with an accident & rupture supervened. Resps. paid him compensation. In Dec. 1916, the rupture was operated upon. Appct. returned to work, but shortly afterwards the rupture broke down again & appct. left his work. After a short absence he again returned to work at reduced wages & received compensation on a sliding scale according to the amount he was able to earn. In Dec. 1921, he left resp.'s employment to take up a position as steward of a club for which he received approximately the same wages as he had earned with resps. before the accident. About five months later he claimed a declaration of liability. Resps. contended that application was too late, & as the man was able to earn the same wages as before the accident & there was no evidence that these wages would cease or the appct. would be unable to earn the same wages in the future, there was no evidence upon which a declaration could be granted. The deputy county ct. judge said that the injury being a rupture which had in fact broken down once after operation for so called radical cure, appct. was entitled to a declaration :—Held : there was evidence upon which the judge was entitled to grant a declaration of liability.—STATHAM v. OXCROFT COLLIERY CO., LTD. 3559a. ——.]—A workman having been injured, the employers entered into an agreement with him, which was duly recorded. This agreement gave the workman 30*s.* a week for total or partial incapacity " or until same shall be ended, diminished, increased or redeemed." Later the workman returned to work at his old wages, on the express agreement contained in correspondence that his rights under the registered agreement were kept alive, & that if the work was not continued & old wages paid, he should go back to such rights. As he was able to continue at work, the employers applied for a review to diminish or terminate the payments payable under the registered agreement. The workman claimed that he had not been paid his full old rate of wages under the second agreement & was entitled to have them made up to the old rate, & further, that by reason of this agreement the employers had no power to review the payments payable under the registered agreement. The county ct. judge held the employers' application to review was in breach of the agreement in the correspondence, & dismissed the application :—Held : the employers had expressly reserved their rights under the registered agreement to have the weekly payment reviewed. The workman's attempt at work having been successful, the employers' application to review was a proper one, & the judge was wrong in dismissing it. The right order on the facts was to discharge the registered agreement & direct a declaration of liability to be recorded.—HITCHENS & CO., LTD. v. HART (1927), 20 B. W. C. C. 609, C. A.

3562a. —— Dismissal on closing down of works.]—A workman was injured by accident in Oct. 1929, & received 30*s.* a week until July, 1930, when the compensation was reduced by the employer to 15*s.* a week. In consequence the workman began arbn. proceedings. The arbn. was heard in Oct. 1930, when the county ct. judge found that at that time the workman was able to earn his pre-accident wages at work which was offered to him by his old employers. He awarded 30*s.* a week from July to Oct. The man was re-employed at his old wages & remained at work until Jan. 1931, when he was dismissed with others on the closing down of the factory. In Feb. 1931, he began fresh proceedings, claiming a declaration of liability. In his answer the employer raised the defence of res judicata. It was agreed that subject to this defence the workman was entitled to a declaration of liability. The county ct. judge held that the doctrine of res judicata did not apply, & made an award in favour of the workman for a declaration of liability. The employer appealed :—Held : the county ct. judge had never intended the first arbn. to operate as res judicata, & the fact that the workman had obtained employment at his old rate of wages did not prevent a subsequent original application for a declaration of liability. Appeal dismissed.—BREWER v. FIRESTONE TYRE RUBBER CO. (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 366, C. A.

3562b. —— Prevented by general fall in wages.]—A workman who was employed sometimes as a casual, sometimes as a general, labourer, & sometimes as a bricklayer's labourer, lost his left eye by an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment & received compensation for some years. The employers applied for a review, seeking termination or, alternatively, diminution. In his evidence the workman said, " I can work just as well as I could before, & the only diminution is due to the drop in wages." On this evidence the county ct. judge terminated the weekly payments & refused a declaration of liability. The workman appealed :—Held : on the evidence before him the county ct. judge had rightly refused to make a declaration of liability & there was no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—UNION COLD STORAGE CO., LTD. v. POOLE (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 1, C. A.

3571a. Consideration for agreement—Sufficiency.]—An underground colliery workman left his employment in Mar. 1921, on account of illness. On July 18, 1922, he was certified to be suffering from nystagmus, the disablement, according to the certificate, being deemed to commence on that day. The workman applied for compensation, & the employers paid full compensation for total incapacity for four years, & then ceased payment. In proceedings for an award, instituted by the workman, the case was treated by both parties on the basis of an agreement to pay compensation as for total incapacity having been made, but the county ct. judge held there had been no consideration on the part of the workman for the agreement, & as the workman was not entitled to any compensation since he had not been employed by resps. during twelve months prior to the date of the certificate, the agreement was outside Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), & could not give jurisdiction within the Act :—Held : there had been good consideration, inasmuch as the workman had forborne to take steps, either by applying to the certifying surgeon, or by appeal to the medical referee, to get the date of the certificate of disablement altered, & the agreement was binding upon resps., & the workman was entitled to an 3580a. —— —— ——.]—A workman injured by accident in Dec. 1927, was paid compensation at the rate of £1 2*s.* 3*d.* a week, this rate being based by the employers on the supposition that the pre-accident wage was £1 18*s.* 10*d.* a week. These payments were accepted by the workman until Dec. 1928, when the payments were reduced to 15*s.* a week. In Jan. 1929, the workman was given light work at a weekly wage of £2 1*s.* 8*d.* He then claimed a review of the weekly payments on the ground that his pre-accident wages were £2 10*s.* 3*d.*, & that he was therefore entitled to £1 5*s.* 1½*d.* during the period of his total incapacity instead of the £1 2*s.* 3*d.* which he had been paid & had accepted, & 4*s.* 4½*d.* a week from the time he was given light work. The county ct. judge held that the payment of the compensation over so long a period implied an agreement between the parties on the terms that the rate of compensation should be £1 2*s.* 3*d.* a week based on a pre-accident wage of £1 18*s.* 10*d.* & that since there had been no change of circumstances & no question had arisen within the meaning of the Act, the workman was bound by that agreement. The workman appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge, having found on the evidence that there was an implied agreement, was right in holding that the parties were bound by it.—LEWIS v. CAMMELL, LAIRD & CO., LTD. 3631a. —— —— ——.]—By an accident arising out of & in the course of the employment on Jan. 10, 1928, a workman aged fifteen suffered a cut on the scalp behind & above the ear. He was able to return to work at the beginning of Feb. 1928. On Mar. 14 & 20 he had epileptic fits, & on the latter date gave up work, receiving compensation in respect of the accident. In July, 1929, the employers requested a review of the weeky payment, but in Sept. 1929, an agreement was made between the parties whereby the workman agreed to accept £350 & costs in redemption of all further payments. Both the registrar & the county ct. judge, who had certificates before them of three doctors that the epilepsy was due to the accident, refused to record the agreement on the ground that the sum was inadequate & compensation was therefore continued. On Mar. 13, 1931, the weekly payments were stopped under sect. 12 after a doctor had reported that the epilepsy was not due to the accident. The workman filed a request for arbn. The county ct. judge, sitting with a medical assessor, held that the workman had not proved that there was any connection between the accident & the epileptic condition. The abortive agreement was not mentioned at the arbn. The workman appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge was free to decide in favour of the employer on the evidence before him & was in no way fettered by his previous refusal to record the agreement between the parties.—EMSLEY v. HAGGAS (J.) & CO., LTD. An agreement was then made between the parties that the employers should employ the workman at his pre-accident average weekly earnings, & that an award should be made for one penny a week to continue during such period as the workman should be so employed or until the same should be ended, diminished, increased or redeemed. The award was duly made by consent on Nov. 9, 1906. The workman remained at work until Sept. 7, 1929, when the employers closed down their works. The workman then claimed his arrears of 1*d.* a week & applied for leave to levy execution for these arrears. The county ct. judge made the necessary order. The employers appealed:—Held: there having been no variation of the award for a penny a week the workman was entitled to issue execution for the accumulated arrears. On Mar. 10, 1930, notice to end the compensation was given by the employers under 1925 Act, s. 12, based on a certificate of complete recovery. The workman replied with a counter certificate, & the question was referred to a medical referee. Meanwhile the employers paid four weeks' compensation into ct. An agreement was then come to between the employers & the workman under which the money in ct. was to be paid out to the employers, & the compensation was fixed at 18*s.* 6*d.* a week to be paid by the employers as from the date when they stopped the compensation until further review of that amount. This agreement was sent to the registrar & was recorded by him. The registrar then made an order for payment out of the sum in ct. to the employers. Subsequently, again proceeding under sect. 12, the employers reduced the weekly payments, & the workman, not continuing the proceedings under that sect., applied for leave to issue execution under r. 82 of the Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926. The county ct. judge gave leave to issue execution, & the question arose whether, having regard to the agreement & the order of the registrar, the compensation was owing under a memorandum, award, or certificate within the meaning of r 82 :—Held : agreement between the parties on which the registrar made his order was a memorandum within r. 82 relating to the future as well as the past, & therefore execution was properly leviable as to the future weekly payments.—ALLEN v. DIGBY COLLIERY CO., LTD. 3668e. —— —— After commencement of proceedings to terminate payment under 1925 Act, sect. 12.]—In Aug. 1929, a workman met with an accident, & was paid full compensation by his employers. In Apr. 1930, an agreement was recorded under which he was paid compensation at an agreed rate. In July the employers obtained a certificate from their doctor that the workman had practically recovered from the accident in 1929, & served upon the workman a notice of their intention to terminate the compensation under 1925 Act, s. 12. The workman did not follow the procedure prescribed by that sect., but applied under r. 82 of Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926, for leave to issue execution under the recorded agreement. The county ct. judge refused the application :—Held : (1) under the recorded agreement a workman was in the position of a judgment creditor, & was entitled under r. 82 to apply for leave to issue execution, notwithstanding the fact that the employers had already commenced proceedings under sect. 12 to terminate or reduce the weekly payments under the recorded agreement ; (2) the employers could always apply under r. 82, sub-r. (5), for an adjournment of the application to enable them to proceed under sect. 11 of the Act by way of review ; (3) leave to issue execution ought to be allowed, but execution ought to be suspended for one month to enable the employers to apply for a review ; (4) the decision of the question whether sect. 12 extended to anything but payments made under agreements that are not recorded was reserved.—HAYTER v. SOUTHERN RY. 3668f. —— —— ——.]—In 1928 a workman having met with an accident his employers paid him full compensation of 30*s.* a week on the basis of total incapacity. In Aug. 1930, an agreement was recorded under which the payments of 30*s.* a week were to be continued by the employers. In Jan. 1931, the employers, following the procedure prescribed by sect. 12 , served upon the workman a notice, in accordance with a certificate of a medical practitioner which stated that the workman had partially recovered, that they would from & after the expiration of ten days therefrom reduce the weekly payment of 30*s.* under the recorded agreement to 11*s.* 1*d.* The workman did not follow the procedure open to him under the proviso to sect. 12 (3), but applied to the registrar under r. 82 of Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926, for leave to issue execution under the recorded agreement. The matter was referred by the registrar to the judge, who held that the workman was entitled to leave to issue execution unless the employers applied for a review. On appeal by the employers :—Held : leave to issue execution ought to be granted, as the certificate of the employers' doctor, on which they relied as a ground for ending the compensation, was not final & conclusive, & did not establish partial incapacity, & therefore they were in default in making weekly payments under the recorded agreement within the meaning of r. 82, sub-r. (1) ; but the execution must be suspended in order to give the employers an opportunity to apply for a review under sect. 11 of the Act.—WINFIELD v. LONDON, MIDLAND & SCOTTISH RAILWAY, [1931] 2 K. 3698a. —— Notice of intention to end payments—Validity.]—A workman was injured by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. Resps.' doctor gave his certificate that the man had partially recovered, & resps. served notice on the workman in pursuance of Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 42), s. 14, that they would cease payment of compensation within ten days. No counter-certificate by the workman's doctor was served in pursuance of the sect., but the workman filed a request for arbn. The county ct. judge awarded 8*s.* a week on the basis of partial incapacity from the date of the hearing in the county ct., & not from the date of termination of the weekly payment, on the ground that the workman had not complied with sect. 14, & was not entitled to compensation from that date :—Held : the notice was bad, in that it purported to end compensation when the workman was certified to be partially recovered only, & the compensation of 8*s.* a week for partial incapacity was payable from the date the employers ceased payment of compensation.—HOWARTH v. SINGLETON (J. The workman filed a request for arbn. claiming (inter alia) a declaration of liability, alleging that he was still incapacitated. Resps. offered to accept an award of a declaration of liability, & before the hearing offered the sum by which the weekly payments fell short of the proper amount that was due in respect of the two days. The county ct. judge was satisfied the workman had recovered & was able to do his work, & held, payment for the two days having been offered, there was no further liability on resps., & made the declaration of liability offered :—Held : the notice was good, & was not invalidated because the payments were not made for the full period of ten days from the date thereof.—COOPER v. COLLINS ELECTRICAL, LTD. PART XIV. SECT. 19.

3700 i. Failure by employer to adopt procedure—Omission to serve report of medical practitioner—Report of workman's medical practitioner served on employer.]—An injured workman, who was in receipt of weekly payments of compensation, was examined by the employers doctor, who certified that he had partially recovered. A copy of this certificate was sent to the workman, together with notice of the intention of the employers at the expiry of ten days to diminish the weekly payments, but the copy was not received by the workman until after the expiry of the six days allowed for sending it under para. 15 of Sched. I. to 1906 Act. The workman was then examined by his own doctor who reported that he was not fit for any work, & a copy of this report was sent to the employers within six days of the examination. The employers then applied for a medical reference under Sched. I. para. 15 & they consigned a portion of the weekly payments in terms of sect. 14, proviso (ii) of 1923 Act :—Held : the report of the workman's doctor disagreeing with the employer's medical certificate, even though it was sent merely for the purpose of preventing the diminishing of the weekly payments under sect. 14 of the 1923 Act, was a report within Sched. I., para. 15 of 1906 Act &, as it had been received by the employers within six days of the examination they were entitled, under para. 15 as amended by sect. 11 (1) of 1923 Act, to apply for a medical reference, although the certificate of their own doctor had not been received by the workman within the six days required by that paragraph & accordingly, as the application for a medical reference had been duly made, they were entitled to consign the amount of the weekly payments in dispute as from the date of that application.—WHITE v. BAIRD (WILLIAM) & CO., LTD., [1932] S. his employment, & by voluntary agreement the employers paid him a weekly sum by way of compensation until Sept. 3, 1925, when they stopped the weekly payments, on the ground that the man had completely recovered. After the employers had commenced proceedings for a review, the workman admitted that the incapacity had ceased on Sept. 3, but claimed compensation up to the date of the award:—Held: the county ct. judge had no jurisdiction under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 42), s. 14, to award any payment after the incapacity had ceased, & he ought to make a retrospective award terminating the weekly payments as from the date of recovery.—OCEAN COAL CO. v. DAVIES, [1927] A. The employers in their answer offered to submit to an award on the basis of partial incapacity, but at the same time gave notice that they denied liability. An award was consequently made for an agreed amount until the same should be ended or diminished. Eleven months later the employers applied to review with a view to termination of the weekly payment on the ground that the workman had completely recovered. The county ct. judge found as facts that the workman could do his pre-accident work, but that his physical condition was the same in all material respects as at the time of the previous award & refused to terminate the weekly payments. The employers appealed:—Held: the two findings of fact were wholly inconsistent with each other, but once the county ct. judge had found that the workman could do his pre-accident work, all right to compensation ceased.—FAIRFIELD SHIPBUILDING CO., LTD. v. HARRIS (1931), 24 B. 3701e. Failure by workman to adopt procedure—Application for review—Right to amend.]—Employers, using the machinery provided by Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 12, stopped weekly payments to a workman on their doctor's certificate. The workman did not avail himself of sect. 12, but began fresh proceedings for an arbn. by way of review, asking for an order that the weekly payments should be continued. At the arbn. the employers, at the close of the workman's case, objected to the method adopted by the workman & submitted that there was no case to answer. The workman applied for leave to amend, to turn the proceedings into an original appln. under sect. 21 of the Act, but the county ct. judge refused to allow this, & upheld the employers' objection, making an award in favour of the employers. The workman appealed:—Held: the county ct. judge should have allowed the amendment, so that the case could have been considered on its merits.—ROBINSON v. VICKERS-ARMSTRONG, LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. 3702a. —— ——.]—A workman met with an accident, which he alleged caused an inguinal swelling. He was paid full compensation until Sept. 20, 1926, when the payments were reduced. The workman filed an application claiming compensation at the old rate, & the employers filed a counter-application for termination of compensation. The county ct. judge found that the workman had entirely recovered on Sept. 20, 1926, & that the swelling from which he suffered at the date of the trial was not a result of the accident, & made an award for the employers on both applications:—Held: the employers, by paying compensation, were not estopped from saying that the injury was not caused by the accident, & there was evidence to support the judge's findings, & no misdirection.—THORPE v. SADLER (A. 3702b. —— ——.]—On May 15, 1927, a trimmer met with an accident on board a liner causing hernia. He received compensation until Nov. 12. On receipt of a medical report that he was fit to resume work, his employers gave notice on Nov. 2, that the weekly payments would be terminated. The workman did not obtain a counter-certificate, but, on Nov. 24, his solrs. wrote suggesting that he had not been examined for hernia, that an operation would be necessary, & that the notice of Nov. 2 should be cancelled. The employers thereupon requested the workman to present himself for further examinations, & as a result of these examinations again repudiated liability to pay compensation. The county ct. judge found that there was no incapacity on Jan. 7, 1928, but he made an award of compensation for eight weeks from Nov. 12, 1927, on the ground that compensation was not properly terminated on that date, in that the employers by subjecting the workman to further examinations had shown that they did not rely on their first medical report. He estimated the period during which the employers were satisfying themselves after Nov. 12 as to the workman's condition at eight weeks:—Held: the workman had not discharged the onus of proving incapacity after Nov. 12, 1927. The judge, in awarding compensation to the workman, in fact, for the trouble he had been put to by the employers after notice of termination had been given, had misdirected himself.—DODD v. OCEANIC STEAM NAVIGATION CO., LTD. 3702c. Action for declaration—Of breach of statutory duty by employer—Whether maintainable.]—Pltf., a workman in the employment of defts., was injured by an accident, & defts. admitted liability & made a weekly payment of compensation. Ultimately a doctor reported that pltf. had recovered, & defts. stopped the payments & applied for a review thereof, & paid into ct., with a denial of liability, the amount of the weekly payments up to that date. While the county ct. proceedings were still pending, pltf. brought an action, alleging that he had not recovered from his injury, & claiming (1) a declaration that under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 12, defts. had committed a breach of their duty by stopping the payments otherwise than in pursuance of an agreement or arbn., & (2) an injunction restraining a continuance of the breach:—Held: under sect. 21 the only tribunal to determine the question of incapacity was the county ct., &, as that question had not yet been determined by that tribunal, pltf. could not show that his incapacity was continuing since the date when defts. stopped the weekly payments, & the action failed.—CATTON v. ASHWELL & NESBIT, LTD., [1928] Ch. 484; 97 L. 3702d. Power to make interim award—Payment into court.]—A workman suffered injuries through an accident arising out of & in the course of his employment, & his employers paid him weekly compensation until a certain date. They then terminated the payment, on the ground that his incapacity had ceased, but there was no award or recorded agreement. The workman had not returned to work, & his employers had not served on him a notice under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 12 (3). On the termination of the payments the workman, on the ground that his incapacity was still continuing, applied for an award of weekly compensation & for an interim award of weekly compensation until the question of the liability of his employers should be decided. The arbitrator made an interim award of a weekly payment, & authorised the employers to pay the money into ct. instead of paying it to the workman:—Held: under sect. 12 the workman was entitled to an interim award, & the arbitrator had no power to authorise the employers to pay the money due thereunder

o i. — - On return to work.]—The employers of a workman, who had been injured by accident, paid compensation, as for total incapacity, without any award having been made or any memorandum of agreement having been recorded. After a time the workman started work again with the same employers, not at his former work as a machine moulder, but as a labourer. The employers ceased payment of compensation as from the date of the workman's re-employment, without having served any certificate or notice under sect. 12 (3). The workman brought an application for an award of compensation as for partial incapacity from the date of the cessation of payments, & moved the arbitrator to make an interim award of compensation. The arbitrator refused the motion:—Held: an interim award was incompetent, in respect that, as the workman had "actually returned to work," the employers were entitled, under sect. 12 (1), to end all payments of compensation.—M'DOUGAL v. SINGER MANUFACTURING CO., [1931] S. sc. "Weekly payment"—What is.]—In order to make a payment a "weekly payment under the principal Act" within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 42), s. 14, it must be shown (a) that there was an admission, express or implied, of liability under the Act, & (b) that the payment was made in respect of that admission.

On Jan. 18, two days after receiving the medical certificate, the employer served it upon the workman, along with notice that his weekly payments would be ended. In arbn. proceedings the workman maintained that the employer was not entitled under sect. 12 (3) to end his weekly payments, because he had failed to serve the certificate within six days after the medical examination, & he contended that the six days' time-limit contained in sect. 19 (2) must be read into the provisions of sect. 12 (3):—Held: the employer had ended the workman's weekly payments in compliance with sect. 12 (3).—M'GEE v. M'BRAYNE, [1931] S. The workman served a counter certificate to the effect that he would never be fit for any but sedentary work. On June 2 his employers offered him light cleaning-up work. Thereafter they applied for, & obtained a medical reference; &, on Aug. 9, the referee reported that the workman was fit for light cleaning-up work on a level surface. Subsequently the workman accepted the light work offered. The employers having thereafter applied to the arbitrator to diminish the weekly payments to 7*s.* 6*d.* per week as from June 7, the workman contended that, as the referee had made no finding upon his condition before Aug. 9, there was no evidence to justify the arbitrator in diminishing the payments prior to that date. The arbitrator having diminished the weekly payments as from June 7:—Held: as no change in the workman's condition between June 7 & Aug. 9 had been alleged to the referee or to the arbitrator, the arbitrator was, in the circumstances, entitled to treat the referee's report as conclusive of the workman's condition as from June 7, & to diminish the compensation payable to him as from that date.—DOCHERTY v. ROSS & MARSHALL, LTD., [1931] S. 3708a. —— Payment of money.]—A workman, a minor, was injured by an accident in the course of his employment, & was paid compensation. Subsequently, having obtained other work, he agreed to the compensation being terminated, with the making in his favour of a declaration of liability. On Dec. 3, 1931, his solrs. wrote to the employers' solrs. informing them that the workman had attained his majority on July 6, 1931, & adding: "I shall be glad to know whether your clients are prepared to pay my client compensation on the basis of partial incapacity." The workman subsequently, on Jan. 18, 1932, gave notice of his intention to apply to the ct. under sect. 11 (2) of 1925 Act to award him increased weekly payments of compensation, in view of his having attained full age. The employers contended: (a) that whereas by sect. 1 of 1926 Act, the claim under sect. 11 (2) of 1925 Act should have been made by "application for the review . . . before or within six months after the workman attains the age of twenty-one years," it had not been made until Jan. 18, 1932, twelve days after the prescribed period; & (b) that sect. 11 (2) being for the review of "any weekly payment" it was not applicable to a case where no weekly payments were being made:—Held: (1) the words "application for the review" in sect. 1 of 1926 Act were not restricted to a formal application to the ct. An application within the section could be made informally to the employer, & this had been done by the solrs.' letter of Dec. 3, 1931; (2) the declaration of liability which had been made, being in lieu of the old order for payment of 1*d*. a week, was a declaration intended to keep open the rights of the parties, & took effect as if there were a weekly payment which was at the moment in abeyance.—VICKERS-ARMSTRONG, LTD. v. REGAN (1932), 101 L. 3708b. Award for fixed period under 1925 Act, s. 9 (4)—Partial incapacity continuing beyond fixed period.]—A workman was injured in June, 1928, & received full compensation until June, 1929. In July, 1929, he applied for the restoration of compensation on the ground of continuing incapacity. The county ct. judge heard the application in Oct. 1929, & ordered that the workman's partial incapacity should be treated as total incapacity under sect. 9 (4). Under this order he awarded full compensation until Jan. 7, 1930. On Jan. 7, 1930, the employers ceased payment. In Apr. 1930 the workman applied for review but subsequently altered his application to one to restore the proceedings begun in July, 1929, to deal with the amount of compensation payable for his partial incapacity after Jan. 7, 1930. The county ct. judge in Nov. 1930 refused to assent to this application. In consequence the workman once more filed an application for review. On this application the county ct. judge held that he was by virtue of sect. 9 (4) entitled to review the matter, although no liberty to apply was expressly given under the award made in Oct. 1929, & made an award of £1 a week for partial incapacity from Jan. 7, 1930. The employer appealed on the ground that there could be no right of review of a weekly payment that did not exist. The workman cross-appealed on the ground that the judge was wrong in refusing to restore the original proceedings:—Held: as the award made in Oct. 1929, dealt solely with matters referable to sect. 9 (4), there still remained the issue of partial incapacity considered apart from sect. 9 (4) &, although the award appealed from was made in review proceedings, it should properly be treated as an award made in the proceedings initiated in July, 1929, which the workman was entitled to have restored, the court having had seisin of the matter throughout. Appeal dismissed. Cross-appeal allowed.—WILLIS v. HOWIE (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 352, C. A.

3710a. ·.]—A miner was certified on Nov. 22, 1919, as suffering from nystagmus & received compensation. After some years the employers requested a review, on which the county ct. judge terminated the weekly payments as from Aug. 21, 1925, the date of his award, on the ground that the workman had recovered from his disablement & was able to do his ordinary work as a miner. There was no appeal by the workman from this award. Three years later, on June 12, 1928, the workman obtained from a certifying surgeon a certificate to the effect that he was suffering from nystagmus, & thereby disabled from earning full wages at his old employment. The date of the commencement of disablement not appearing on this certificate, the workman went to the medical referee, who issued a certificate confirming the certificate of the certifying surgeon, & fixing Nov. 22, 1919, as the date of the commencement of disablement. The medical referee also certified that the workman was only fit for surface work. On that the workman commenced arbn. proceedings, claiming compensation for partial incapacity as from 1925 & a declaration of liability. The employers contended that the matter was res judicata, & this contention was accepted by the county ct. judge. The workman appealed :—Held : the award of Aug. 21, 1925, was final between the parties & could not be affected by the certificate of the medical referee.—WILLIAMS v. CRAWSHAY BROS. 3734a. Workman generally more fit for work.]—A colliery repairer had a series of hernia & operations for hernia commencing in 1922. In 1927, on the workman's appln. for compensation, the county ct. judge found as a fact that he was not fit to do the work of repairer, & awarded compensation. In 1928, the employers applied to terminate the weekly payment, & the matter was referred by the judge to the medical referee, who reported that the workman was fit for his former work as a repairer. The judge said that, on this occasion, he accepted the evidence of the employers' doctors which he had rejected at the former hearing & made an award terminating the weekly payments. The workman appealed on the ground that the judge had merely reversed his first decision without any change of circumstances. In view of this argument, the judge was written to & asked what change of circumstances he found which justified him in coming to his decision in 1928. In reply the judge said he had found that the workman was generally more fit for work :—Held : there was evidence that the man was fitter generally, & there had been, therefore, such a change of circumstances as justified the later award.—PARTRIDGE, JONES & PATON JOHN, LTD. v. SULWAY (1928), 21 B. This letter said, "We think it will be necessary to record an agreement to show the review by consent of the post-infancy basis of compensation. Before doing so, however, we shall be glad to know whether you are prepared to settle this case." The workman never signed this agreement nor was it recorded. He received 8*s.* 3*d.* a week for three weeks only, when he was taken back to work at £2 4*s.* a week. On Jan. 4, 1932, an application was filed by the workman for arbn. by way of review on the ground that, but for the accident, he would have been earning £3 0*s.* 6*d.* a week. The employer then applied for a review, in the county ct. of the district in which the accident happended, having first obtained a certified copy of the award & filed it in the second ct. The county ct. judge of the second ct. refused to transfer the proceedings to the first ct. & found that the workman had recovered & made an award ending the weekly payments. The workman appealed, alleged that the second judge had no jurisdiction to hear the review:—Held: the word "shall" in 1925 Act, s. 27, is not mandatory but is qualified by the words "subject to rules of ct." & by rule 89 of Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926, the county ct. judge had jurisdiction to hear the review. 3766a. Particulars—Contents of.] — Upon an application by an employer to review a weekly payment & diminish it, or terminate or diminish it, the appropriate form is Form 5, under which certain particulars are to be given. These do not include particulars of the extent to which diminution is asked for, but the county ct. judge has a discretion to order or to refuse such further particulars under r. 29 (2). His decision on the point is not a decision on a question of law, & there is no appeal therefrom. Semble: such particulars ought to be sparingly ordered, & not with the object of compelling the county ct. judge to give costs to one side or the other, & there is much greater reason for asking for particulars of the extent of diminution of a weekly payment where termination is not asked for, than where the employer is asking for termination or diminution.—VICKERS, LTD. v. MINERS, THAMES STEAM TUG & LIGHTERAGE CO. v. INGRAM (1927), 96 L. 3769a. ——— ——— ———.]—A workman suffered an accident to his right eye in Apr. 1923. Liability was admitted & compensation paid. In Dec. 1927, the weekly payments were reviewed & the county ct. judge made an award in respect of partial incapacity at the rate of 17*s.* 6*d.* a week, such rate to date from Feb. 1927. Compensation continued to be paid at this rate without any suggestion on the part of the workman that the rate should be altered. In June, 1929, the employers filed an application for redemption of the 17*s.* 6*d.* per week under sect. 13 on the basis of permanent partial incapacity. The workman's solrs. wrote to the employers that the workman objected to the application to redeem, but that they could not object to it as they themselves felt that his medical condition was & would continue to be the same as it had been for the past two years. At the hearing of the application on July 1, medical evidence was called to the effect that the workman's condition was stabilised & that there was unlikely to be any change in either eye. The county ct. judge, however, dismissed the application to redeem, stating that he was doing so in the exercise of the discretion which, in his opinion, the legislature had given to him. The employers gave notice of appeal, & later the workman filed an application for review on the ground that his incapacity had increased: —Held: (1) the employers have an absolute right to redeem, & the judge has no discretion to refuse such application; (2) the application of the workman to review not being in existence at the date of the hearing of the employers' application to redeem & the right of the employers to redeem having become crystalised by that date, the subsequent application to review could have no effect.—ELLIOTT, LTD. v. HOBBS (1929), 22 B. 3801a. —— Scheme inapplicable where employment occasional—What is occasional work.]—By Metal Grinding Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, clause 2, the scheme is made to apply to all workmen employed in the grinding of metal by mechanical power or in glazing, when such glazing is carried on in the same room as the grinding, but by proviso (a) thereof the scheme is not to apply, if such employment is occasional only, & for not more than eight hours in any week. A workman, employed by knife-blade manufacturers, superintended the girls in the glazing shop, & also worked on the processes of glazing known as rebuffing & whittening. In the course of his work he used an abrasive wheel in the whittening shop, whittening involving the raising of silica dust. He became totally disabled from silicosis & was certified accordingly. The county ct. judge found that the work done by the workman in rebuffing & whittening was "occasional only & for not more than eight hours in any week," & was, therefore, within the above proviso, & that he was thereby precluded from the benefit of the scheme. The workman appealed :—Held : for the employment to fall within the proviso it must be both "occasional only" & "for not more than eight hours in any week." In this case the workman was called on, under his ordinary employment, to do the work, &, therefore, such work was not "occasional only."—MAKIN v. NEEDHAM, VEALL & TYZACK, LTD. (1929), 22 B. W. C. 3801b. —— Disablement before Scheme in operation.]—By Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, dated Dec. 11, 1928, workmen engaged in certain processes are brought within the operation of the 1925 Act. By para. 2 the scheme came into operation on Feb. 1, 1929, & is made to apply to all workmen employed at any time on or after Jan. 1, 1929, in the processes therein specified. By para. 11 1925 Act, s. 14, requiring the claim to be made within six months of the happening of the accident, is made to apply, the disablement being treated as the date of the accident. A street mason employed on Jan. 1, 1929, on a process within the scheme was taken ill on Jan. 8, & later went to hospital suffering from silicosis. He did not know until Apr. that he was entitled to compensation. On Apr. 28 he wrote to the certifying surgeon who, however, was away. He took no further steps to get certified until at the end of June he was discharged from hospital in order to see the certifying surgeon, who examined him & certified him on July 2, 1929, to be disabled by silicosis as from Jan. 10, 1929. On July 12 he first gave notice to his employer of the accident & made a claim. The county ct. judge held that the accident having occurred between Jan. 1 and Feb. 1, 1929, was not one to which the scheme applied, & that there was no reasonable cause why the workman should have delayed making his claim until two days after the six months had expired. The workman appealed :—Held : although the Scheme did not become operative until Feb. 1, 1929, it nevertheless applied to all workmen employed on or after Jan. 1, 1929, & therefore applied to a workman employed on Jan. 1, 1929, who was certified after that date as being disabled. On the second point the award was upheld on the ground that there was here no reasonable cause for the delay in making a claim. Appeal dismissed. —HOLT v. HOBSON (ANDREW) & SONS (1930), 23 B. W. C. sc. Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928—Duty to furnish information as to previous employment—Time for furnishing.]—Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928, para. 13, enacts that a claimant for compensation under the Scheme must furnish the employer from whom compensation is claimed with true information as to his previous employment, & that, if the claimant withholds information, he shall forfeit any right to compensation under the Scheme. A workman, who had been certified by the certifying surgeon to be totally disabled by silicosis, claimed compensation from his employer. His claim having been refused, he brought arbn. proceedings, & in the initial writ furnished for the first time the particulars as to his previous employment required by para. 13 of the Scheme :—Held ; there being in para. 13 no time limit within which the information must be furnished, the workman, having furnished it in the initial writ, was not in breach of para. 13 ; &, accordingly, he had not forfeited his right to compensation.—HENRY v. GLADSTONE, [1931] S. then disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed ; that he was employed as a labourer simply & that he had full capacity to perform all kinds of general labouring work ; & that the wording of sect. 43 (1) (i) precluded applt., who was a labourer, from recovering compensation as a worker in the varnish-making industry or otherwise than as a general labourer :— Held : the view taken by the county ct. judge that the workman did not come within sect. 43 was erroneous. There was nothing in the words of that sect. which limited its application to skilled workers in a process. It applied to any ordinary unskilled labourer who suffered from any industrial disease due to the nature of his employment, & who was thereby disabled from earning full wages at the work at which he was employed.— GILMORE v. FREDERICK BOEHM, LTD. 3801f. Metal Grinding Industries (Silicosis) Scheme—Necessity for employment on process when Scheme brought into force.]—By para. 2 of Metal Grinding Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, which came into force on July 1, 1927, the Scheme is made to apply to any workman employed on or after that date in certain processes connected with the grinding of metals. By para. 7 the certifying surgeon is to certify the date of disablement, & by para. 4 the workman, to qualify for compensation, must have been employed in the specified processes within the three years previous to the certified date. By para. 5, where the workman has been employed in the processes for not less than five years, the onus is on the employer to prove that the disease is not due to employment in the processes instead of on the workman to prove that the disease is so due. A workman had been employed as a nail & tack maker for thirty-five years & as such had for many years to use a sandstone grindstone. On Feb. 7, 1930, the workman ceased work, & on Aug. 19, 1930, he was certified by the certifying surgeon to be suffering from silicosis, the date of disablement being fixed as Feb. 7, 1930. On a claim for compensation the county ct. judge found that, although the workman had not been employed in any process mentioned in para. 2 of the Scheme since the Scheme came into force, yet as he had been employed previously in such a process for not less than five years, he held that the employers had failed to discharge the onus put upon them by para. 5 of the Scheme, & therefore held that the disease must be deemed to be due to the employment. He accordingly made an award in favour of the workman. The employer appealed :— Held : by the finding of fact that the workman had not been employed in any process mentioned in the Scheme on or after the date when the Scheme came into force, the workman was not within the Scheme at all, & therefore para. 5 could not be made to apply to him. Appeal allowed.—HUGHES v. HARRISON & COOK (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 104, C. A.

3811a. Silicosis—Construction of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928.]—By clause 2 (vii) of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, the scheme is made to apply to all workmen employed in the potteries in certain specified processes only. One of such specified processes is " any process in or incidental to the manufacture of china or earthenware, including sanitary earthenware, electrical earthenware, & ware tiles." A workman was employed to put spouts & handles on teapots made of Jet & Rockingham ware, & was certified as being totally disabled from silicosis. Evidence was given before the county ct. judge that Jet & Rockingham ware was a special branch of the pottery trade & did not come within the meaning of the trade term " earthenware "—Held : the words used in describing the processes specified in the scheme are to be interpreted in the technical sense in which they would be understood by those engaged in the trades concerned & not in the wide sense in which they might be understood by the general public.—DONCASTER v. SUDLOW (R.) & SONS (1929), 22 B. W. C. C. 564, C. A.

If the certificate had been granted immediately after the examination of the workman by the certifying surgeon the claim for compensation could have been made in time :—Held : on the facts, the failure to make the claim within the prescribed period was due to the delay of the certifying surgeon &, so far as the workman was concerned, was occasioned by reasonable cause, within proviso (b) to sect. 14 (1), & the workman was entitled to compensation. —KITCHEN v. KOCH (C.) & CO., LTD., [1931] A. 3816a. Certificate of death—Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928—Whether presence of medical referee at post-mortem essential.]—By clause 14 (1) of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928, it is provided that where an application is made on behalf of dependants of a deceased workman to a medical referee for a certificate that death has been due to silicosis or silicosis & tuberculosis, the medical referee must, after a post-mortem examination, give a certificate in accordance with the facts & such certificate shall be conclusive. It is further provided by the same paragraph that the post-mortem examination shall, if possible, be made by or under the personal supervision of the medical referee. The last provision is directory & not imperative. Therefore, where, on the death of a workman, a coroner ordered a post-mortem examination, which the medical referee was not invited to attend, & subsequently, after an examination of portions of the lungs, the medical referee gave a certificate that death was due to silicosis & tuberculosis :—Held : (1) the provisions of clause 14 (1) of the Scheme were complied with & the certificate was conclusive; (2) further, the correct procedure to quash a certificate would be to obtain a rule nisi for a writ of certiorari.—HINDMARSH v. JOHNS (EDWARD) & CO., LTD. 3818a. —.]—A french polisher had suffered intermittently from dermatitis since 1925, while working for different employers. The medical referee issued a certificate on Jan. 30, 1928, in which he certified that on Jan. 30, 1928, appct. was no longer disabled by dermatitis. On Mar. 10, 1928, appct. was examined by the certifying surgeon, who on that date certified that she was suffering from dermatitis & had been disabled thereby since Sept. 29, 1927. On a claim by the workman for compensation based on the certifying surgeon's certificate of Mar. 10, 1928, the county ct. judge held the two certificates being inconsistent, the certificate of the medical referee must prevail to the effect that the workman was not disabled after Jan. 30, 1928 :—Held : there was no vital inconsistency between the two certificates, bearing in mind the intermittent character of dermatitis, & the certificate of Mar. 10 was consistent with dermatitis having broken out again.—MACY v. CORK MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. 3819a. Certificate incomplete—Death of certifying surgeon—Subsequent certificate by successor—Validity.]—On July 12, 1926, eighteen months after the workman had left his employment, Dr. S., the certifying surgeon of the district, certified that the workman was suffering from lead poisoning. The certificate did not comply with the regulations as no date of disablement was filled in, nor were the words "I certify that the disablement commenced on the day of " struck out. Before the workman could see Dr. S. to have the omission put right the doctor died. After Dr. F. had been appointed in his place the workman, on Aug. 12, 1926, obtained a certificate from him in which the date of disablement was filled in as Nov. 23, 1924. In answer to the workmen's request for arbn., based on Dr. F.'s certificate, the employers denied liability to pay compensation on the ground that, as Dr. S.'s certificate did not specify the date of disablement, such date was deemed to be the date of the certificate, & was final & conclusive, & Dr. F.'s certificate was accordingly invalid, & as the workman had not been in their employment for more than twelve months prior to that date of disablement, he could not recover compensation. The county ct. judge upheld that contention :—Held : the first certificate was incomplete in that it had not dealt with the date of disablement in either manner provided by the regulations & was invalid, & the workman, not being able by reason of the death of Dr. S. to have the matter put in order, was entitled to rely on the second certificate.—POWELL v. CAULDON POTTERIES, LTD. 3819b. Certificate ineffective—Issue of second certificate.]—A miner was certified by the certifying surgeon as being disabled from Mar. 31, 1924, by miner's nystagmus. From Oct. 1924, to Mar. 1929, he worked on the surface as a partially incapacitated workman. On Mar. 8, 1929, he was served under 1925 Act, s. 12 (3) with a doctor's certificate alleging complete recovery, & the question was ultimately referred to a medical referee, who, in Apr. 1929, certified that the workman was not then suffering from miner's nystagmus & was fit to resume work underground. On Dec. 12, 1929, the workman obtained from the same certifying surgeon a certificate that he was disabled by miner's nystagmus, but the certificate did not certify a date from which disablement commenced, nor were the words " & I certify that the disablement commenced on the day of " struck out in accordance with the instructions contained in Form 3 in the schedule to the regulations as to certifying surgeons, which states " [if the surgeon is unable to certify a date on which the disablement commenced, he should strike out this part of the certificate. In that case the disablement will be deemed to have commenced on the date on which this certificate is given]." On obtaining this certificate the workman made a claim for compensation on his employers, who appealed to a medical referee. The medical referee on Jan. 4, 1930, dismissed the employer's appeal. The certifying surgeon then issued a second certificate which he ante-dated Dec. 12, 1929, & in which he certified that the workman's disablement commenced on Mar. 31, 1924. In Mar. 1930, the workman filed an application for arbn. based on an allegation of recurrence of the industrial disease which originally manifested itself in 1924. The county ct. judge made an award in favour of the employers on the ground that the date of disablement must be taken to be Dec. 12, 1929, & that the certifying surgeon had no power to displace the certificate given on Dec. 12, 1929, by the certificate given in Jan. The workman appealed:—Held: the certificate of Dec. 12, 1929, was ineffective, as no date of disablement could be inferred from it, & the certifying surgeon was entitled to issue an effective certificate giving the date of disablement as Mar. 31, 1924. 3821a. -.]—A certificate was given by the certifying surgeon that a workman was suffering from lead poisoning. A leading symptom of the disease was stated on the form to be dupuytrens contraction. Full compensation was paid until an application by the employers to review the weekly payments. The workman was still incapacitated by dupuytrens contraction. The county ct. judge refused to treat the certificate as conclusive as to dupuytrens contraction being a symptom of lead poisoning, &, on contradictory medical evidence given at the hearing, & also on knowledge he had acquired some years before while sitting on a commission to consider industrial diseases, including dupuytrens contraction, held the symptoms, though still the same as those set out in the certificate, were not due to the certified disease, & reduced the compensation to 1*d.* a week. The case involved a point of law, &, early in the hearing, counsel called attention to that fact, but the judge omitted to take any notes of the proceedings:—Held: (1) the certificate that the symptoms were due to the certified disease was conclusive, & evidence to the contrary was inadmissible, & there was no evidence of any new factor or new disease to support an award in reduction of compensation. From Oct. 19 onwards he became unfit for further work with loss of power in his left arm & leg, he became mentally incapable, his memory failed, & his heart got worse On Nov. 15 he was admitted to hospital, where the medical superintendent found that he had long-standing disease of the heart caused by kidney trouble. On Nov. 23, the certifying surgeon visited the hospital, & on Nov. 28 certified that the workman was suffering from lead poisoning or its sequelæ, & had been disabled as from Oct. 19. The medical superintendent was ignorant both of the visit & of the certificate of the certifying surgeon &, when the workman died on Dec. 23, certified that the cause of death was cerebral hæmorrhage caused by valvular disease of the heart. The county ct. judge held he was not bound to find that death was due to the disease certified by the certifying surgeon, & refused to make an award in favour of the dependants, on the ground that they had not discharged the onus of proving that lead poisoning either caused, contributed to, or accelerated death:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding, & no misdirection.—YOUNG v. KEEBLE, LTD. On Mar. 8 deft. insurance co. issued to pltfs. a cover note which insured pltfs. from Mar. 8 to Mar. 19 against claims for non-fatal accidents. During the currency of the cover note the certifying surgeon certified that the two workmen were suffering from miners' nystagmus & fixed the date of the beginning of the diablement as Mar. 11 in one case & Mar. 12 in the other case. The county ct. judge awarded both workmen compensation, but defts. refused to indemnify pltfs. on the grounds that the workmen suffered no injury between Mar. 8 & Mar. 19 & were not engaged in work for pltfs. between those dates. In an action for an indemnity :—Held : the policy, though not actually issued, was intended to cover pltfs.' liability for the results of industrial disease, & as an "accident," namely, disablement by industrial disease, had happened within the period of cover, & as the Act created the statutory fiction that a workman, at the date of the certified disablement, was employed by the last relevant employer before that date, defts. were liable to indemnify pltfs.—ELLERBECK COLLIERIES, LTD. v. CORNHILL INSURANCE CO., LTD., [1932] 1 K. 3821f. —— Failure to give notice of disablement.] —A workman was employed by resp. as a labourer at breaking up concrete floors & relaying them. After varying periods of employment he ultimately stopped work on July 22, 1929, & on July 30 obtained a certificate from the certifying surgeon that he was disabled from dermatitis contracted during his employment by resp., & fixing the date of disablement as Mar. 14, 1929. Resp. paid the workman compensation till Nov. 19, 1929, when resp.'s doctor reported that the workman had practically recovered & was fit for any work except on cement. Resp. then employed the workman at other work till Dec. 24, 1929, when he was dismissed for want of work. After a period of unemployment the workman obtained work in Apr. 1930, with new employers in unloading lorries containing old iron, rags & bones. By May 2 the dermatitis had become so bad that he had to cease work. On Aug. 28, 1930, he obtained a second certificate from the certifying surgeon that he was suffering from dermatitis, but fixing the date of disablement at the date of the original disablement, Mar. 14, 1929. On this occasion no notice of disablement was given to resp., & he remained unaware of the certificate till the workman commenced the present proceedings against him for compensation on Sept. 19, 1930. The county ct. judge declined in the circumstances to treat the second certificate as conclusive of the date of disablement in accordance with 1925 Act, s. 43 (2), & on the evidence that the workman had recovered from the disablement of Mar. 14, 1929, by Nov. of that year, dismissed the application. On appeal : —Held : (1) as no notice of disablement had been given after the second certificate as required by 1925 Act, s. 14 & r. 41, subr. 2, of Workmen's Compensation Rules, 1926, so that resp. was never given the opportunity of appealing to the medical referee as provided by reg. 8 of the Regulations as to Certifying Surgeons, the certificate was not conclusive of the date of disablement ; (2) as there was evidence to support the county ct. judge's finding that the workman had recovered from the old disablement, the appeal must be dismissed.—MASON v. FOSTER, [1931] 2 K. 3822a. Where possibility of recurrence.]—A miner obtained from a certifying surgeon a certificate to the effect that since Oct. 17, 1920, he had been disabled by miner's nystagmus. From 1920 to 1924 he was paid compensation on the basis of total incapacity. From 1924 to 1926 he worked on the surface. In Oct. 1926, a medical referee certified that he was still disabled by miner's nystagmus. From 1926 to 1930 he was out of employment, & was paid compensation on the basis of partial incapacity. In Jan. 1930, the employer served a notice under 1925 Act, s. 12, together with a doctor's certificate ; the workman served a counter-certificate & the dispute was referred to the medical referee. On Feb. 15, 1930, the medical referee certified that the workman was not then suffering from miner's nystagmus, but that his incapacity to do other than surface work was due to other defects. The workman then went to a certifying surgeon, & on Mar. 27, 1930, obtained another certificate to the effect that he was then suffering from miner's nystagmus, & that the date of disablement was Oct. 17, 1920. In May, 1930, the workman filed an application for arbn. claiming compensation on the basis of partial incapacity. The arbn. took place on July 7, 1930. The county ct. judge held that the medical referee's certificate of Feb. 15, 1930, was conclusive, & refused to allow the workman to give evidence of events subsequent to that date on the ground that such evidence would contradict that certificate. He accordingly made his award in favour of the employer. The workman appealed :—Held : the county ct. judge had misdirected himself in not considering whether the evidence tendered went to show that there had been a recurrence of the disease since Feb. 15, 1930. Appeal allowed. Order for new trial. —EDWARDS v. PENRHICEIBER NAVIGATION COLLIERY CO. (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 117, C. A.

3822b. Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931 —Examination & certification by Medical Board—When certificate conclusive — Re-examination not made "in pursuance of any Compensation Scheme."]—A pottery worker to whom Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928, applied ceased work on Sept. 25, 1930. On Sept. 30 the certifying surgeon certified that he was totally disabled from silicosis & that the disablement commenced on Sept. 25. An appeal by the employer to the medical referee having been dismissed, compensation on the basis of total incapacity was paid to the workman. On June 1, 1931, there came into force Silicosis & Asbestosis (Medical Arrangements) Scheme, 1931, which instituted a medical board to deal with Silicosis, & Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931. By the preamble to Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, the 1928 Scheme was made to continue to apply in the case of workmen who were within that scheme with the exception that the provisions of the new scheme as to the examination & certification by the medical board were substituted for the provisions of the former scheme as to the examination & certification by the certifying surgeon & medical referee. This preamble further stated that the medical board shall have the same powers & duties in cases under the old scheme as under the new scheme. By para. 12 of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1928, & para. 11 of Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, the provisions of the 1925 Act relating to submission to medical examination continued to apply to workmen within the respective schemes. By a proviso to para. 11 of the 1931 Scheme any reference to be made to a medical referee under the provisions of the 1925 Act was to be made to the medical board. By para. 9 of Silicosis & Asbestosis (Medical Arrangements) Scheme, 1931, where, "in pursuance of any compensation scheme" an employer applied to a medical board for re-examination of a workman under that scheme or any compensation scheme, the board should re-examine & give a fresh certificate in the appropriate form. On Sept. 9, 1931, the employer applied to the medical board for re-examination of the workman. The workman having submitted under protest to such re-examination, the medical board, on Oct. 21, certified that he was no longer totally incapacitated. The employer thereupon refused to pay further compensation, & on Oct. 26, 1931, the workman filed a request for arbitration claiming a continuance of the weekly payments. The county ct. judge held that the certificate of the medical board was valid & conclusive against the workman & that therefore he had no jurisdiction to hear the case. The workman appealed: Held: (1) the application to the medical board for re-examination had not been made "in pursuance of any compensation scheme" as there was no scheme applicable which gave such power. The certificate of the medical board was therefore not given in accordance with the provisions of Silicosis & Asbestosis (Medical Arrangements) Scheme, 1931, & was not conclusive evidence within para. 5 of such scheme; (2) the substitution by Various Industries (Silicosis) Scheme, 1931, of a medical board for certifying surgeon & medical referee, as stated in the preamble, related only to the functions performed in conjunction by the certifying surgeon & medical referee in originally bringing a workman within the 1928 Scheme. certificate from a doctor. This was met by a counter notice on the part of the workman, & the matter was accordingly referred to a medical referee. On Feb. 15, 1930, the same medical referee who had made the report in 1926 certified that the workman was not then suffering from miners' nystagmus, but that his incapacity was due to other defects. On Mar. 27, 1930, the workman obtained a report from the certifying surgeon for the district that he was suffering from miners' nystagmus, & was disabled from earning full wages, & that the disablement commenced on Oct. 17, 1920. Upon this report the workman applied for arbitration. The arbitrator made an award in favour of the employers, but this was set aside by the Ct. of Appeal. On appeal to the House of Lords the medical referee in answer to a further question put by the House, said that his certificate of Feb. 15, 1930, meant that although the workman had now recovered from miners' nystagmus he was likely to develop a second attack sooner or later & in much shorter time than it took to produce the first attack: —Held: the mere fact that a second attack would develop quicker than a first was a natural concomitant to susceptibility, & was compatible with complete recovery from the original development having taken place. Disablement from the second attack would be caused thereby & not by the first. The certificate here was one of complete recovery, & that being so, it could not be contradicted by a finding by some one else which was incompatible with complete recovery.—PENRIKYBER NAVIGATION COLLIERY CO., LTD. v. EDWARDS (1932), 101 L. sg. False representation—Whether made "at time of entering employment."]—A miner who had previously suffered from miner's nystagmus, an industrial disease, obtained employment at his trade in Apr. 1927. In May, 1927, he wilfully & falsely made a representation in writing that in Apr. 1927, he had not previously suffered from the disease. For a period of three weeks in Aug. 1927, he was unemployed, after which he again obtained employment under the same employers. He continued in their employment until Nov. 1927, on which date he was certified by the certifying surgeon to be incapacitated by nystagmus from earning full wages:—Held: he was not barred by the provisions in sect. 43 (1) (b) from recovering compensation, in respect that the written representation was not made "at the time of entering the employment."—JOHNSTONE v. MOUNT VERNON COLLIERY CO., LTD., [1929] S. sk. —— ——.]—A workman entered the employment of a colliery co. in Jan. 1927. The employees of this co. were engaged by persons described as contractors, who were, however, admitted, for the purposes of the case, to be merely the co.'s agents. The particular contractor by whom the workman had been engaged received notice from the co. that he & his squad would not be required after Nov. 7, 1927. Before that date the workman arranged with another contractor for a new job in the colliery, to begin on Nov. 8; &, on starting work on Nov. 8, he signed a declaration in which he falsely represented that he had not previously suffered from miner's nystagmus. After being employed under this contract for more than twelve months, he was certified as disabled by miner's nystagmus as from Dec. 22, 1928:—Held: the false declaration made on Nov. 8, 1927, was not made by the workman at the "time of entering the employment," within sect. 43 (1) (b), &, accordingly, he was not deprived of his right to compensation.—MOORE v. MANOR POWIS COAL CO., [1931] S. so. —— ——.]—A workman entered the employment of a colliery co. on June 19, 1928, on which occasion he signed a declaration that he had not previously suffered from miner's nystagmus. This declaration was false & wilfully made. He worked until Sept. 12, 1928, when he was discharged, & he thereafter received unemployment benefit until Oct. 26, 1928. On the latter date he was again employed by the co., & he remained continuously in their employment until Jan. 16, 1931, when he was certified to be suffering from miner's nystagmus. He had not signed any declaration subsequent to that dated June 19, 1928:—Held: the workman was not deprived of his right to compensation, in respect that the false declaration signed on June 19, 1928, was not made at the time of entering the employment in which he was engaged at any time within twelve months of his disablement, the entry into that employment having taken place on Oct. 26, 1928.—M'GUIGAN v. MOORE (A. sr. —— Employers' officials' knowledge of falsity.]—A miner, who had been disabled by nystagmus, received compensation from his employers until Dec. 1929. In Jan. 1930, he re-entered the employment of the same employers at a different colliery, & on so doing he knowingly signed a false statement that he had not previously suffered from nystagmus. He did not, however, intend to deceive, & did not in fact deceive, the employers' officials who were responsible for re-engaging him, as these officials were, in his knowledge, aware that the statement was false & they acquiesced in his making it. A statement of previous immunity from nystagmus was required by the employers from all appcts. for employment underground. After two periods of unemployment, during which he received unemployment benefit, he returned to the resps.' colliery on Nov. 7, 1927, & before commencing work wilfully & falsely represented himself in writing as having never suffered from miners' nystagmus. He ceased working for the resps. on Aug. 26, 1928, & was certified as disabled by miners' nystagmus as from that date. Upon a claim by applt. for compensation, the arbitrator stated that applt.'s employment was continuous from Apr. 27, 1927, down to Aug. 26, 1928, except for the periods when he was temporarily out of work owing to slackness of trade, & as no false declaration was made when he first entered resps.' service he awarded him compensation:—Held: the employment of applt. was not a continuous employment from Apr. 27, 1927, but that his resumption of work with resps. on Nov. 7, 1927, after a period of unemployment was "entering the employment" within modification (b), &, as the false declaration was made by applt. within twelve months of his disablement, no compensation was payable.—SCOTT v. SUMMERLEE IRON CO., [1931] A. 3860a. Effect of agreement for compensation—Facts as to agreement not presented in county court.]—On an application for review & redemption of weekly payments a workman alleged that he had negotiated with persons representing a new co. which had taken over the business of his employers, & the new co. had agreed to pay him £650 in full settlement of his claims. The county ct. judge had previously decided in a similar case that the workman could not rely upon such an agreement with the new co., as such agreement was only with a third party, & not with his employers. The parties treated the case as governed by that decision, & the question of the agreement was not gone into at the hearing. The application was then proceeded with as an application for review & the judge held the workman had recovered, & by his award stopped further weekly payments. The workman appealed, on the ground that the judge could not terminate the payments in view of the agreement:—Held: (1) the ct. could not entertain an appeal as to the effect of the agreement, as the facts as to that agreement had not been presented in the county ct., & there were no materials before the ct. on which they could come to a decision; (2) the question whether the workman had recovered was a question of fact, as to which there was evidence to support the finding, & there was no misdirection.—EAST KENT COLLIERY CO. v. HEATH (1926), 20 B. sg. Failure to obtain declaration of immunity—Whether bar to claim for contribution.]—A miner, who was employed by a colliery co. from Sept. 4 to Dec. 5, 1929, at the time of entering the employment signed a true declaration that he had not previously suffered from miner's nystagmus. On Dec. 7 he became disabled by miner's nystagmus, & the co. after paying him weekly compensation finally discharged his claim for a lump sum in Apr. 1930. On May 12, 1930, the workman entered the employment of another colliery co. who, however, took from him no declaration as to previous immunity from nystagmus. He left their employment after two days & was certified as having again become disabled by nystagmus on May 16. His last employers, having duly paid him compensation, claimed a contribution from his previous employers. The latter maintained that pursuers' claim was barred by their having failed to take from the workman a declaration of his previous immunity from disease:—Held: pursuers' claim, under sect. 43, to a contribution was not so barred. 3887a. Duration of exposure—Resulting in dermatitis.]—A woman worked as a washer in a laundry during July & Aug. 1928. She left without any signs of dermatitis. On Sept. 6, 1928, she was employed in a similar capacity by another laundry, & left work on Sept. 19 with symptoms of dermatitis. On Sept. 26, she obtained a certificate from the certifying surgeon under sect. 43. Her second employers admitted liability & paid compensation, but discontinued the payments in Dec. on their doctor's certificate that she had recovered. He further stated that she suffered from a condition of the skin which rendered her particularly susceptible to dermatitis, & that but for this she would not have developed the disease after so short a period of exposure. On a claim for continuance of the compensation, the county ct. judge made an award in favour of the employers. He found that the exposure of the workman to dust or liquids was of short duration & only resulted in dermatitis owing to an unusual proclivity to such disease on her part. The workman appealed. On appeal it was argued that the employers were estopped from denying that the disease had been contracted through long-continued exposure within Statutory Rules & Orders, 1929, No. 2, by reason of their admission of liability & payment of compensation :—Held : the point as to estoppel not having been taken in the county ct. could not be raised on appeal, & on the evidence the county ct. judge was bound to find that exposure was not of long-continued duration. The top of the thumb was amputated but not to such an extent as to prevent the thumb-nail from growing. He returned to work at the wage of a mate & was again tried as an erector but on simpler jobs. After about two months he was dismissed as incompetent. He filed an application for arbn. & then entered into an agreement with his employer that he should receive £30 in final settlement of all claims. A memorandum of agreement was drawn up together with a statement of facts, both of which were signed by the workman. From the statement it appeared that the workman's average pre-accident earnings were £3 0*s.* 2*d.*, & his average post-accident earnings were £3 4*s.* 3*d.*, & that his employment ceased for reasons unconnected with his injury. The registrar &, on appeal, the county ct. judge refused to record the memorandum on the ground of inadequacy. The parties proceeded to arbn. At the hearing the workman admitted the facts contained in the statement accompanying the memorandum. The medical men called on each side disagreed as to whether the disability caused by the injury amounted to 5 per cent. or 20 per cent. The county ct. judge in his award assessed the loss of earning capacity at 16*s.* a week & ordered payment of compensation at the rate of 8*s.* a week. The employer appealed :—Held : the county ct. judge in awarding to the workman a sum based on an incapacity equivalent to 25 per cent. of his earnings had gone beyond the evidence called before him. The county ct. judge then considered the question of a declaration of liability &, while doing so, asked a medical man, who happened to be present in ct., whether there was any probability of further injury to the workman. The opinion of the medical man was not given as evidence on oath nor was he called by consent of the parties. The county ct. judge then made an award to the effect that the workman had recovered from his injury on the date when compensation was stopped, but granted a declaration of liability by consent. 3904a. —— ——.]—A workman, whose compensation had been stopped, claimed a continuance of compensation on the basis of total incapacity, & it was argued on his behalf that he was entitled to be paid on this basis under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 9 (4). The county ct. judge found as a fact that the workman was partially incapacitated as a result of the accident but had, since the payment ceased, been doing work which he did before the accident. He held that sect. 9 (4) did not apply, but gave no reasons for so holding beyond stating that the workman refused work offered him on the ground that he could not do it when in fact he could have done it. He, therefore, refused to find total incapacity but gave a declaration of liability. On the appeal by the workman it was argued that, the county ct. judge having found partial incapacity, the case should be remitted to him to assess the amount of such incapacity:—Held: although the finding of the county ct. judge on the point was not too clear, the case had been argued & dealt with under sect. 9 (4) alone. The miner appeared to be quite well when he handed over the bar to his mate, but within a few minutes he was lying on the ground dead. An autopsy was made by a surgeon. At the hearing of a claim for compensation by the widow the surgeon was not called but his report was by agreement read to the county ct. judge. He therein stated that the cause of death was syncope following double pneumonia of one or two days' duration, & that in his opinion death was accelerated by the strain put upon an overburdened heart by his work. That was the only medical evidence before the ct., & it was accepted as correct by the judge, who made an award in favour of the employers on the ground that there was "no real evidence within the meaning of the decided cases that any particular piece of work caused death." The widow appealed:—Held: it being doubtful from the use in the award of the words "particular piece of work" whether the county ct. judge had not misdirected himself by thinking that he had to find as a fact that some particular or special strain had to be proved in order to connect the death with the work, the case must be remitted to him for reconsideration. 3927a. Date of termination of incapacity.]—A fireman had to have his right thumb amputated as the result of an accident in the stokehold of a ship. On Nov. 5, 1928, his employers obtained a certificate to the effect that he was fit to return to his work, & thereupon gave notice to terminate the weekly payments on Nov. 15. The weekly payments were stopped on that day although a certificate had been furnished by the workman which stated that he was not fit to resume his old occupation, but also stated that there was plenty of other work he could do. The workman applied for an arbn. The arbn. took place on Jan. 29, & Feb. 5, 1929. On Mar. 1, the county ct. judge made his award in which he found as a fact that the workman was able to earn his pre-accident wages, & that up to the date of the hearing there was a dispute whether he had recovered. He did not give a finding as to the date on which the workman had become able to earn his pre-accident wages, but ordered the employers to continue to pay the full amount of weekly payments as from Nov. 15, 1928, to Feb. 5, 1929. The employers appealed:—Held: the judge should have found in fact the date when incapacity ceased. If by fixing Feb. 5, 1929, as the date down to which compensation must be paid, he intended to hold that incapacity continued to that date, there was no evidence to support such a finding.—MOCKBILL v. HOMER CITY S.S. At the hearing the workman said that it was impossible to say what he could earn if he could get light work. On that evidence it was submitted on his behalf that he was brought within sect. 9 (4). The county ct. judge made an award in favour of the employer that the workman was only entitled to 12*s.* 3*d.* a week as from the date of reduction. An appln. was subsequently made to the county ct. judge on behalf of the workman for an amendment of his note, or for a new trial, on the ground that sect. 9 (4) had not been properly considered at the hearing. The county ct. judge refused to grant a new trial, but said that he had not considered sect. 9 (4) until the end of the case. The workman appealed from the award & from the refusal to grant a new trial:—Held: the appln. was clearly made under sect. 9 (4), & the county ct. judge must be taken to have realised that fact in making the award which he did.—STORER v. MORRIS (1929), 22 B. 3927c. Contract of service.]—A miner in receipt of unemployment benefit died from the effects of fire-damp while working at an outcrop of coal on a farm. The widow filed an application for compensation on behalf of herself & other dependants. No evidence was given at the arbn. to show by whom or on what terms the deceased man was employed to get the coal. The county ct. judge made his award for the widow. Resps. appealed:—Held: the hearing was unsatisfactory as the county ct. judge had not found the facts which were necessary to enable him to come to a decision. Appeal allowed. New trial ordered before a different judge.—MEAKIN v. LOMAS (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 73, C. A.

3927d. Whether accident arising in course of employment.]—A workman after a few minutes' interval from the time he was working as a dipper in a galvanising department suddenly fell dead. Death was diagnosed as being due to angina pectoris. There was some medical evidence pointing to a connection between the arduous nature of the work & the death. The county ct. judge in making his award for the employer said that he was unable to find as a fact that the workman suffered any strain or that the work contributed in any way to his death. The widow appealed:—Held: in view of the medical evidence, it was not clear that the judge had rightly directed himself in law & there should be a new trial. Appeal allowed. New trial ordered.—JAMES v. PARTRIDGE JONES & JOHN PATON, LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 92, C. A.

3927e. Whether fresh accident — Unsatisfactory pleadings.]—A wagon-tippler suffered an inguinal hernia in 1923 while at work. After a few weeks' absence, for which he received compensation, he returned to light work which he continued to perform until 1930 In June, 1930, he had further intestinal trouble & was away from work for two weeks for which he received compensation. After some difficulty with regard to wearing a truss he applied in Nov. 1930, for further compensation, alleging the 1923 accident as the cause of incapacity. It was then discovered that he was suffering from a femoral hernia. The workman then by leave amended his application by adding the femoral hernia, but still alleged that his incapacity was caused by the inguinal hernia. The county ct. judge held that the incapacity was due to the femoral hernia & not to the inguinal hernia, & dismissed the application. The workman appealed:—Held: the hearing was unsatisfactory, largely owing to the condition of the pleadings which did not make the issues clear. Appeal allowed. New trial ordered.—HARDSTAFF v. SHERWOOD COLLIERY CO. (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 349, C. A.

3932a. Reliance on medical assessor On question of fact.]—An engine-driver while coaling felt sudden pain in his stomach. He continued to drive his engine, but the pain increased & he went home. The next morning his doctor stated that he had a strangulated hernia. The workman claimed compensation. At the hearing the judge sat with a medical assessor. He held that the workman had not discharged the onus of proving that there had been an accident in the sense of an abnormal strain, & stated in his judgment that the medical assessor had advised him that the man never had a strangulated hernia. He made an award in favour of the employers. The workman appealed, asking for a new trial:—Held: the hearing was unsatisfactory, the judge having misdirected himself on the points at issue, & having accepted the opinion of the assessor as to what his findings of fact should be. Appeal allowed. New trial ordered in another county ct. with directions to apply the principles laid down in Clover, Clayton & Co., Ltd. v. Hughes, No. 2316.—DAVIS v. LONDON, MIDLAND & SCOTTISH RY. CO. (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 368, C. A.

3932b. No details in award.]—A domestic servant alleged that while carrying a bottle of her own nail polish she slipped on a mat & the bottle broke in her hand, cutting it. On a claim for compensation the county ct. judge made a short award stating that the workman had not discharged the onus that was on her to satisfy him that the accident arose out of & in the course of her employment. The workman appealed on the ground that the county ct. judge had not stated the facts on which he based his decision & asked for a new trial:—Held: it not being a case in which a detailed finding was required, the shortness of the award was no ground for a new trial. Appeal dismissed.—GILBERT v. COLES (No. 2) (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 481, C. A.

3932c. Contradictory judgment.]—A miner who had suffered from periodical attacks of miner's nystagmus & was in receipt of weekly payments was examined by a medical referee who certified that the man "is not now suffering from miner's nystagmus, but from nervous debility." On his report the employer stopped the weekly payments. Six months later the workman applied for further compensation. The county ct. judge found as a fact that the workman was not suffering from nystagmus, & looked the picture of health, but said that he thought it possible, & even likely, that he might have a recurrence though he was not satisfied that such would be the case. His award was in the form that the employers were to be liable to pay the workman further compensation if at any time he became incapacitated for work from nystagmus. The workman appealed:—Held: as the award made by the county ct. judge was not consistent with his judgment, & the judgment was contradictory in itself, there must be a new trial. Appeal allowed. Order for new trial.—HILLIER v. EBBW VALE STEEL, IRON & COAL CO., LTD. (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 238, C. A.

3932d. Excessive award.]—A workman claimed compensation on the basis of partial incapacity. On the matter coming before him, the county ct. judge referred it to a medical referee, who reported as follows: "S. has good general health, but is not fit for his ordinary work." The judge, without considering the effect of sect. 9 (4), made an award of 30*s.* a week on a finding of total incapacity. The employers appealed:—Held: the hearing was unsatisfactory, the judge having made an award in excess of what the workman was claiming & not justified by the evidence. Appeal allowed. New trial ordered.—SINGLETON v. DRAKE (D.) & SONS (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 369, C. A.

3945a. —— Not to be supplemented by note taken by articled clerk—Note apparently complete.]—A miner, after helping to put a tram on the rails, died within a few minutes. At the post-mortem examination it was found that death was due to effusion in the pericardium. At the arbn., on the claim by his dependant for compensation, the employer's doctor gave evidence to the effect that there was no connection between the exertion & the sudden collapse. In making his award for the employer, the county ct. judge said that he preferred the evidence given for the employer to that given for the dependant, & held that death was not caused by accident arising out of & in the course of the employment. The dependant appealed, & on the hearing of the appeal counsel for the dependant asked for permission to read, in addition to the judge's note, a note taken at the hearing in the ct. below by an articled clerk. Permission was refused:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding, which was purely a question of fact for the county ct. judge, & no misdirection. Appeal dismissed.—JONES v. BLAENAVON CO., LTD. (1931), 24 B. W. C. C. 148, C. A.

Acceptance of money paid into court—Appeal as to costs.]—On the hearing of a claim for compensation applt. agreed to accept £10 paid into ct. on Jan. 7, 1927, the date of the answer filed by resps., in full satisfaction of the claim. Under the award, the £10 was to be paid to applt. with a declaration of liability, but resps. were given costs after the date of filing of their answer. Applt. appealed from so much of the order as directed costs to be so paid:—Held: applt. could not take the benefit of the award & appeal from a part of it to which she objected, & there was no right of appeal.—WALDEN v. GRAMOPHONE CO., LTD. 3954c. Appeal against date of termination of compensation—Application for review.]—An infant workman was in receipt of compensation from the date of his injury to Aug. 10, 1928. On that date the employers, without following the procedure indicated in sect. 12, stopped the compensation on the ground that the workman had fully recovered. The county ct. judge heard the workman's claim for a continuance of the weekly payments on Jan. 8, 1929, when he found as a fact that the workman had fully recovered on Aug. 10, 1928, but granted a declaration of liability. The workman claimed that on this finding he was entitled to a continuance of the weekly payments to Jan. 8, 1929, in accordance with sect. 12. The county ct. judge adjourned the case for further argument on this point, & on Aug. 14, 1929, gave a considered judgment in which he held that, on his previous finding as to the date of recovery, the liability of the employers to make weekly payments ceased on Aug. 10, 1928. In May, 1929, the infant workman had come of age. In Sept. 1929, he entered an appeal against the decision of Aug. 14, 1929, by which the judge had ended payments as from Aug. 10, 1928, & in Oct. 1929, he filed an application in the county ct. for a review of the declaration of liability. On the hearing of the appeal the employers took the preliminary objection that by starting proceedings both by way of appeal & by way of review, the workman was both approbating & reprobating the award:—Held: (1) on the preliminary objection, the two sets of proceedings were in respect of independent matters & did not amount to approbation & reprobation; (2) on the merits, the county ct. judge having fixed the date of recovery of the workman, the employers could not then be ordered to continue the weekly payments after that date.—BEVAN v. GROVESEND STEEL & TINPLATE CO., LTD. 3993a. —— —— Denial of liability.]—A workman having been injured by accident, his employers applied for a reference to a medical referee under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 19, on the ground that there was a dispute as to whether he was fit for his employment & as to whether any incapacity from which he might be suffering was due to the accident. Four days later the workman filed an objection to the reference on the ground that, as the employers were refusing to admit that the accident arose out of & in the course of the employment, the matter should be dealt with by arbn. & not by reference. On the same day he filed his appln. for arbn. The sheriff-clerk allowed the reference to the medical referee & his decision was not appealed from. The employers filed an answer to the workman's appln. for arbn., in which they objected to the arbn. proceedings on the ground that the matter had already been referred to a medical referee, & further alleged that the workman was not entitled to any compensation because the accident had not arisen out of & in the course of the employment. The medical referee reported that the workman was partially incapacitated, & two days later the parties arrived at an agreement for settlement. On argument as to the costs the sheriff-substitute held that the workman's appln. for arbn. was premature, unwarranted & unnecessary, & while awarding no costs on the reference to the medical referee, gave the costs of the alleged abortive arbn. proceedings to the employers. On appeal it was held by the Second Division of the Ct. of Session that the sheriff-substitute was wrong in depriving the workman of the costs of the arbn. proceedings on the ground stated by him, & remitted the question of costs to him for further argument. The employers appealed:—Held: the medical referee having no power to decide whether the accident arose out of or in the course of the employment, it was perfectly proper for the workman to take the earliest opportunity of getting that point determined by arbn., & was entitled to act as he had done.—BARR & HIGGINS, LTD. v. GREEN (1928), 98 L. The county ct. judge reduced the weekly payment to 10*s.*, & ordered the employers to pay the costs:—Held: on the correct reading of the letter stating the diminution claimed the employers were successful on the award given, & the order as to costs should be set aside, &, by consent of the employers, each party was ordered to pay their own costs.—MIDDLETON ESTATE & COLLIERY CO., LTD. v. FINAN (1926), 20 B. 4014c. —— Ambiguous answer by workman—Workman to pay costs.]—Employers asked for termination or diminution of a weekly payment to a workman on the ground that he was fit to resume work. The workman put in an answer in which he admitted that he was fit for light work, but alleged that the employers had neglected to provide any light work. He also said that he was prepared to accept such reduced compensation as might be found to be half the difference between his average pre-accident earnings & the average weekly amount he could earn at such light work as might be available for him. The county ct. judge made an award diminishing the weekly payment, & giving the costs to the employers on the ground that they had succeeded on the main issue, the answer being ambiguous, & leaving it open to the workman to argue at the hearing that his labour was an "odd lot" & that he was, therefore, entitled to resist any reduction. The workman appealed on the ground that the county ct. judge had failed to exercise judicially his discretion as to costs:—Held: the county ct. judge had not violated any principle of law in exercising his discretion as to costs. Appeal dismissed.—MIDLAND EMPLOYERS' MUTUAL ASSURANCE, LTD. v. LEWIS (1930), 23 B. W. C. C. 192, C. A.

She received compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act for a time, & then accepted £20 in purported settlement on the promise by the employer to re-employ her. No memorandum of this agreement was recorded. She worked at this employment for five years when, by reason of trade conditions, she was discharged. She then commenced an action against the employer for damages for personal injuries resultant from the employer's alleged breach of statutory duty to fence the machine. The action was tried by a judge alone who found that the injury had been caused by the employer's breach of statutory duty to fence, & that there was no contributory negligence on the part of pltf. He, however, also found, having regard to the fact that the infant had received employment for five years after her accident under the agreement, that the agreement to accept compensation, though not registered, was for her benefit & therefore binding, with the result that the action was barred by sect. 29 of the Act The infant appealed:—Held: without deciding whether the agreement was for the infant's benefit or whether further proceedings might be taken under Workmen's Compensation Act, the action for breach of statutory duty failed because, on the evidence, the machine was not a dangerous machine within Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 10, & therefore there was no duty on the employer to fence it. Further, on the evidence, the accident was caused by the negligence of pltf. which was a complete defence to the action even if such negligence had only been of a contributory character.—HIGGINS v. HARRISON (1932), 25 B. W. C. C. 113, C. A.

4072a. Appeal from order on question of law.]—Held: (1) an appeal lies (in Scotland by means of a reclaiming note) from an order of the ct. in the action assessing compensation under 1925 Act, s. 29 (2), but on the same principle as if the proceedings had been by arbn., namely, that the determination is final as to fact, but is open to review as to law; (2) upon the construction of 1925 Act, s. 29 (2), in conjunction with 1925 Act, s. 14 (1), the expression "within the time hereinbefore limited for taking proceedings under this Act" does not mean that the action must be brought within six months from the occurrence of the accident, but means that the claim must be made within the six months as a condition of taking proceedings for the recovery of compensation; if the conditions of sect. 14 (1) are complied with the Act imposes no limit of time within which the action must be brought.—M'CAFFERTY v. MACANDREWS & CO., LTD., [1930] A. 4083 iii. ——.]—On Jan. 22, 1926, a workman sustained injury by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. On Feb. 4 his wife received from his employers £3 as compensation for two weeks, & on Feb. 15 she received 30*s.* as compensation for a further week. She had no authority from the workman to apply for or obtain compensation, &, while he knew that she had received the payment of £3, he did not know that it had been paid as compensation. He knew, however, that the payment of 30*s.* made to his wife on Feb. 15 was a payment of compensation, & he allowed her to retain & use the money. The workman having subsequently brought an action against a third party to recover damages in respect of his injuries:—Held: he was barred from suing for damages, in respect that he had already recovered compensation within sect. 30 (1) of the 1925 Act.—REID v. STEVENSON, [1928] S. It was admitted that, for a period of 6 months from the date of the accident, pltf.'s employer had paid him weekly, upon the day of each week upon which his weekly salary was paid before the accident, an amount equal to half the amount of his previous salary. The ct. found as a fact that pltf. accepted the payments with the knowledge that they were made to him as being due under the Act:—Held: pltf. notwithstanding he had made no claim under the Act, had recovered compensation & so was barred under sect. 38.—DIXON v. SHAVE (1929), 50 N. 4137a. When right arises—Payment by guardians pending settlement of claim—By arbitration or agreement.]—In an action brought by debenture holders against a co. to realise their security receivers were appointed of the assets comprised in the debentures. At the date of their appointment there were a number of workmen in receipt of weekly payments from the co. as compensation for accidents suffered by them causing total or partial incapacity. These payments having ceased on the appointment of the receivers, the workmen were paid outdoor relief by the guardians. On an application by the guardians under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 41, for repayment of the money so expended by them:—Held: the words "pending the settlement of his claim" in sect. 41 did not refer to the settlement of the workman's claim by the payment of a lump sum, but to the settlement of compensation by an award or by agreement between the workman & the employer; therefore, as the claims of the workmen in the present case had long since been settled by the co. by the weekly sums, the guardians were not entitled to the repayment they claimed.—Re LEWIS MERTHYR CONSOLIDATED COLLIERIES, LLOYDS BANK v. THE CO. The evidence showed that M. failed to diagnose the ear-trouble from which pltf. suffered as mastoiditis, & although M. was not able to ascertain what the exact trouble was, he did not send for nor advise sending for an ear-specialist:—Held: all a medical practitioner is required to bring to the performance of his duty is reasonable care & average skill; & he is not responsible merely because some other practitioner of greater skill & greater knowledge might have prescribed a different treatment. If a physician in charge of a case is unable to diagnose the trouble he is under no legal obligation so to inform the patient & to advise the calling in of a specialist.—JARVIS v. INTERNATIONAL NICKEL CO., [1929] 2 D. After the operation pltf. was burnt by a hot-water jar, which, she alleged, had been placed in her bed by another patient, & she sued the defts for damages. She further averred that she had relied on the knowledge & skill of the nurse in applying the treatment. She did not aver that defenders had acted negligently in the selection of their medical or nursing staffs, or of the apparatus employed. Defenders averred, & the pursuer did not deny, that their electrical department was in charge of, & superintended by, a doctor, & that the treatment received by the pursuer was administered by the nurse upon his instructions:—Held: in the absence of any averment that the nurse or the doctor was professionally incompetent or that the apparatus was defective, pursuer had failed to state a relevant case against defenders, in respect that the averments disclosed that, at the time of the injury, the nurse was not acting in a ministerial or administrative capacity as a servant of defenders, but was exercising her professional care & skill, &, further, that she was acting under the instructions of a duly qualified doctor over whose orders the defenders had no control; & action dismissed.—LAVELLE v. GLASGOW ROYAL INFIRMARY, [1930] S. 86 viii. —— Negligent operation of apparatus.]—A boy of three years, a patient in deft. corpn.'s hospital, was scalded & burnt by steam escaping from an apparatus designed for his treatment by steam inhalation for pneumonia. The nurse in charge was absent from the room at the time, & was recalled by the boy's screams. She found the apparatus in order & was not able to account for the condition of the patient. In an action by the patient & his father to recover damages arising from the former's injuries, it was not shown how the accident happened, but there was evidence to show that the apparatus was safe if proper care was taken:—Held: the obligation of deft. corpn. being not merely to supply properly qualified nurses, but to nurse the patient, the only inference to be drawn from what happened was that there was an absence of proper care on the part of the hospital attendants, & deft. corpn. was liable for the negligence of its servants. Defenders averred, & pursuer did not deny, that their electrical department was in charge of, & was superintended by, a doctor, & that the treatment received by pursuer was administered by the nurse upon his instructions. The Second Division having dismissed the action as irrelevant the pursuer appealed to the House of Lords. The House, with the assent of the parties, reversed that decision & ordered a proof before answer.—ANDERSON OR LAVELLE v. GLASGOW ROYAL INFIRMARY, [1931] S. C. 34.—SCOT.

86 x. ——.]—An infirmary was governed by managers, none of whom took any control over the treatment of the patients. The nurses were engaged, & might be suspended, by the matron, whose duty it was to see that they were attentive to their duties. The electrical department of the infirmary was under the control of a director, who was a qualified medical practitioner, & its staff included several qualified nurses. The director prescribed for a patient treatment by ultra-violet rays. He did not specify the time for which the patient was to be exposed, but the regular period for a first exposure was ten minutes. The first exposure was supervised by a nurse, no doctor being present at the time. The patient was burned by the rays, & she alleged that her injuries were due to the negligence of the nurse in allowing her to be exposed for forty-five minutes. 201a. Constitution of Dental Board — Member ceasing to be member of General Medical Council & Branch Council—Vacation of office.]—Under Dentists Act, 1921 (c. 21), a Dental Board is constituted for the regulation & registration of members of the dental profession, & by Shed. I. the Board is to be composed of seven appointed members & six elected members. Of the appointed members three are to be appointed by the General Medical Council, of whom one shall be a member of the Branch Council for England. By para. 6 of the Sched. provision is made in the event of the place of a member of the Board becoming vacant before the expiration of his term of office by death, resignation or otherwise, for the filling of the vacancy:—Held: a member of the Board who had been

The latter had been found in his home in a very serious condition as the result of a wound from a shot-gun which had, apparently, been discharged by his own hand. Deft. was not there, but two friends, who were in the house, called in a doctor immediately after making the discovery. The doctor, considering the case to be a surgical one, brought in pltf. The wounded man said something to pltf., but the ct. found that he was in such a condition that no words of his could be construed as a request for pltf.'s services or as an acquiescence in their being rendered on a contractual basis:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover.—MATHESON v. SMILEY, [1932] 1 W. Exemption—Article of which properties "known admitted & approved of"—What amounts to.]—A retail chemist ordered a remedy for chest complaints to be made up by manufacturers in accordance with a formula which was contained in a well-known book of pharmaceutical formulas under the name "Chest Vapour Rub." He then put it into cartons, & sold it to the public with a label which described it as "Vapour Rub" & bore his trade mark. There was evidence that the words "Vapour Rub" alone described a class of medicines & not any individual one. In an action brought upon information by the A.-G. for non-payment of medicine stamp duty:—Held: "Vapour Rub," as described above, was not a remedy whose properties were "known, admitted & approved" within the exemption contained in the Sched. to Medicines Stamp Act, 1812 (c. 150).

Deft., a duly registered chemist & druggist, sold & offered for sale (inter alia) lysol, a poison, from an automatic machine which he had placed just outside the door of his shop:—Held: the sale of the lysol by means of the automatic machine was not an offence under Pharmacy Act, 1868 (c. 121), s. 15, & Poisons & Pharmacy Act, 1908 (c. 55), s. 3. 260b. —— Exercise of control sufficient.]—Held: the words "bona fide conducted" in Poisons & Pharmacy Act, 1908 (c. 55), s. 3 (1), were wider than the words "carries on the business." They meant that the business might be conducted by a person who did not himself perform every act which formed part of the business; it was enough that he controlled & regulated it & had the power, which he exercised, of giving orders as to how it should be carried on. Accordingly, it was not sufficient to make it an offence under the section that one sale was not conducted by the chemist himself or by some other duly registered pharmaceutical chemist. How many sales must be proved was a question of degree & therefore of fact.—PHARMACEUTICAL SOCIETY COUNCIL OF GREAT BRITAIN v. FULLER (1932), 96 J. P. 422; 48 T. L. R. 643; 30 L. G. R. 468, C. A.

Neither owner nor occupier having complied with a notice under sect. 5 of 1898 Act to take the bridge down or otherwise secure it, or with an order to the same effect made by a metropolitan police magistrate under sect. 107 of 1894 Act, the London County Council acting under their statutory powers took down the bridge themselves & then forthwith brought a complaint to recover the expenses thereof from the owners in fee simple :—Held : the complaint was rightly dismissed, as by sect. 173 (1) of 1894 Act, proceedings to recover their expenses must proceed in the first instance against the owner immediately entitled in possession to the premises or the occupier.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. STILGOE, [1932] 1 K. 98a. Height of wall for purpose of determining thickness—Bressummers between each storey —Whether one wall or series of walls.]—A building in London was constructed as follows : The front & rear exterior walls of the basement storey, & the rear exterior wall of the ground storey were on a different vertical plane from the front & rear exterior walls on the first, second, & third storeys. There was no front exterior wall on the ground storey, but in lieu thereof a shop front. The front & rear exterior walls were, respectively, in one vertical plane throughout the height of the first, second, & third storeys. Between each storey there was a metal girder or bressummer. These metal girders or bressummers were supported by metal pillars, those at the front standing at the ground floor level on brick pillars, those at the rear going down into foundation under the basement floor level. The wall or piece of wall between the first & second floors stood on one of those metal girders or bressummers. If this wall or piece of wall were taken away, the wall or piece of wall between the second floor & the roof would remain in position. The same facts applied mutatis mutandis to the walls or piece of wall between the second & third floors & the third floor & roof. The walls on each floor depended for their strength & support upon the girders or bressummers upon which they were built. The walls from outside appeared to be each one solid wall. The height of the building from the first floor to the top of the topmost storey was 38 feet. The height of the first storey was 14 feet, of the second 13 feet, & of the third 11 feet. On a complaint by the district surveyor for contravening the London Building Act, 1894, the builders contended that for the purpose of determining the thickness of the walls, the exterior wall of each storey at the front & at the back was a separate wall, that of the first storey 14 feet, that of the second 13 feet, & that of the third 11 feet, respectively. The metropolitan magistrate upheld this contention:—Held: without considering the question whether the walls began at the ground level, the front & rear walls were each one wall from the first floor to the top of the topmost storey, & consequently their height for the purpose of determining the thickness of the walls was 38 feet.—BLACK v. PARKER (GEORGE) & SONS, LTD. 119a. Compliance with dangerous structure notice by lessor—Right of entry—Duty to give notice to lessee.]—Defts. granted to first pltf. a lease of the second & third floors of certain premises in London with a covenant for quiet enjoyment, & the first pltf. sub-let the third floor to the second pltf. During the currency of the lease the London County Council served on defts. a dangerous structure notice in respect of the whole building, & defts. entered on both the demised floors to carry out the work necessitated by the notice. In an action in which first pltf. claimed damages for breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment, & in which second pltf. claimed damages for trespass, defts. pleaded that they were under no liability, as they were bound to do the work. Defts. had not served on pltfs., as occupiers, a notice, under 1894 Act, s. 192, of the intention to enter the premises & do the work required:—Held: defts. had no right of entry without complying with sect. 192, & both pltfs. were entitled to damages.—TROTTER v. LOUTH (1931), 47 T. 327a. —— —— ——.]—In considering whether it is in the national interest to grant ancillary rights to facilitate the proper & efficient working of minerals under Mines (Working Facilities & Support) Act, 1923 (c. 20), the Railway & Canal Commission is entitled to take into account not only difficulties which physically obstruct the getting & carrying away of minerals, but also economic difficulties which militate against their effective marketing.

The expressions "carrying away" in sect. 1 (2), & "conveyance of minerals" in sect. 3 (2) (b), of the Act are to be construed not in a technical sense, but broadly as entitling the person to whom ancillary rights are granted under the Act to transport the minerals from the land where they have been won for sale elsewhere.

The Railway & Canal Commission made an order granting to a colliery co. the ancillary right under the Act to construct an aerial ropeway over the land of other persons from their colliery to Dover, a distance of seven miles, which would enable them to transport their minerals more cheaply & more conveniently than by other means :—Held : the Railway & Canal Commission had jurisdiction to make this order.—Re TILMANSTONE (KENT) COLLIERIES, LTD., [1928] 1 K. Cost of erecting barrier—Although damage not yet occurred.]—The owners of a coal mine sued the lessees of an adjacent mine for damages in consequence of an encroachment upon, & removal of coal from, their mine:—Held: as part of the damages pltfs. could recover the cost of erecting an artificial barrier to protect their mine from the risk of fire, water, or foul gases coming through the encroaching galleries worked by defts.; they were not bound to wait until that risk actually emerged, & an artificial barrier was necessary, as pltfs. were entitled to work out the pillars of coal left by defts. in the encroaching galleries.—ADJAI COAL CO. v. PANNA LAL GHOSH (1930), 57 L. Part VIII.—Absolute Dispositions.

651a. —— Reservation of "mines, minerals, & mineral substances"—Whether sand & gravel included.]—(1) Primâ facie the meaning of the word "minerals" both in private deeds & in statutory provisions will yield to the expressed or implied intention of the parties. (2) In arriving at the construction of a reservation of mines & minerals in a private deed, regard must be had to cases relating to the construction of the words "mines & minerals" in statutory provisions. (3) The two main principles to be gathered from the authorities are: that the word "minerals" when found in a reservation out of a grant of land means substances, exceptional in use, in value & in character, & does not mean the ordinary soil of the district which, if reserved, would practically swallow up the grant, & (4) in deciding whether or not in a particular case exceptional substances are "minerals" the true test is what the word means in the vernacular of the mining world, the commercial world & landowners at the time of the grant & whether the particular substance came within that meaning. (5) The question whether a given substance is or is not a "mineral" within the meaning of the instrument in which it is mentioned is a question of fact to be decided according to the circumstances of the particular case. (6) For all practical purposes "minerals" & "mineral substances" are synonymous terms, & the latter yields to the expressed or implied intention of the parties as much as the former, & accordingly what is said in the authorities as to the meaning of the word "minerals" applies with equal force to the words "mineral substances." (7) A conveyance of land made in 1925 contained a reservation of "all mines, minerals, & mineral substances":—Held: that the words must be construed according to their meaning in the vernacular of the mining world, the commercial world & landowners at the time of the execution of the conveyance, & that, upon the evidence, the words did not include sand or gravel.—WARING v. FODEN, WARING v. BOOTH CRUSHED GRAVEL CO., LTD., [1932] 1 Ch. 276; 101 L. st. Chattels appurtenant to lease—What are.]—Pltf. obtained an option on several mining leases. The ground had previously been worked by one H., who constructed a water system for washing the gravel, but after operating for a time abandoned the property, leaving certain chattels used in connection with the water system on the ground. Upon pltf. co. commencing operations it purchased the chattels from H.'s estate & used them until it in turn abandoned the properties. The owners took possession & refused to give up the chattels, claiming that the water licences authorising pltf. to use water were together with all works constructed appurtenant to the lease, & could not be separated from the property:—Held: defts had not satisfied the burden of proof which was upon them to show that these chattels were in fact to be regarded as part of the works which are appurtenant to the leases. They were in fact parts of the mining machinery & appliances for recovering the gold, not of the water system, & were quite separate & distinct from those works, & not attached in any way to them or to the soil.—ENNIS GOLD MINING CO. v. HENDERSON (1927), 39 B. They tapped the gas by pipes & for six years used it for their own purposes:—Held: applt. was not entitled to compensation for the gas so taken since (a) that right was not included in the right to royalties upon the oil won; & (b) the lease on its true construction was not merely a lease for the purpose of winning oil, & applt. having no property in the gas, respts. were entitled to reduce into possession & use it, provided they did so without injury to the leased property.—U PO NAING v. BURMA OIL CO., LTD. 1106a. Wages agreement—Decision of chairman of conciliation board—Whether award.]—By a Conciliation Board agreement provision was made for the payment of a subsistence allowance to low-paid colliery workers in South Wales, &, the parties having failed to agree as to the amount & conditions of payment, the matter came before the independent chairman of the board, & he gave a decision. The parties failed to agree as to the interpretation of the decision, & representative workmen then brought an action against representative employers for declarations, (a) that on the true construction of the decision the subsistence allowance ought to be calculated for each shift separately, & (b) as to the method of reckoning overtime for the purpose of calculating subsistence allowance. The judge in chambers, on the grounds that the wages agreement incorporating the conciliation agreement amounted to a submission to arbitration, & that the chairman's decisions were awards, made an order that the action be adjourned & that the awards be remitted to the chairman to deal with the two questions raised by the pleadings. The Ct. of Appeal set aside the order of the judge & granted the declarations claimed :—Held : the chairman had decided both questions in favour of pltfs. & they were entitled to the declarations claimed—CARDIFF COLLIERIES, LTD. v. MEREDITH (1929), 45 T. 1126a. —— —— Act need not be unlawful.]—A checkweigher at a certain pit was also secretary of the local branch of the miners' union of which the men employed at that pit were members. It had been the custom of the district to work a short shift on a Saturday. The colliery gave notice that a full shift would in future be worked at that pit on a Saturday instead of a short shift. The checkweigher tried to persuade the managers of the colliery to work only a short shift on Saturdays. On the Friday he chalked on the pavements in the neighbourhood of the colliery words to the effect that the workmen at that pit had decided at a mass meeting not to work on Saturday unless a short shift should be worked. On Saturday a number of miners assembled at the pit in their pit clothes with their water bottles filled & day's food. After the checkweigher had been told by the manager that the mine would work a full shift instead of a short shift, he went to the men & said: "It's a full shift. Come on, lads," & walked away, & the men did the same & did not work that day:—Held: there was evidence upon which the justices were entitled to come to the conclusion that the checkweigher had interfered with the management of the mine contrary to Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887 (c. 58), s. 13, & to make an order removing him from his office of checkweigher.

Per AVORY, J. It was sufficient that the act of the checkweigher did in fact interfere with the management of the mine. It was not necessary that the act should be unlawful either as being in breach of some statute or unlawful according to the common law.—HAMPTON v. WEST CANNOCK COLLIERY CO., LTD., [1932] 2 K. They made a similar agreement with one S. that he should be vice-chairman of the board at a salary of £6,000 a year. While acting as chairman & vice-chairman respectively, B. & S. entered on their own account into secret speculations in cocoa, a commodity in which the N. Co. dealt, of such a character as, on the finding of the jury in answer to a specific question, would have justified the L. Co. in terminating their agreements of service & the N. Co. in dismissing them from their offices of chairman & vice-chairman. Subsequently the N. Co. became amalgamated with another co., & it became necessary to cancel the appointments of B. & S. as chairman & vice-chairman. Being unaware of the aforesaid breaches of duty by B. & S., the L. Co. agreed to pay to B. £30,000 & to S. £20,000 as compensation for terminating their services; B. & S. agreed to accept these sums, & they were duly paid. The jury, in answer to a further specific question, found that the L. Co. if they had been aware of the breaches of duty by B. & S. would have terminated their agreements, & B. & S. would have been dismissed from their offices without any compensation. The action in which the jury so found was brought in the first instance by the L. Co. alone, the N. Co. being joined in the course of the proceedings as co-pltfs. against B. & S., claiming rescission of the compensation agreements & repayment of the sums paid thereunder on the ground of 36a. —— Payment of tax.]—The suppliant co. paid betting duty under Finance Act, 1926 (c. 22), s. 15, in respect of a totalisator, & afterwards the House of Lords, in a precisely similar case, held that betting duty was not payable. The suppliant co. then presented a petition of right claiming the return of the amount of the duty on the ground that it had been paid under a mistake of fact :—Held : the suppliants' mistake as to their liability to the duty was a mistake of law & not of fact, & therefore they could not recover.—NATIONAL PARI-MUTUEL ASSOCN., LTD. v. R. Part III.—Mistake of Fact.

58a. ——.]—The L. Co., who held more than 99 per cent. of the share capital of N. Co., agreed with one B. that he should be in the service of L. Co. for a term of years, during which he should act as chairman of the board of directors of N. Co. at a salary of £8,000 a year. They made a similar agreement with one S. that he should be vice-chairman of the board at a salary of £6,000 a year. While acting as chairman & vice-chairman respectively, B. & S. entered on their own account into secret speculations in cocoa, a commodity in which N. Co. dealt, of such a character as, on the finding of the jury in answer to a specific question, would have justified the L. Co. in terminating their agreements of service & N. Co. in dismissing them from their offices of chairman & vice-chairman. Subsequently N. Co. became amalgamated with another co., & it became necessary to cancel the appointments of B. & S. as chairman & vice-chairman. Being unaware of the aforesaid breaches of duty by B. & S., L. Co. agreed to pay to B. £30,000 & to S. £20,000 as compensation for terminating their services ; B. & S. agreed to accept these sums, & they were duly paid. The jury, in answer to a further specific question, found that the L. Co. if they had been aware of the breaches of duty by B. & S. would have terminated their agreements, & B. & S. would have been dismissed from their offices without any compensation. The action in which the jury so found was brought in the first instance by the L. Co. alone, N. Co. being joined in the course of the proceedings as co-pltfs., against B. & S., claiming rescission of the compensation agreements & repayment of sums paid thereunder on the ground of fraudulent misrepresentation, & alternatively, as the House construed the points of claim, on the ground of unilateral mistake induced by fraud, but not on any ground of mutual mistake innocently made by the defts. so far as they were concerned. There was a specific alternative claim that the agreements of settlement & the payments under them were made under a mistake of fact. The jury negatived the charges of fraud, & found that at the time of negotiating the compensation agreements B. & S. had not in mind their breaches of duty :—Held : the action failed ; as to mutual mistake, on the ground that the mutual mistake related not to the subject-

Deft., however, pleaded that she informed pltf.'s agent that she desired an option only, & that later the agent saw her & said that he had seen pltf. & "fixed it up." She alleged that the contract which was signed was put forward & signed in the belief that it gave effect to an agreement for an option only. 203a. ——.]—P. & M., who had been partners as garage proprietors, agreed to dissolve the partnership as from Mar. 4, 1929, on the terms, as was found, that M. should take over all liabilities of the firm incurred after Mar. 4. P. informed his father, who was a solr., of the dissolution of the partnership, & the father prepared a written agreement to carry it out. By this document M. was made liable to indemnify P. in respect of all rent due before Mar. 4. This agreement was handed to M., who was asked to read it, & he looked through it & signed it, although he said he could not understand it. On a claim by P. to be indemnified in accordance with the written agreement in respect of rent accrued due before Mar. 4, M. pleaded that he signed the agreement under the belief that it embodied the oral agreement of Mar. 4, that it was drawn up under a mutual mistake of fact, & that the only agreement arrived at was that M. should indemnify P. to the extent agreed upon orally. Fraud was not pleaded, nor was rectification claimed in the pleadings. At the trial the judge found that M. signed the agreement handed to him with practically no consideration of its terms, & that as a stipulation had been inserted therein which he had not orally agreed to, that term could not be relied upon, &, accordingly, that the written agreement must be rectified to make it conform to the oral agreement. P. appealed:—Held: (1) as M. knew that the agreement which he signed was an agreement for the dissolution of the partnership between him & P., it was not open to him, in the absence of fraud or misrepresentation by P. as to the legal effect of the document, to rely on the plea of non est factum merely because if he had carefully read & understood the document he would have objected to one of its terms as not in accordance with the oral agreement; (2) in the absence of any allegation of fraud or conduct amounting to fraud, & in the absence of any claim for rectification, it was not open to the judge to rectify the written agreement; (3) there was no evidence of mutual mistake.—BLAY v. POLLARD & MORRIS, [1930] 1 K. 17b. Bill payable abroad—Sum in sterling—Of "value cheque on London."]—Resp., a British subject residing in Manchester, was in the habit of consigning Manchester goods to customers in Beyrout. The course of business was for him to draw a bill at sight on the customers for the amount in sterling, representing the cost of the goods & commission, & to hand it, with the bills of lading & invoices, to the Manchester branch of applts., a bank incorporated in Turkey. The Manchester branch then made an advance to him on the bill, & sent the documents to their Beyrout branch, who collected the price from the customer in exchange for the goods. On the Manchester branch being advised by the Beyrout branch that the price had been paid, a cheque for the sterling value of the goods, less any advance made, was handed to resp. In accordance with this practice resp. consigned to Beyrout goods which arrived there shortly before the outbreak of war, on Nov. 5, 1914, between this country & Turkey, on which date applts. held the bills & the documents representing the goods. The bills were in the following form: "Please pay to our order value cheque on London the sum of £ sterling. Shipping documents attached to be given up on payment." After the outbreak of war the Beyrout branch of applts. delivered the goods to the customers, taking payment in piastres of a sum fixed by the Beyrout branch as the price of sterling in London, & on the conclusion of the war, the piastres having fallen in value, the applts. claimed that they were only liable to pay the resp. an amount in sterling which at the then current rate of exchange represented the value of the piastres they had received for the goods. Resps. sued applts. to recover the sterling amount of the bills, or, alternatively, damages for the conversion of the goods:—Held: the words "value cheque on London" meant that the payment, which would ordinarily be in Turkish currency, must be so calculated on the exchange of the day as to represent the price of a cheque on London for the amount of the bill.—OTTOMAN BANK v. JEBARA, [1928] A. In 1930 he demanded repayment of the balance of his account in gold, but the bank refused to pay otherwise than in the paper piastres which were then the currency at Smyrna. In an action against the bank to recover the value of the the balance on a gold basis with compound interest evidence was given that by decisions of the Turkish Cts., even if the original con-

17e. Insurance policy—Application of Treaty of Lausanne.]—In 1909 an insurance co., whose principal place of business at all times material was at Trieste, issued a policy to a man & his wife, Ottoman subjects domiciled in Palestine, agreeing that upon the death of either the co. would pay 10,000 gold francs to the survivor. Trieste was Austrian territory in 1909, but in 1920 it became Italian territory under the Treaty of St. Germain. The Treaty of Lausanne made between the allied powers, including Italy, & the Ottoman Empire was signed on July 24, 1923, & became part of the municipal law of Palestine in 1924. The Treaty, as translated, provided that "life assurance policies contracted in currencies other than Turkish pounds, entered into before Oct. 29, 1914, between cos. possessing at this date [actuellement] the nationality of an allied power & Turkish nationals" should be settled, if the amount was stipulated in gold francs, by paying French francs for the period before Nov. 18, 1915, & Turkish paper pounds for the period after that date. The wife having died in 1925, the husband claimed 10,000 gold francs under the policy. The co. was willing to pay 10,000 francs at the then rate of exchange in Paris ; that was more favourable to the assured than payment in Turkish pounds :—Held : the provision of the Treaty of Lausanne applied, as the co. was of Italian nationality at the date of the Treaty, & consequently the assured was not entitled to payment in gold francs.—ASSICURAZIONI GENERALI v. SELIM COTRAN, [1932] A. He informed applts. that his life was in danger in Constantinople from the Turkish authorities, & asked to be transferred to a branch outside Turkey. That being refused he fled from Constantinople. He was dismissed without notice, & brought an action for wrongful dismissal :—Held : conversion into sterling of the damages in Turkish currency in respect of resp.'s pension under the contract should be at the rate of exchange at the date of his dismissal, not at the date of the judgment.—OTTOMAN BANK v. CHAKARIAN, [1930] A. interest at 80 per cent. per annum until payment. If default were made the whole unpaid principal & interest thereon became due & was to carry interest in the case of the first sum at 60 per cent. per annum & in the case of the other two sums at 80 per cent. per annum from the date of default until payment. In intended compliance with Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6, in each case before the money was lent there was made & signed by the borrower a note or memorandum of the contract stating that the sum referred to therein was advanced on the security of a promissory note, but not stating where repayment of the sum was to be made. 353b. —— —— Substituted contract in settlement of action to recover loan.]—The male deft. borrowed, by promissory note, money from pltfs., a firm of money-lenders, & agreed to repay the same by monthly instalments. In this transaction the requirements of Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6, were duly complied with. The borrower made default in paying the instalments, whereupon pltfs. issued a writ to recover the amount. Negotiations then took place, & in the result an arrangement was made by which the male deft. & the second deft., his wife, gave pltfs. a joint & several promissory note in respect of the amount unpaid on the first promissory note, an amount for interest, & certain agreed costs. A memorandum of this contract was signed by both defts., but no copy was sent to them within seven days, as required by sect. 6. The amount of the promissory note not having been repaid on the due date, pltfs. sued defts. to recover the same:— Held: (1) although the contract sued on was a substituted agreement for, or a variation of, the original contract entered into by the male deft., it was nevertheless a contract "for the repayment by a borrower of money lent to him" within sect. 6; (2) as a copy of the contract had not been sent as required by that sect., the contract was unenforceable against the male deft.; (3) it was likewise unenforceable against the female deft., inasmuch as it appeared that she signed the promissory note solely as a surety, & the male deft. not being liable she also was discharged from liability.—ELDRIDGE & MORRIS v. TAYLOR, [1931] 2 K. & 48 per cent. per annum interest, he must satisfy the ct. that, in all the circumstances of the case, the rate of interest which he claims to recover is not excessive & that the transaction is not harsh & unconscionable. Although the borrower does not appear to the writ, or does not further defend the action, the onus is still on pltf. money-lender to satisfy the ct. on these two points. He must therefore prove a transaction which comes within Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6, & consequently he must prove a note or memorandum of the contract made in accordance with that sect.

(2) Such a note or memorandum is a memorandum of a contract within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 1 & Sched. I. to that Act, & therefore must be stamped with a 6*d.* stamp.—PARKFIELD TRUST, LTD. v. DENT, [1931] 2 K. B. 579; 101 L. J. K. B. 6; 146 L. T. 90.

353q. —— Renewal—Must appear on second memorandum.]—When the time for payment of an original loan granted by a money-lender has expired without complete repayment, there is no objection to extending the time for repayment on altered terms by treating the old loan as paid off by means of a new loan on the altered terms, provided that the fact that this is being done is shown on the face of the second memorandum signed by the borrower before the new security is given. Such a memorandum is signed by the borrower before the money is lent within the meaning of sect. 6 (1) of the Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6 (1).

At the time when the second memorandum is signed neither a cheque nor cash need be handed over by the money-lender to the borrower & then returned. 353r. —— —— ——.]—(1) Every contract between a money-lender & a borrower for the repayment by the latter of money lent to him, & that includes a promise by the borrower to pay the balance of money previously lent to him, is brought within the purview of Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 6. Where a transaction is the renewal of an old loan, the fact that it is such ought to be set out in the memorandum in order to comply with sect. 6.

(2) If the transaction between a money-lender & a borrower is unenforceable against the borrower by reason of non-compliance by the money-lender with the requirements of sect. 6, for example, by the omission from the memorandum of the date on which the loan was made, it is equally unenforceable against a person who has guaranteed the payment of the debt.

(3) A security "given by the borrower" within sect. 6 of the Act of 1927 may take the form of a guarantee given by a third party.

(4) Gaskell v. Askwith (1929), 45 T. L. R. 566, did not decide that a mere clerical error in the memorandum required by sect. 6 will invalidate the memorandum; & it must not be taken that a mere clerical error will have that effect (SCRUTTON, L.J.).

377a. Before proceedings taken by money-lender for recovery of money lent.]—(1) A county ct. has jurisdiction under Money-lenders Act, 1900 (c. 51), s. 1 (2), to entertain an application by a borrower from a registered money-lender to reopen a money-lending transaction, only when the amount of the money lent, whether repayable by instalments or otherwise, without the addition of any claims arising under any agreement to pay interest or an amount charged for "expenses, inquiries, fines, bonus, premium, renewals, or any other charges," is within the jurisdiction of the county ct.

(2) If this condition is fulfilled, the ct. may entertain the application, although the money-lender has not taken any proceedings to recover the money lent, & although the time has not come for taking such proceedings.—CROSSINGHAM v. PARK, [1928] 1 K. B. 330; 96 L. J. K. B. 1036; 137 L. T. 651; 43 T. L. R. 647, D. C.

380a. Construction of Moneylenders Acts—Whether in favour of lender.]—TEMPERANCE LOAN FUND, LTD. v. ROSE, No. 353r, ante.

381a. —— —— ——.]—(1) Held: in Money-lenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), s. 5 (3), the words "no person shall act as such agent or canvasser" must be construed as meaning "no person shall act as an agent or canvasser employed by a money-lender or any person on his behalf for the purpose of inviting any person to borrow money or to enter into any transaction involving the borrowing of money from a money-lender." The Act does not, therefore, prohibit canvassing or touting for this purpose, where the canvasser acts without the authority or mandate of the money-lender to whom he is introducing a customer.

(2) Although a rate of interest on a loan not exceeding 48 per cent. does not carry the legal presumption introduced by sect. 10 of the Act that the transaction is harsh & unconscionable; yet, where in addition to his contract for repayment of the loan the borrower gives a bill of sale over his furniture of ample security for such repayment, a rate of 48 per cent. is, in such circumstances, so excessive as to render the transaction harsh & unconscionable for the purposes of Money-lenders Act, 1900 (c. 51), s. 1.—VERNER-JEFFREYS v. PINTO, [1929] 1 Ch. 401; 98 L. o i. —— ——.]—Under Act Respecting Homesteads, s. 2, the registrar cannot register a mtge. of homestead land if the same is not signed by mtgor.'s wife, although in a paper attached to the mtge. she purports to have relinquished her homestead rights in favour of mtgee.—Re LAND TITLES ACT, [1919] 1 W. W. R. 711.—CAN.

o ii. —— —— & acknowledgment.] —A mtge. by a husband of his homestead was in fact consented to by his wife of her own free will & knowing what it was. To it was attached her written consent & a certificate by a comr. of her acknowledgment of execution of it of her own free will, etc. Being on its face in compliance with the Dower Act, 1917, it was registered. The facts, however, were that the wife had not made before the comr. the acknowledgment to which he certified. The husband had participated in this breach of the statute in order, apparently, to save his wife, who was in ill-health, the inconvenience of going from the farm to the comr.'s office:—Held: since the wife's consent was not evidenced in the manner prescribed by the statute, the mtge. was, in this sense, not made with her consent, & was null & void as against her dower right; there were no grounds for holding her estopped. But since the husband by his conduct had induced the mtgee. to believe that his wife's consent had been properly & regularly given & the mtgee. had on the strength of this belief parted with the property for the payment of which the mtge. was security, the husband was estopped from setting up her lack of effective consent as a defence to an action on the mtge. Moreover, he was, in any event, personally liable on the covenant.—PARSLOW v. MOORE, [1930] 2 W. W. R. 310; 4 D. L. R. 750.—CAN.

1017a. Mortgage by company—Dissolution of company—Whether bona vacantia.]—In 1899 a limited co. mortgaged to trustees of a will certain leasehold properties by way of absolute assignment subject to the equity of redemption. In 1910 the co. went into liquidation, & in 1913, the trustees having called in the mtge., the co. made default & the trustees appointed a receiver. In 1916 the co. was dissolved, the income of the property being at that time insufficient to meet the mtge. interest, & nothing was done in respect of the equity of redemption as the liquidator considered it to be of no value. The value of the property having since largely increased, the surviving trustee claimed to be entitled to the property absolutely, & the Crown claimed the equity of redemption as bona vacantia :—Held : (1) Cos. Act, 1929 (c. 23), s. 296, did not apply, as that section was not retrospective; (2) after the disappearance of the legal entity which had had the right of redemption the Crown was entitled to the property as bona vacantia.

(3) The equity of redemption, then, was a right of property which could be disposed of by the mtgor. In a general sense the mtgee. was not a trustee for the mtgor.; their interests were antagonistic, though the mtgee. might be trustee in a limited sense—that was, in respect of surplus purchase-

The provision in Real Property Act, R. S. M., 1913, s. 114, that a mtgee. upon default by the mtgor. The widow died in 1923, having appointed her two daughters, E. & A., exors. of her will. The mtge. contained no personal covenant for payment of the principal, & the mtgee. accepted interest at 3½ per cent., reduced in 1924 to 3 per cent. In 1924 W., who was on very friendly terms with his brother's family, gave the deeds relating to the farm, other than the mtge. deed, to E. & A. to retain in their custody. On Dec. 11, 1927, W., who had since 1922 been suffering from an incurable disease & knew that he could not possibly live long, called upon his nieces, who were aware of his state of health, & gave them an envelope indorsed in his own handwriting : " Deeds relating to X. farm to be given up at death. W.," saying : " I have brought this down for you ; put it away." After he had left the house the envelope was opened, & was found to contain the mtge., which the nieces placed in their safe. Co., on mtge. of real estate, $30,000, at 7½ per cent. interest, but stipulated that, in consideration of making the loan, it should receive a bonus of $3,000, to which T. Co. agreed. The mtge. on its face was one for $30,000, bearing interest half-yearly at 7½ per cent. per annum, & containing no reference to the bonus. Applt. issued its cheque to T. Co. for $28,505.55, being the $30,000 less deductions for taxes, insurance premiums & solrs.' costs, & took a cheque from T. Co. for the $3,000 bonus. Some payments were made, but T. Co. became insolvent, &, the mtge. being in arrear, applt. advertised the property for sale, & the liquidator paid off the amount owing, on the basis of the full face amount of the mtge., without knowledge of the bonus. He sued to recover the $3,000, with interest paid thereon, invoking sects. 6 to 9 of Interest Act, R. S. C., 1927 (c. 102):—Held: he could not recover. The agreement for the bonus was legal & enforceable. The Act did not apply; in view of the effect of the legislation in question, its application should be confined to mtges. coming clearly within its description; &, taking the precise language of sect. 6, it applies only to mtges. which on their face come within the description in that sect.—LONDON LOAN & SAVINGS CO. In 1924 & 1926 B. made further advances to Mrs. J., who was the owner in fee, upon the same securities. Mrs. J. died in 1926. In Jan. 1927 her trustees applied for & were granted a further advance on the same securities by B., whose solrs. had attended to the previous transactions. The deed secured an immediate advance, & it also secured all the previous existing securities, although the old securities had been kept on foot for the purpose of preserving priorities, & there was a new proviso for redemption. B.'s solrs. carried in a bill for taxation, the charges being according to the scale in Sched. I., Part I., of the General Order under Solrs.' Remuneration Act, 1881 (c. 44), for "investigating title & preparing & completing deed of security." The taxing master took the view that Sched. I. did not apply, & taxed the bill accordingly:—Held: there had been an "investigation of title" within Sched. I., & the matter must be referred back to the taxing master.—Re COWARD, CHANCE & Co., [1928] Ch. 379; 97 L. J. Ch. 234; 139 L. T. 113; 72 Sol. Jo. 225.

The mtgor. attended the sale & bid for the property, but her bid was not accepted; & the highest genuine bidder was declared the purchaser. The mtgor. claiming that she had purchased the property, registered an estate contract in respect of it & sued the vendors for specific performance. The action was dismissed with costs. Upon a summons taken out by the first mtgees. against the second mtgees.:—Held: the costs of the action & of taking the estate contract off the register were not "costs, charges or expenses, properly incurred incident to the sale" within Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 105, & the first mtgees. were not entitled to deduct them from the net proceeds of the sale.—Re SMITH'S MORTGAGE, HARRISON v. EDWARDS, [1931] 2 Ch. 168; 100 L. One of the conditions of the licence was that defts. should make good all damage done to premises X. by reason of the demolition operations. In the course of the operations defts. allowed debris to drop on an inaccessible part of the roof of premises X. & did not remove all the debris therefrom when the demolition work was completed. In July pltf. became the occupier of premises X. under a lease. In Sept. a heavy storm of rain washed the debris which had been left by defts. on the roof of premises X. into the gutters on the roof, & a gulley was choked & the basement of premises X. was flooded, & goods which pltf. kept there were damaged. The bottle was bought from a retailer, but the mouse, unknown to the manufacturers, was in the bottle when it left their factory. It was possible for mice to enter empty bottles at a factory, but the manufacturers' system of cleansing & inspecting the bottles before filling was the best system known in the trade. There was no affirmative proof of carelessness by any of the manufacturers' servants in carrying out the system :—Held : defenders fell to be assoilzied ; on the ground that, as defenders neither knew that the contents of the bottle were dangerous, nor were dealers in articles per se dangerous, they owed no duty to the consumers, who had not contracted with them.—MULLEN v. BARR & CO., LTD., M'GOWAN v. BARR & CO., LTD., [1929] S. Pltf. took a team over a private way leading to the co.'s limits, & in crossing a culvert one of the horses met with an accident by stepping upon a board which broke under its weight. Pltf. charged negligence in respect of the rotten condition of the board. There was no evidence that deft. co. placed the board there, or knew or should have known of its presence there :—Held : pltf. had failed to prove any negligence of deft. co.—GUERTIN v. FASSETT LUMBER CO., [1931] 4 D. 242 i. Spectator at public exhibition.]—At a motor cycle race meeting conducted by a co., a spectator was injured through a motor cycle getting out of control, & after colliding with another motor cycle, jumping over the fence. The racing took place at high speeds on a flat track surrounded by a wire mesh safety fence, a foot outside which was a picket fence of the same height. In addition, in places, there was another fence erected on top of the picket fence. Outside the picket fence there were seats, & the heads of persons sitting thereon would be below the level of the picket & safety fences. The spectator, who had not been to motor cycle races before, attended in consequence of an advertisement, paid for admission, & took a seat at a place where there was no fence above the picket fence. He saw a notice: "Danger. Do not lean on fence." He assumed that the fence gave him sufficient protection. Unknown to the spectator, a motor cycle had on a previous occasion similarly gone over the fence :—Held : deft. was liable.—CHATWOOD v. NATIONAL SPEEDWAYS, LTD., [1929] S. R. (Q.) 29.—AUS.

On part of this land the "Atlantic Flyer" was erected by S., under the terms of an agreement with resps., by which a part of the land at "Dreamland" was taken over by S. for the purpose of erecting & running the "Atlantic Flyer." Resps. under the agreement were to be paid 33⅓ per cent. of S.'s gross receipts, but all moneys were in the first instance to be paid to the resps., who had the right to appoint the cashiers. Under rules & regulations attached to the agreement, a right was reserved to resps. to refuse admission to any person & to charge for admission to the ground. S. was bound to provide at his own expense a ticket-taker. Resps. advertised inviting persons to "Dreamland." W. was killed while on one of the boats of the "Flyer" in consequence of a bolt giving way & the occupants being flung out. Applt., as his mother & partial dependant, claimed damages under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), against resps.:—Held: on the terms & rules of the agreement, there was no contractual relation between resps. & deceased, & as the advertisements of resps. did no more than invite people to the area of land owned by them, there was no invitation to deceased to enter upon property on which there was a hidden danger under the control of the inviter.—HUMPHREYS v. DREAMLAND (MARGATE), LTD. As the result of a collision between two motor cars near the railing behind which pltf. was standing one of the cars leapt into the air & went right through the railing, with the result that pltf. & several other spectators sustained serious personal injuries. It was not disputed that this accident was the first time when any spectator had been injured by a car leaving the track. In an action claiming damages for personal injuries the jury found (inter alia) that defts. had omitted to take reasonable precautions for the safety of spectators, & awarded damages to pltf. On appeal:—Held: there was no evidence that defts. had failed to take proper care to make their premises reasonably safe for spectators. Defts. were not under any obligation to insure safety under all circumstances, but only to provide against damage to spectators which any reasonable person in their position would have anticipated as likely to happen. 309a. —— ——.]—A piece of waste land, whose owner was laying it out as a building estate, adjoined the highway & was unfenced, & the children of the neighbourhood, without any licence to do so, used it as a playground. On the land there was a large elm tree, & by a contract between the owner & deft., who was a nurseryman, the latter undertook to fell the tree. On the day on which the tree was expected to fall there were many children on the land, & deft. or his assistant more than once drove them back from the tree. At 5.15 p.m. the tree was held up by one root only, & deft., knowing that when that root was cut the tree would fall within two minutes & without giving any further warning to the children, cut that last root, whereupon the tree fell & in its fall hurt pltf., a boy ten years of age. In an action in the county ct. by pltf. against deft. for personal injuries the judge found that deft. had been guilty of negligence in not warning the children that the tree was about to fall, & that pltf.'s injuries were due to that negligence ; but he further found that pltf. was a trespasser on the land, & on that ground he gave judgment for deft. On appeal :—Held : deft. owed a duty even to a trespasser not to do any act, which would alter the condition of the land & might injure him, without giving him warning ; the judge in finding that deft. had been negligent had found that he had committed a breach of that duty towards pltf., though a trespasser ; & pltf. was entitled to judgment.—MOURTON v. POULTER, [1930] 2 K. Two servants of defts. were engaged on the third floor of the building in moving a large table by means of an electric hoist. Overlooking the street on this floor was a window, half of which was projecting over the street, having been opened to give the table more play. One servant was holding the table top, & the other servant was working the hoist. At a time when the table was suspended in the air, the foot of the servant holding the table slipped, & in consequence the table struck that half of the window projecting over the street. The window was broken & the glass fell on pltf. passing in the street below & injured him. The other windows on this floor of the building had been broken on previous occasions by rolls of linoleum whilst being moved by the electric hoist :—Held : pltf.'s injuries were caused by the negligent use & management of defts.' property by their servants, & that such negligence was the effective cause of pltf.'s injuries.—MORE v. EDWARDS & LAMB, [1929] S. He missed his way on First Avenue where there was no sidewalk, fell into the excavation & was injured :—Held : as there was no fence, pltf. in straying upon deft.'s land was not a trespasser, & there was a duty upon deft. not to maintain a trap such as this excavation. In these houses the hot water for the bath was provided by a kitchen boiler heated by a gas burner with no flue to carry off waste products & with a linen shoot between the kitchen & the bathroom. A similar apparatus was installed by defts. in the house in question, & after the installation the gas co., on behalf of the purchaser, who was already in occupation as a tenant-at-will pending completion, set the regulator at 45 feet an hour, & the apparatus, when so regulated, was perfectly safe. The purchaser or his wife, in all probability, afterwards altered the regulator to 75 feet an hour, which was dangerous, & they were found dead in the bathroom, death being due to the inhalation of carbon monoxide. On behalf of their infant daughter their administrators brought against defts. an action for damages, (a) for breach of a contract to render the house fit for habitation, & (b) for negligently installing the apparatus so that noxious gases or products of combustion would be omitted into the house. The evidence established that such an installation, properly regulated, was not dangerous, & that defts. had nothing to do with the regulation :—Held : (1) since, apart from statutory exceptions which did not apply, a landlord or a vendor of real estate was not, in the absence of express contract, liable to his tenant or purchaser for dangerous defects, & since there was no evidence of the house being unfit for habitation with the apparatus properly regulated, pltfs. could not succeed on the ground of contract; (2) since the apparatus as installed by defts. was not dangerous, pltfs. could not recover on the ground of tort.—BOTTOMLEY v. BANNISTER, [1932] 1 K. 364b. Defect discoverable on examination—& discovered by injured party.] —Crane manufacturers sold a crane in parts to a firm of builders, the arrangement being that the parts were to be assembled by the builders' men. The builders had in their employment an experienced crane erector, who in assembling the parts found that certain cog-wheels worked stiffly, did not fit accurately, & required to be remedied; he accordingly marked in chalk the places where there was inaccurate fitting, saying at the same time that he would have to report the matter to his employers. Before the defects so discovered had been remedied the erector began working the crane, & while he was so engaged a part of it fell & killed him, the fall being due to the defects above mentioned. In an action by his widow under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), against the manufacturers of the crane :—Held : the defects being discoverable on reasonable inspection, &, having in fact been discovered by the deceased man, the manufacturers owed him no duty & were not liable for the accident.—FARR v. BUTTERS BROS. & CO., [1932] 2 K. 451a. ——.]—A co. having works near a railway, under a licence from an adjoining landowner, constructed a siding on his land & erected thereon a post to which a pulley block was attached called a sheave. To move a truck along the siding, a wire rope passed through the sheave & round a winch worked by a dynamo, & one end of the rope was fastened to the front of the truck & the other to the back. The siding adjoined some fields which were let to the local authority as a playground. A boundary fence between the siding & the fields had disappeared, &, to the knowledge of the co., children frequented the siding & played round the sheave without interruption except when the haulage machinery was about to be put in motion, which occurred about three times a week. On one occasion when a truck had to be moved two of the co.'s employees, in accordance with their usual practice, walked to the sheave for the purpose of seeing that the rope was properly adjusted & of driving children away. After the men went back to start the machine a little girl, aged five, was seen swinging on the rope, & the movement of the rope caused her hands to be caught in the pulley & crushed, & her brother, aged nine, was similarly injured in coming to her rescue. The father, for himself & as next friend of the children, claimed damages against the co. for the injuries sustained by the children :—Held : it being well known to the co. that when the machine was going to start it was extremely likely that children would be near the sheave, the duty owed by the co. when they set the machine in motion was to see that no child was in such a position as to be exposed to danger by the occasional use to which the machine was put, & that they had failed in that duty. 457a. ——.]—A boy four years of age was killed by being crushed in the terminal wheel of a haulage system belonging to a colliery co. The system, which was used for depositing ashes on a bing situated in a field adjoining the colliery, consisted of an endless wire cable operated from time to time, as might be necessary, from the pithead by an electric motor, while at the other end of the system, which was not visible from the pithead, there was a heavy horizontal iron wheel round which the cable passed & returned. The field was surrounded by a hedge, which was quite inadequate to keep out the public, & it was, to the knowledge of the colliery co., used as a playground by young children. The colliery officials at times warned children out of the field, but their warnings were disregarded. The wheel was dangerous & attractive to children, & at the time of the accident it was insufficiently protected. The accident occurred owing to the wheel being set in motion by the colliery servants without taking any precaution to avoid accident to persons frequenting the field. The boy had been warned by his father not to go near the field or the wheel. The driver testified that he had told the boys for whom there was no room to stand back & that then pltfs.' boy had gone as far from the truck as to the side ditch. At the close of pltf.'s case, the trial judge, partly at the invitation of deft.'s counsel, held that there was no case to go to the jury & gave judgment for deft. On appeal by pltf., the Ct. of Appeal held that the facts proved required explanation by the driver of the motor car, as they constituted an accident of a kind which would not usually happen with proper driving, & therefore the case ought not to have been withdrawn from the jury. There must therefore be a new trial. There must be a special order with regard to the costs. Pltf. must have the costs of the appeal, but with regard to the costs of the first trial, if pltf. succeeded in the new trial, she would have the costs of the first trial, but deft. was not to have the costs of the first trial in any event.—HALLIWELL v. VENABLES (1930), 99 L. so. Judgment entered for defendant—Power of Court of Appeal.]—After the third trial of an action for damages resulting from a collision, motions for judgment on the jury's answers to questions were made by both parties & referred by the judge to the Ct. of Appeal. In their view the findings for pltf. were against the weight of evidence, &, therefore, judgment for pltf. was out of the question. 636a. -Pltfs., stevedores at the port of Tampico, in Mexico, undertook to load a steamship of defts.', the Essex Isles, with kerosine & gasoline. The cargo being of a dangerous character, pltfs., who had had much experience in handling such cargoes, stipulated that they should have entire control of the loading. While the loading was in progress an explosion occurred, which killed & injured many of the workmen engaged & destroyed the ship. There was no direct evidence as to the cause of the explosion. Pltfs. brought an action against defts. for damages, & it was found as a fact that the explosion was caused by a spark made by a beam which fell into the hold, the fall of the beam being caused by a blow from a tray which was being hoisted by pltfs.' men from the hold. Pltfs. contended that if the beam had been properly secured by bolts it would not have fallen, & they said that defts. had been negligent in leaving the beam unbolted. Defts. contended that the proximate cause of the explosion was the negligence of pltfs. in not hoisting the tray with proper care, & they counter-claimed for the loss of their ship :—Held : on the facts the shipowners had not been guilty of negligence in leaving the beam unbolted, or that if they had been guilty of negligence in so leaving it pltf. stevedores knew, or ought to have known, that the beam was unbolted, & took the risk; & the stevedores themselves had been negligent in failing to use proper care in hoisting the tray.—Compania Mexicana De Petroleo El Aguila v. Essex Transport & Trading Co., Ltd. The alternative claim under Contributory Negligence Act was also disposed of by the above findings, since this Act applies only to a case where the fault of two or more persons causes damage to one of them, & the failure of deft. to shut off the water at the main did not "contribute" to cause the pltf.'s loss.—LEARY v. NAKUSP DEVELOPMENT DISTRICT COMRS., [1930] 1 W. The jury found for deft. The Ct. of Appeal directed a new trial, holding that the jury should have been directed that if the deceased man was guilty of negligence, but deft. could by exercising reasonable care have avoided the collision, they were still entitled to find for pltf. :—Held : since, on the facts of the case, from the moment when the parties became aware of their respective positions there could have been no time for deft. to do anything to avoid the impact, & therefore the negligence of each party contributed to the collision, the judge's directions to the jury were sufficient, & there must be judgment for deft.—SWADLING v. COOPER, [1931] A. se. "Unfit for human habitation"—Absence of plumbing.]—Although under sect. 35 of Public Health Act, 1924, the determination of the question whether a particular building or part of a building is unfit for human habitation depends upon the opinion of the medical health officer or other official mentioned therein, nevertheless, it was not intended that such opinion should be made arbitrarily but only upon reasonable grounds. Where it is based upon "absence of plumbing," a proper opinion would seem to predicate at least a personal examination of the building by the officer, & an exposition of conditions arising from the absence of plumbing which would justify a reasonable conclusion that they rendered it unfit for human occupation because they created a situation which "was or might become injurious or dangerous to health or which prevented or hindered in any manner the suppression of disease." 330a. Tapping springs.]—Before the year 1919 the land of pltf. & of deft. was in the same ownership. On Mar. 25, 1919, the common owners conveyed a cottage & garden to C., & on Aug. 25, 1919, part of the land. On July 19, 1921, C. conveyed the whole of the land to pltf. On Dec. 20, 1929, the common owners conveyed other part of their land to deft. In about 1888 a tank Y. had been constructed by the common owners, mainly on what became the land of pltf., but which projected partly on to the land which became the land of deft. The water from that tank was led by a pipe to another tank Z. wholly situate on deft.'s land. The tank Z. was tilted so that the water overflowed on to land which became pltf.'s. The overflow was diminished by the cattle using the tank as a drinking trough ; what overflowed was conveyed by a stone drain to a point where it discharged into an open watercourse which was also fed by an underground spring on pltf.'s land. The open watercourse became a natural stream along the southern boundary of pltf.'s land, where there were two dipping places used by pltf. for watering his cattle & by some cottagers. Pltf.'s land was always boggy in places, & was now overgrown with rank vegetation. In Feb. 1930, deft. replaced tank Z. by another, which had two outlet holes, one only of which acted as an overflow outlet on to pltf.'s land. The overflow from the other outlet, which was on the west side, was led to a ram on deft.'s land. These alterations diminished the overflow on to pltf.'s land, who alleged that it affected the supply at the dipping places. He also alleged deft., in the alternative, had tapped springs the water from which escaped on to pltf.'s land, rendering part of it waterlogged. Pltf. claimed the right to a continuance of the overflow by grant as successor in title to C. or by prescription :—Held : the fact that owing to the natural & proper user by deft. of her own land some of the water in the water-bearing stratum below the surface had, to a small extent, been diverted, did not entitle pltf. to damages for any alleged injury arising from such diversion, & deft. not having diverted any defined watercourse nor altered the level of her land nor erected any structure upon it so as to cause rain water which would ordinarily soak into her ground to pass on to pltf.'s land, pltf. was not entitled to the relief claimed in paras. 3 & 4 of the prayer of the statement of claim.—Bartlett v. Tottenham, [1932] 1 Ch. 114 ; 101 L. 326 ii. —— —— Measure of damages.]—Where by digging a ditch beneath the natural surface of the soil an occupant of land causes surface water, not moving in any defined watercourse, to be discharged upon the land of another, he is liable in damages. The damages in the present case were held to include the net value to pltf. of the crop which he would have put in on the flooded part of his land but for the flooding.—Qualley v. Day, [1929] 2 D. sg. Overloading floor of warehouse.]—Pltf., an automobile dealer, was the tenant of part of the ground floor of a warehouse. Deft., a dealer in seed grain, was the tenant of part of the third floor directly above pltf.'s premises. About three months after deft. had stored a large quantity of oats on his floor it collapsed, the oats fell through & brought the second floor down upon pltf.'s cars. In an action for the resulting damage, the immediate cause for the collapse could not be definitely assigned, but it was shown that the floors of a building constructed for general warehousing purposes should have a carrying capacity far in excess of the load under which deft.'s floor collapsed. There was no evidence that the building in question was ever held out to the public, or prospective tenants, as a general warehouse, although parts of it had been leased from time to time to various tenants for miscellaneous storage purposes :—Held : deft. was guilty of negligence, not only in overloading, but in disregarding the duty which, under the circumstances including the general flimsiness of the building, was upon him to inquire & inspect ; & also his liability could be based on the principle of Rylands v. Fletcher.—Madder v. McKenzie (A. 344c. Permitting occupation of land by caravan dwellers—Misconduct by occupants.]—Deft., in return for payment, allowed persons to place caravans on a disused brickfield & to live in them, & some of these persons committed in the vicinity, but not in the brickfield, acts which interfered with the comfort of people in the neighbourhood. In an action by the A.-G. at the suit of the local district council for an injunction to restrain deft. from permitting the brickfield to be occupied in such a way as to be a nuisance :—Held : as deft. was putting his land to an abnormal use he was responsible for the nuisance which existed in the vicinity, & he must be restrained from permitting the occupiers of the land to do the acts constituting the nuisance.—A.-G. v. CORKE (1932), 48 T. 349a. —— —— No knowledge of danger or defect.]—Pltfs. were the owners of an ancient inn, one side of which was bounded by the ancient city wall of Exeter, part of which was the property of defts. On either side of the fireplace in the kitchen of the inn recesses had at some time unknown been formed by means of excavations made in the wall. In 1927 a considerable portion of the wall belonging to defts. collapsed & completely demolished pltfs.' inn :—Held : (1) inasmuch as the damage caused to pltfs.' premises did not arise from an abnormal or unnatural user of defts.' property, & defts. were not occupiers of the wall at the time the damage took place, the doctrine of Rylands v. Fletcher did not apply, & (2) it had not been proved that defts. had knowledge of the defect which ultimately resulted in the fall of the wall or that there had been a failure on their part by due diligence to ascertain that knowledge.—ST. 349b. -.]—The owner of land situate on a steep natural slope built in 1888 a house called "A. Hall." The ground was then excavated on the upper side to a depth of thirteen feet, forming a vertical bank on the boundary. In order to protect this from weathering & crumbling the owner erected a retaining wall some seventy feet long & thirteen feet high. The adjoining land beyond & above the wall was left unbuilt on until 1925, when a house was erected & was afterwards purchased by deft. A. L. Early in 1930 the retaining wall collapsed almost entirely, causing pressure against & damage to an outside wall of a room which had been on to "A. Hall." Pltf. alleged & the ct. found as a fact that the collapse of the wall was due to the additional pressure upon it caused by the weight of the new house built in 1925, & he claimed a mandatory order to restore the wall & to take such further steps as might be necessary to prevent any further damage to his property, & an injunction & damages :—Held : (1) deft. A. L. as the owner of the house was under no liability to pltf. based on the doctrine of Rylands v. Fletcher, as her predecessor in title had only used the land for the natural & normal purpose of building a house on it ; (2) the claim as based on nuisance failed, as there was no evidence that deft. knew or could have known that her house constituted a nuisance or hidden danger to pltf.'s property, or that any such nuisance in fact existed.—WILKINS v. LEIGHTON, [1932] 2 Ch. 106 ; 101 L. The judge found that both in design & construction the wall was sufficient for the purpose for which it was intended, & that its fall was due to the storm, which he found to be one of such extraordinary violence that it could not reasonably have been anticipated ; he found also that the wall was not a nuisance ; & that the breach of a building bye-law, in not employing an architect, could not be said to have caused the accident ; moreover the bye-law in question gave no right of action to pltf. :—Held : deft. was not liable.—MARCHYSHYN v. FANE AUTO WORKS, LTD., [1932] 1 W. 598a. Jus tertii.]—In an action of trespass a deft. cannot set up a jus tertii against a possessory title. The same rule applies to an action for polluting a several fishery & damaging the fish.

Now does the jus tertii rule apply to such an action ? I must confine my remarks most strictly to actions of the kind before me. There are many kinds of nuisance actions, e.g. an action for infringement of ancient lights, & so on. & I am very far from saying that the jus tertii rule applies to every kind of nuisance action. But in this case I am dealing with a nuisance action of a kind peculiar to itself & to other pollution actions. It is not trespass, but it is very analogous to trespass. In my judgment where defts. are doing acts per se illegal, & therefore not justifiable under any outside authority, they cannot set up a jus tertii as a defence in an action of this kind (FARWELL, J.).—NICHOLLS v. ELY BEET SUGAR FACTORY, [1931] 2 Ch. 84, 87 ; 100 L. 830a. —— ——.]—Pltf. brought an action for libel in respect of a statement published in the Melbourne Argus, a newspaper published in Melbourne & in London. Defts. were the Australian Press Assocn., who carried on business in London, & the firm of W. & M., proprietors of the Argus, who, as stated in the paper itself, were a Melbourne firm, but who had a branch office in London & carried on business there. W. & M., who were British subjects, were sued in the firm name. Pltf., in ignorance that W. & M. had a London branch, applied under R. S. C., Ord. 11, for leave to serve the writ on the firm of W. & M. out of the jurisdiction, which HUMPHREYS, J., granted, & the writ was served in Melbourne. W. & M. applied to CHARLES, J., to discharge the order, on the grounds that they had a place of business in this country, &, further, that the right allowed by R. S. C., Ord. 48a, r. 1, of suing two or more partners in the firm's name, did not apply to cases of service of a writ outside the jurisdiction under R. S. C., Ord. 11. CHARLES, J., made the order as prayed :—Held : there being an inter-relation between the various Orders of the Supreme Ct., & so between R. S. C., Ord. 11 & Ord. 48a, the right conferred by the former Order was not inapplicable to the case of a pltf. availing himself of the latter one. By his award the arbitrator directed that the goodwill, stock in trade, & all other assets of the business should belong to the pltf. absolutely, & that deft. was entitled to a certain sum of money for his share of the goodwill, stock in trade, & other assets of the business. The trade that had been carried on during the partnership was that of wholesale dealers supplying the retail trade with sweets, confectionery, etc. Deft. used to travel through the country soliciting orders from retail dealers for these goods. After the arbitrator had made his award deft. continued to travel through the country soliciting orders from retailers who had been customers of the firm before it was dissolved. Pltf. applied for an interlocutory injunction to restrain deft. from so doing :—Held : pltf. was entitled to an interlocutory injunction to restrain deft. from applying personally or by a traveller to any person who was at the date of the dissolution of the partnership a customer of the firm asking such customer to continue after the dissolution to deal with him, deft., or not to deal with pltf. ; but the restraint on deft. from applying as aforesaid by a traveller was to be in force only so long as deft. should carry on the business, either under his own name or any name introducing it, of a wholesale dealer in goods of the general class of those for which pltf. was at the date of the dissolution of the said partnership an agent.—GARGAN v. RUTTLE, [1931] I. 49a. —— ——.]—Deft. was a leading draughtsman in the employ of pltfs. In 1924 deft. was instructed by pltfs. to design an unlubricated crane brake, a branch of work upon which deft. had not been directly engaged. The design he produced was tested but was unsatisfactory. In 1926 deft. was again instructed to design such a brake, & did in fact design a brake incorporating a resilient disc which proved to be satisfactory. This design was patented in deft.'s name. Pltfs. claimed that deft. was a trustee for them of his interest in the patent & claimed a declaration to this effect. Deft. alleged that the successful feature of the resilient disc had been evolved solely by him in 1918 outside the scope of his duties, & claimed to be entitled to the beneficial interest in the patent :—Held : it is the duty of a draughtsman when instructed by his employer to prepare a design to use such skill & inventive faculty as he may possess in order to produce the best possible design within his ability, & in this case deft. evolved the invention which was the subject of the patent as a result of instructions given to him by pltfs. & in the discharge of his duty. The declarations & injunction asked for were granted, & an order upon deft. to assign the patent to pltfs. was made with costs.—ADAMSON v. KENWORTHY (1931), 49 R. P. C. 57.

49b. —— ——.]—Deft., M., was employed by pltf. co. as chief draughtsman for the purpose (inter alia) of developing a gyroscopic turn indicator for use on aeroplanes. The terms of his employment contained a specific covenant, namely, " that all work done whilst in the service of said co. was to be secret & confidential & the property of said co." In the course of developing the instrument certain problems arose & discussions took place as to proposed solutions of them, in which deft., M., took part. Before an instrument embodying features of design & construction, made possible as a result of the solution of the various problems, was put into production by pltf. co. deft., M., left the service of said co. Deft., M., together with one Pierce, an ex-employee of pltf. co., promoted deft. co., which began to incorporate the said features of design & construction in a gyroscopic turn indicator which was offered for sale & sold in competition with the instruments made & sold by pltf. co. Deft., M., also applied for letters patent, & he filed provisional specifications describing said features of design & construction. Deft., M., alleged that the features of design were not novel, that they had not been evolved by pltf. co., & that knowledge of them had not been acquired by him in the course of his employment by pltf. co. Deft., M., also stated that he had not disclosed or made any wrongful use of any confidential information acquired by him in the course of his employment by pltf. co. :—Held : letters patent granted in accordance with the first provisional specification filed by deft., M., would, if valid, enable M. to prevent pltf. co. from making gyroscopic turn indicators in accordance with their present design ; the second provisional specification filed by deft., M., included matters discussed with him while he was in pltf. co.'s employ, & letters patent granted in accordance with this provisional specification would, if valid, enable M. to prevent pltf. co. from making use of one at least of the matters discussed with him while he was in their employ ; deft., M., must be assumed to know what he was claiming as his invention, & that he could only claim what he sought to protect on the ground that it was secret & confidential ; it was not unfair to treat deft. M.'s provisional specifications as an admission by him of such fact ; further, the gyroscopic turn indicators made by deft. co. were made substantially in accordance with informatien & knowledge acquired by deft., M., while he was in pltf. co.'s employ ; the designing of a gyroscopic turn indicator by deft., M., with assistance, suggestions, & advice from pltf. co., was, from the start of M.'s employment by pltf. co., a confidential matter ; deft., M. was not at liberty, while he remained in the employ of pltf. co., to disclose to any one difficulties which had arisen in the manufacture of gyroscopic turn indicators nor the methods discussed, used, or proposed to be used for overcoming such difficulties; deft., M., was not at liberty to make drawings embracing matters discussed with him while he was in pltf. co.'s employ, & while still in their employ to disclose such drawings to any third party; & deft., M., could not better his position by terminating his employment with pltf. co. An injunction was granted; & delivery up of all turn indicators which would constitute a breach of the injunction was ordered. A declaration was made that pltfs. were entitled to the benefit of the applications for grant of letters patent covered by the provisional specifications filed by deft., M., subject to certain limitations, together with costs.—REID & SIGRIST, LTD. v. MOSS & MECHANISM, LTD. In an action for infringement of the patent pltfs. alleged infringement of claims 1, 2, 3, 7, 13, 14, & 15. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid by reason of want of novelty & subject-matter. Further allegations of prior user, & inutility, & an allegation that the patentee was not the true & first inventor, were not relied on by defts. at the trial:—Held: all the claims which were alleged to have been infringed were invalid for want of subject-matter. The action was dismissed, & defts. were given the general costs of the action save in so far as they had been increased by the inclusion of the allegations upon which defts. did not rely at the trial. It was stated in the specification that the invention related to improvements in record strips employed in autographic registers & more especially to an improved zig-zag supply pad for autographic registers as described in specification No. 229,616, which was a specification of the same patentees & of the same date. Pltfs. commenced an action for infringement of this patent & of two other patents in respect of which they discontinued the action at the trial. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patents were invalid by reason of want of novelty, subject-matter & utility:—Held: although the strip was novel, the patent was invalid for want of subject-matter, since any invention that may have been exercised was in the machine which was the subject of Patent No. 229,616, & not in the strip. The specification claimed a method of inserting into a cinematograph film blank pieces of film marked with letters or numbers which, when flashed upon the screen, indicated to the operator when he was to start or stop a mechanical sound-producing apparatus. Defts. showed a "talking picture" in which the operator was provided with a "cue sheet" which told him at what points in showing the film, indicated by sub-titles appearing upon the screen which were part of the film, he was to operate or change over the sound-producing apparatus. Pltf. claimed that this was an infringement of his patent:—Held: there could be no novelty in using an incident, such as a sub-title, in the film as a cue for the operator, what defts. were doing was no infringement, & the invention as disclosed in pltf.'s specification was not novel.—JOHNSON v. WARNER BROS. In 1929 pltfs. commenced an action for infringement of the patent, claiming a declaration that defts. had infringed the patent, & other relief. Defts. denied infringement, & alleged that the patent was invalid by reason of want of novelty, subject-matter, & utility:—Held: that there was no subject-matter to support the patent, & the action was dismissed with costs. 659a. —— ——.]—In 1927, a patent was granted in respect of "improvements in or relating to actuating devices for the control of the carburetters of internal combustion engines, but applicable for other purposes." The first claim was as follows: "Actuating provision suitable for use in connection with the control of the carburetters of internal combustion engines but applicable for other purposes having a rotary hand grip or operating member adapted to displace a longitudinally movable member incorporated within or substantially within the overall transverse dimension of said grip or operating member & a front collar for said grip or operating member said front collar being adapted to embrace the handle bar or other supporting member upon which the said actuating member is adapted to be mounted & in which the said grip or operating member is of a character such that power transmission mechanism which it may be adapted to actuate can be disconnected from it at a time at which it is mounted or located upon said handle bar or supporting member with said front collar in its normal position." Pltfs. commenced an action for infringement of the patent. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid by reason of anticipation by prior specifications & prior users, for want of subject-matter & utility & for insufficiency, & counterclaimed for the revocation of the patent. Pltfs. alleged that the object of the invention was to be able to expose the point of attachment of the power transmission mechanism, for ease of replacement, while keeping all the parts in operative engagement upon the handle bar. One of the prior specifications of A.M.A.C. relied on by defts. described such a device in the letter-press, but showed in the drawings a mechanism which could not be operated so as to fulfil the objects of pltfs.' patent :—Held : assuming that the specification was not ambiguous, & that its object was as alleged by pltfs., the specification of A.M.A.C. disclosed in its drawings a device that could be modified by a skilled mechanic so as to fulfil pltfs.' objects & that accordingly the patent was invalid either by reason of anticipation or want of subject-matter. 724a. Whether prohibition lies.] — On Oct. 26, 1928, W. lodged an application & provisional specification for a patent for improvements in folding spectacles. The complete specification was lodged in July, & accepted in Dec. 1929, as No. 322,297. In Feb. 1930, notice of opposition was given by E. & the T. Optical Co. In Apr. 1930, W. lodged another application with a complete specification, differing only from No. 322,297 in the claims, which were fewer in number, but widened by the omission of certain limiting words. This specification was accepted on Apr. 28, 1930, as No. 328,584. W. then made an application for a division of the patent under r. 13 of the Patents Rules, & the Comptroller allowed it, holding that No. 328,584 should be treated as an application for a patent for an invention excluded by amendment from specification No. 322,297, & should bear date Oct. 26, 1928. The opponents, contending that the Comptroller could not divide or antedate the application, & that his decision, in the circumstances, was ultra vires the Patents & Designs Act & the rules thereunder, moved for a writ of prohibition to restrain the Comptroller & W. from proceeding with application No. 328,584: —Held: (1) the decision of the Comptroller being in a matter of the administration of the Patent Office & the procedure in granting a patent, was final, subject to an appeal to the Law Officer under the Act, & to directions which might be given by the officer under sect. 74, & prohibition would not lie against the Comptroller or the Law Officer in respect of any act or decision so done or made; (2) the division or antedating of an application for a patent provisionally decided by the Comptroller before opponents have been heard is a matter which can be reopened & the decisions thereon reviewed in opposition proceedings, according to long established practice in the Patent Office, notwithstanding that such questions are not specifically included in the grounds of opposition enumerated in sect. 11 of the Act.—Re WINGATE'S PATENT, [1931] 2 Ch. 272; 100 L. 727. For the existing paragraph substitute the following paragraph:—

Injunction to restrain acceptance — Lawful ground of objection—"Secret processes."]— Where an injunction had been granted to restrain appct. for a patent from disclosing processes derived from pltf. co., or from doing any act which might cause same to become public or commonly known, & the Comptroller-General refused to undertake when he should receive an application for the acceptance of a complete specification to consider such injunction a "lawful ground of objection" to the acceptance of the complete specification within Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), s. 7 (3), objecting to his duty prescribed by the Patent Acts being in any way interfered with by the ct., the ct. granted an injunction restraining the Comptroller-General from accepting the complete specification, as under sect. 9, on such acceptance, the matter would be thrown open to public inspection, the specification being concerned with some of the processes which, as between pltf. co. & appct., appct. had been restrained from disclosing, & because the Comptroller-General might accept the complete specification on the footing that the injunction against appct. would not constitute a lawful ground of objection within sect. 7 (3). On appeal the S.-G. on behalf of the Comptroller-General undertook that the injunction granted against appct. would be properly considered in deciding whether the specification should be accepted as being something which might constitute "a lawful ground of objection" to such acceptance, & by consent the order against the Comptroller-General was discharged, notice of discontinuance to be served upon him. Appct. was also further restrained from proceeding with his application in addition to the injunction granted against him in the ct. below.—REX CO. & REX RESEARCH CORPN. v. MUIRHEAD & COMPTROLLER-GENERAL OF PATENTS (1926), 96 L. 796b. ——.]—Pltfs. were owners of letters patent for "improvements in & relating to apparatus for grinding cylindrical bodies." The machine, the subject of the patent, was known as a centreless grinding machine, since the work to be ground was not supported between centres, but was caused to rotate between the grinding wheel & two other points of support. In pltfs.' embodiment of the invention & in the machine illustrated in the specification, the work rotated between a peripherally acting grinding wheel & a peripherally acting regulating wheel & rested upon a work rest placed between the two wheels. The specification described a theory according to which the machine was said to work. Claim 1 of the specification was for "a method of grinding cylindrical bodies, which consists in supporting a substantially cylindrical body in operative relation to a grinding surface having portions progressively more distant from the surface supporting the cylindrical body, rotating said body by means of a driving member, & in moving said rotating body into contact with more distant portions of said grinding surface as said driving member moves said body relative thereto when said member engages projecting irregularities in said body." Centreless grinders using non-peripherally acting wheels either for regulating or grinding were old. Pltfs. brought an action for infringement against defts. who had built a machine with peripherally acting wheels, similar to pltfs.' machine. Defts. disputed the validity of the patent, & also submitted that, as their machine had been sold & supplied in parts & assembled at the works of the purchasers, this did not constitute infringement by them. Defts. counterclaimed for revocation of the patent:—Held: it had not been proved that pltfs.' machine worked according to the theory given in the specification; the claims were not limited to peripheral grinding or regulating wheels, but included machines whose grinding or regulating wheels were discs; the "driving member" claimed was a mechanical equivalent of a fixed back rest which was therefore included in the claim; & therefore the claims were anticipated & were invalid for lack of novelty; also that, on a construction of the specification put forward by pltfs., the invention had not been distinctly stated & that it merely consisted in certain, not novel, adjustments of well-known parts of a well-known machine, &, if the patent had been valid, the infringement would have been committed by the user who operated the machine in the infringing configuration & not by defts., the sellers of the machine alleged to infringe. The action was therefore dismissed & an order was made for revocation under the counterclaim. Pltfs. appealed:—Held: the patent was not limited to the use of peripherally acting wheels & was therefore bad for want of subject-matter & novelty; it was also bad for ambiguity & want of utility; & the specification as drawn was calculated to prevent a workman from using the tools of his trade. The appeal was therefore dismissed.—CINCINNATI GRINDERS (INC.) v. B. S. A. TOOLS, LTD. (1930), 48 R. P. C. 33.

Claim 1 was as follows: "The method of delivering charges of viscous glass from a viscous mass thereof which consists in producing by preforming a charge of glass of such form & dimensions & so related to the condition under which it is to be deposited that it will not fold, lap or coil when so deposited, & depositing it in such a manner that it will not fold, lap or coil." After commencing an action for infringement, pltfs. moved for leave to amend the specification pursuant to sect. 22 of Patents & Designs Acts, 1907–28, but deleting some of the claims & certain optional alternatives, & by incorporating other consequential amendments. Defts. contended that the amended form of one claim, which was appendant upon a claim which the amendment sought to delete, was inadmissible :—Held : leave be granted to amend the specification by deleting the claims desired, appendant claim to have the whole of the claim to which it was appendant incorporated in it, & by deleting the optional alternatives as asked for; the costs of the motion & the costs of & occasioned by such amendments of the pleadings as were necessitated by the amendment of the specification to be defts. in any event.—HOLLANDSCHE (N. 5a. To sanction amendment notwithstanding action for infringement or revocation.]—When an application has been made under sect. 71 of Patents Act, 1903–1921, of Australia, to amend a complete specification, & afterwards an action for infringement, or for revocation, is commenced, sects. 80 & 81 of the Act do not preclude the ct. which has seisin of the application from permitting a modification of the amendments proposed & from sanctioning the modified amendments. After the High Ct. of Australia had affirmed an order by which a patentee's application under sect. 71 had been dismissed upon the ground that the amendments, contrary to sect. 78, would make the invention substantially different from that originally claimed, proceedings were commenced for revocation of the patent. Upon appeal to the Privy Council the patentee was allowed to modify the amendments proposed, but the Board, not being satisfied that the amendments even as modified were permissible under sect. 78 except as to certain uncontested items, affirmed the judgment of the High Ct., subject to allowing the uncontested amendments.—COWPER (N. Claim 1 of the specification was as follows: "In a rope untwisting, breaking up, & teasing machine, the combination with a rotary right-angled nozzle having a guide passage adapted to receive a rope through its axial arm & discharge it through the radial one, of stationary teasing spikes fixed in the plane of rotation of the rope end, & a hood or casing so shaped as to form a guide for the end of the rope whirled round by the said radial arm so as to direct it against the spikes." In an action for infringement of the patent pltfs. alleged infringement of Claims 1 & 2. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid by reason of want of novelty & subject-matter, inutility, insufficiency & ambiguity:—Held: the patent was confined to, or at any rate included, lateral guidance by the casing; on a proper construction of the specification the passages in the rotating fan in defts.' machine could not be described as a rotating right-angled nozzle & there was no infringement of Claims 1 or 2; the patent was, on this construction, admittedly not anticipated by any of the prior specifications, but there was no inventive step between certain of the latter & pltfs.' patent, & the patent was also invalid on the grounds of insufficiency & ambiguity. 1496a. —— Interlocutory orders—Order for discovery.]—A. having applied for the grant to him of letters patent, the application was opposed by B., who claimed that he was the first & true inventor. In the course of the proceedings before the Comptroller an order for the discovery & production of documents was made against A. A. thereupon applied by originating summons by way of appeal asking that the order be set aside. At the hearing B. took a preliminary objection to the ct.'s jurisdiction:—Held: the jurisdiction of the ct. to entertain the appeal was excluded by sect. 11 (3) of the Patents & Designs Acts, 1907 to 1928. The provision for appeal to the law officer thereby made includes not only final decisions but interlocutory matters; & this is not affected by sect. 77 (2) of the Consolidated Patent Acts. 1619a. Executed agreements.]—Pltf., who exploited patents, in 1930 acquired from one S. the sole rights of exploitation of letters patent No. 267,795 for a three-wheel motor delivery carrier. On Oct. 29, 1930, he entered into an agreement with defts. that they should take over the sole manufacturing rights for Great Britain & export to any part of the world except Germany, in which it was (inter alia) agreed that the manufacture of the vehicle was to commence forthwith on the understanding that the patent rights were sound & that defts. were kept safeguarded & indemnified against infringement. Defts. were to provide the necessary facilities to enable the manufacture to be accomplished & to make an original payment, part of which was payable on signing the agreement & to pay certain royalties. In Sept. 1931, pltf. commenced an action against defts., claiming a certain sum under the agreement. Defts. by their defence denied that the agreement was binding on them, alleging (inter alia) fraud & misrepresentation, & that the agreement was entered into upon the understanding that the patent rights were sound, & that they were not sound, & that the patent was on various grounds invalid ; they also denied the title of pltf. to grant the rights granted under the agreement. Defts. counter-claimed for money paid to pltf. & for expenses incurred by them :—Held : the defences of fraud & misrepresentation failed & the agreement did not contain any guarantee of the validity of the patent by pltf., but it meant that both parties had agreed that manufacture should begin forthwith on the assumption that the patent was valid & that they should co-operate to prevent infringement ; the agreement had been executed & therefore, even if there had been a guarantee of validity by pltf., defts. could not set up a plea of invalidity whilst continuing to manufacture under the agreement ; the doctrine of estoppel applied & defts. were not entitled to deny pltf.'s title. Judgment was given for pltf. with costs & the counter-claim was dismissed with costs.—SUHR (R. F. H.) v. CROFTS (ENGINEERS), LTD. (1932), 49 R. P. C. 359.

Shortly before the expiration of this grant the co. in 1929 applied by originating summons for an extension of the term of the letters patent on the ground of losses which they alleged they had suffered by reason of the war:—Held: the patentees having been entitled to apply for a Convention patent were within the description of "patentee as such" in sect. 18 (6) of Consolidated Patents & Designs Acts, 1907 & 1919, the application for a grant had been properly postponed, & they had suffered loss or damage owing to the war. 1690a. Government Departments—Represented by Comptroller.]—Western Electric Co., Ltd., applied by originating summons for the extension of the term of two patents granted in respect of "improvements in Cores for Pupin Loading Coils, electromagnets, & the like." One of the patents expired prior to the hearing of the summons. The application was opposed by the Postmaster-General, who alleged that there had been a postponed demand owing to the War & arising out of the non-installation of older types of apparatus:—Held: (1) in the preliminary proceedings Govt. Depts. were sufficiently represented by the Comptroller, & should not be otherwise represented; (2) at the hearing there had been loss of opportunity owing to the war, but this had been counterbalanced in part by a postponed demand. An extension of eighteen months was granted.—Re WESTERN ELECTRIC CO., LTD., LETTERS PATENT NO. 103,188 & 107,007 (1932), 49 R. P. C. 342.

The second patent was granted for another invention for "improvements in or relating to gyro-compasses." P. died on Aug. 4, 1920, & under his will the patents became vested in B. On June 17, 1930, leave was granted to present the petition out of time:—Held: the inventions were of exceptional merit & utility; the patentees had made a substantial loss & in the circumstances no objection should be taken to the accounts; & each patent should be extended for ten years from the date of expiry in each case.—Re PERRY & BROWN'S PATENTS (1930), 48 R. H., Ltd., & T. were the grantees of a later patent granted in respect of improved process & apparatus for finishing lenses. The patentees applied for extensions of the terms of the patents:—Held: the inventions were of very exceptional merit & utility; the patentees had been inadequately remunerated; possible purchasers of the patented apparatus were few & commercial development of the patents must necessarily be slow; taking all these matters into consideration the first patent must be extended for ten years, & the second patent extended for such a term as to expire contemporaneously with the first patent.—Re ADAM HILGER, LTD., TWYMAN & GREEN PATENTS (1931), 49 R. The patent expired prior to the hearing of the summons. The application was opposed by Radio Manufactures Assocn., Columbia Graphophone Co., Ltd., Mullard Radio Valve Co., Ltd., Mitcham Works, Ltd., & Philips Lamps, Ltd. The opponents denied that any loss was suffered by reason of the war, & alleged that by the earlier development by reason of the war of various uses to which the patent could be applied. the use of the patent had been accelerated & not retarded by the war. They further contended that the ct. must not consider the mere length of time lost, but its relative value compared with a similar period of time at the end of the life of the patent:—Held: the opponents failed to show that appcts. had been compensated by reason of the war for loss of opportunity for the period during which they were prevented by the war from dealing with the patent, & that the patent should be extended for four years.—Re WESTERN ELECTRIC CO., LTD.'S PATENT (NO. 275 OF 1915) (1931), 48 R. The patentee expended a considerable sum in connection with the patent, but very few of the articles were sold. Manufacture of the article had been impeded by the war. The patentee petitioned for an extension of the term of the patent:—Held: the patent did not possess sufficient merit & utility to justify an extension of its term from war loss; but, on the ground that the patentee had sustained loss by reason of the war, the patent was extended for two years, notwithstanding that the application for extension was made by way of petition & not by originating summons.—Re MURRAY'S PATENT (1932), 49 R. Part XIII.—Revocation.

2171a. —— Razor blades.]—In 1925 letters patent were granted for "Improvements in Safety Razors." The patentee claimed to have discovered that each time a razor is used for shaving, the cutting edge is upturned or bent back by reason of the resistance offered by the hair of the face; that honing the blade returned the bent back portions of the blade to their original position in the line of the cutting edge, & that, if the upturning or bending back always takes place in the same direction, greatly increased life is obtained from the cutting edge. In order to ensure that the upturning always takes place in the same direction, the patentee provided that the blade should be non-reversible in the holder. This was done by means of cut out portions in the blade asymmetrically disposed relatively to the longitudinal & transverse axes of symmetry of the blade & positioning studs similarly mounted on the holder adapted to engage the cut out parts of the blade. Claim 1 was as follows: "In a safety razor, the combination of a thin cutting blade, a holder for said blade, cut out parts provided in said blade asymmetrically disposed relatively to the longitudinal & transverse axes of the said blade & positioning studs similarly mounted on said holder & adapted to engage said cut out parts in the blade." Claim 5 was as follows: "Safety razor blades substantially as described & illustrated in the accompanying drawing." The Valet Auto Strop Co., Ltd., petitioned to revoke the patent on the ground that it was invalid by reason of prior publication, that it lacked subject-matter & utility, & that the patent had been obtained by false suggestion:—Held: the theory upon which the patent was founded was erroneous; there was no subject-matter or utility in the invention, & the patent was anticipated by at least one of the prior specifications cited & was invalid. An order for the revocation of the patent was made, with costs.—Re LE RASOIR APOLLO, LETTERS PATENT No. 239,112 (1931), 49 R. P. C. 1.

2174a. Prior publication.]—In the case of an application for the revocation of a patent already granted, appct. must establish his case in the clearest possible manner, & where prior publication is relied on, it is necessary to point to a clear & specific disclosure of something which can fairly be stated to be the patentee's invention.—Re LOWNDES' PATENT (1927), 45 R. The Assistant-Comptroller ordered the specification to be amended. I. B. E., Ltd., appealed to the ct. It was contended (inter alia) for applts. that the letters patent ought to be revoked on the ground of (1) insufficient description, & (2) ambiguity. It was contended (inter alia) for resps. that the ct., on an appeal under sect. 26, had no power to order an amendment:—Held: by virtue of sect. 92 (2) of Patents & Designs Acts, 1907–1928, & of R. S. C., Ord. 53a, r. 6, the ct. has jurisdiction to order an amendment; & the ground of ambiguity, unless it be identical with the ground of insufficiency of description covered by sect. 11 (1) (c), is not open to a petitioner under sect. 26. 2261b. Extent of power.]—In proceedings for the revocation of a patent under sect. 26 of Patents & Designs Acts, 1907 & 1919, the power of the Comptroller to require the specification to be amended by disclaimer, correction, or explanation does not enable him to accept an amendment put forward by the patentee covering a wider claim or a different claim from that made in the unamended specification. Sect. 26 does not widen or enlarge the powers of amendment conferred on the Comptroller under sect. 21 or on the ct. under sect. 22.

The procedure of amendment by way of disclaimer cannot be used so as to extract from the specification some feature or features not claimed or suggested as constituting the original invention, & to claim them as being the invention.—Re EVENO'S PATENT, [1932] 2 Ch. 167; 101 L. P. J. Pltfs. alleged that defts. had infringed the patent. Defts. denied infringement, & alleged that the patent was invalid for want of novelty, by reason of prior publication & prior public general knowledge, & for want of subject-matter :—Held : there was novelty & subject-matter & the patent was valid, but that the claims were limited to machines "of the type in which a flat iron of such a weight as will give the necessary pressure is employed," & defts.' machine was not of this type & consequently there was no infringement. Motion to strike out—Action for declaration.]—Pltf., who was the grantee & registered legal owner of four letters patent, commenced an action against deft. claiming a declaration that he was the first & true inventor of the subject-matter of the patents & an injunction restraining deft. from representing that he had any claim or interest in the patents. By his statement of claim pltf. alleged (inter alia) that he was the first & true inventor of the subject-matter of the patents & that deft. had falsely represented that he was the co-inventor, together with pltf., of the inventions & that he had a claim to or interest in the patents. Deft. moved to strike out the statement of claim on the grounds that it disclosed no cause of action & tended to prejudice, embarrass or delay the trial of the action:—Held: the discretion of the ct. was one to be exercised at the trial, having regard to the facts which might then be established, & the motion must be dismissed with costs.—KILLEN v. MACMILLAN (1931), 48 R. 2601a. Application stood over—Where unreasonable & oppressive.]—Pltfs. commenced an action for the infringement of four patents granted in respect of improved manufacture of cathodes for electric discharge valves. By their particulars of breaches pltfs. alleged that defts. had infringed the patents by importing into this country certain wireless valves which had certain specified characteristics, or some of them, & which had been manufactured by a process comprising certain specified steps, or some of them. Defts. issued a summons for further particulars of the aforesaid characteristics & steps:—Held: defts. had full knowledge of the patented processes & of those used for the production of the alleged infringing valves, & their application for particulars was unreasonable & oppressive. The application was stood over generally with liberty to restore.—MULLARD RADIO VALVE CO., LTD. v. TUNGSRAM ELECTRIC LAMP WORKS (GREAT BRITAIN), LTD. (1932), 49 R. P. C. 279.

2641a. Plea by licencee—Sued as stranger.]—The rule that the licencee of a patent is estopped from denying the validity of the novelty of his licencor's patent is limited to proceedings in which the licencee is sued as such, & does not apply in an action for infringement of patent by making & selling the patented article in a manner & to an extent in & to which the licence would be no defence.

PART XIV. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 9.

2419 i. Not conclusive of infringement—Difference in method.]—Held: the essence of the alleged invention rested on what the patentee describes as a process of destructive distillation of waste liquors, the evaporation of all water & combustion of nearly all the consumable products in the liquor, i.e. woody or ligneous matter, in its downward flight in the upper zone of the furnace, leaving nothing but a carbon residue & non-volatile salts reaching the floor of the furnace, & the method employed by defts., where recovery takes place on the hearth & not by distillation in the upper zone, was radically different, was based on an altogether different idea & principle & could not be said to be an infringement of pltfs.' patent.—Ross (J. Deft. was a licencee of a patent for the making & fitting of boiler joints, the licence being limited to the counties of Northumberland, Durham, Lincoln, & part of Yorkshire, & entitled under the terms of the licence to trade under a certain registered business name within that limited area. He traded in the patented articles & in the said business name outside that area, whereupon pltfs., who were the owners of the patent, brought an action against him for infringement & passing-off. The licence was referred to in the pleadings for the purpose of defining the limited area within which it was available to deft. Deft. by his defence pleaded that the patent was invalid by reason of objections, particulars of which were given, & also for want of novelty. Pltfs. moved to strike out the paragraphs setting up the invalidity of the patent & the particulars of objections, on the ground that deft. as a licencee was estopped from denying the validity of the patent:—Held: the objection failed, as deft. was not sued as licencee, but as a stranger for infringement outside the area for which the licence was available.—FUEL ECONOMY CO., LTD. v. MURRAY, [1930] 2 Ch. 93; 99 L. 2648a. Mutual licence agreement—Covenant not to dispute validity.]—Pltf. & defts., who were respective owners of patents for conveying apparatus, entered into an agreement whereby each was granted a licence to use the invention of the other. The agreement recited the acknowledgment by the parties of the validity of the respective patents of the other, & contained a covenant by defts. not at any time hereafter to dispute the validity of pltf.'s patent. The agreement also contained a clause referring to arbn. any dispute between the parties other than the question of infringement or the recovery of royalties. In an action for royalties under the agreement & damage for infringements committed prior to it defts. pleaded that pltf.'s patent was invalid, & that there was an implied term in the agreement that pltf. should accept the same in satisfaction of all claims in respect of infringements then outstanding. The questions as to whether in view of the covenant in the agreement defts. could put the validity of pltf.'s patent in issue, & whether such a term as pleaded in the defence could be implied, were set down for hearing as preliminary questions of law:—Held: in view of the covenant in the agreement defts. were not entitled to dispute the validity of pltf.'s patent, & such a term as pleaded in the defence must be implied in the agreement in order to give business efficacy to the contract.—CAMPBELL v. HOPKINS (G.) & SONS (CLERKENWELL), LTD. 2664a. —— Objection of want of conformity between provisional & complete specifications.]—Where deft. in a patent action objects to the validity of pltf.'s patent on the ground that there is a want of conformity between the provisional & complete specifications, it is not sufficient for him to state in his particulars of objection that the invention described in the complete specification is not the same as the invention described in the provisional specification: he must state in what the difference consists.—ANGLO-AMERICAN BRUSH ELECTRIC LIGHT CORPN. v. CROMPTON (1886), 34 Ch. 2668a. Ambiguity.]—Pltfs. commenced an action against defts. for infringement of letters patent. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid by reason of want of novelty, subject-matter, & utility, & because the specification & claims of the patent were ambiguous. Pltfs. issued a summons asking for particulars of what parts & in what respects defts. alleged the specification was ambiguous:—Held: no useful purpose would be served by the particulars, & they might be embarrassing to defts. The application for particulars was refused.—MARCONI'S WIRELESS TELEGRAPH CO., LTD. v. CRAMER (J. B.) & CO., LTD. (1932), 49 R. P. C. 400.

2723a. Defendant relying on manufacture out of United Kingdom.]—In an action for infringement of three patents, defts. revised (inter alia) the defence that the patents were liable to the revoked under sects. 25, 27 of Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), on the ground that the patented articles & processes were manufactured & carried on exclusively as mainly outside the United Kingdom. Pltfs. obtained an order in chambers directing certain particulars to be given (inter alia) of whom & by whom such articles have been manufactured as aforesaid, where & by whom the processes had been carried on, & by whom & from whom the impartial commodity had been obtained. The order was appealed against by way of motion to discharge, but this motion was refused with costs. Defts. gave particulars under the order. These particulars alleged (inter alia) manufacture on the continent of Europe by pltfs. as other persons who manufactured for or sold to pltfs. & by named persons, & "by persons who are the manufacturers of the Saccharin referred to" in an official annual statement, the names of such persons & their places of manufacture being unknown to defts. Pltfs. then obtained an order for certain further particulars to be given within fourteen days after service of notice of trial, & defts. moved to discharge this order:—Held: the particulars given amounted to a mere general statement that all the Saccharin imported into the United Kingdom was Saccharin manufactured exclusively on the continent, & was manufactured for & sold to pltfs. Pltfs. thereon moved for an interlocutory injunction :—Held : pltfs.' demands were unreasonable & oppressive, & defts. were not threatening or intending to continue to sell pltfs.' loud speaker units below the authorised price. The motion was dismissed, the costs to be deft.'s costs in any event. Pltfs. commenced an action for infringement of the patent & defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid. Pltfs. issued a summons under R. S. C., Ord. 53A, r. 21A, for further directions & that they might have inspection of defts.' process, & asked that the time for setting down the action for trial should not run until after the date of inspection, in order that costs of preparing for trial should not be incurred unnecessarily. Defts. were willing to give inspection & also to undertake not to do anything to increase the costs of the action until three weeks after the date of the inspection :—Held : an order for inspection be made to take place before the expert witnesses of both sides at a date to be mutually agreed & upon defts. giving an undertaking as above, the action should be set down in the usual way within six weeks of the close of pleadings.—BUTLER v. ENGLISH STEEL CORPN., LTD. In 1931, M. commenced an action for infringement of the patent against S. & B. S. denied infringement & B. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid for want of novelty by reason of prior publication & prior common general knowledge, & for want of subject-matter & utility. S. issued a summons for an order that the issue of infringement might be tried before the issue of validity. M. issued a summons for an order that B. should (inter alia) give particulars of the matters referred to in the patent which he alleged were prior common general knowledge :—Held : upon S. undertaking to be bound by the decision against B., all further proceedings should be stayed against S. until after the action against B. was determined. 2996a. Motion for leave for further cross-examination.]—Letters patent were granted in 1919 in respect of "improvements in methods of & apparatus for feeding molten glass." Claim 1 was as follows: "Method of feeding molten glass wherein successive masses or gathers are suspended beneath an outlet & mold charges are separated therefrom while suspended, whilst the shape of the masses or gathers is controlled by variation of the movement of a movable controlling member adapted to act as a piston in the outlet, or by the means for separating the mold charges, or by the variation of the location of the controlling member or of the said separating means relatively to the outlet." Pltfs. commenced an action for infringement. Defts. denied infringement & counterclaimed for the revocation of the patent on the grounds that it lacked novelty, subject-matter, & utility, & that the specification was ambiguous & insufficient. It was held that the patent was invalid on the grounds that it had been anticipated & lacked subject-matter in that it merely used an old method for controlling the weight of gathers for the new purpose of controlling their shape; but defences of prior grant, inutility, & insufficiency failed; & that, if the patent had been valid, defts. would have infringed it. The action was dismissed & an order for revocation of the patent was made, the order to lie in the office for one month &, if the pltfs. appealed & prosecuted the appeal with due diligence, until after the appeal. Pltfs. were ordered to pay the costs of the action & counterclaim, a certificate for certain of the particulars of objections being granted. Pltfs. appealed to the Ct. of Appeal & moved for an order that the expert witness called on behalf of defts. at the trial might be called before the Ct. of Appeal for further cross-examination, or alternatively that the witness' evidence given in another case might be read as part of the evidence in the case:—Held: the patent was invalid on the grounds that it had been anticipated & lacked subject-matter, & for ambiguity & uncertainty. The appeal was dismissed with costs & a stay of the order for revocation pending an appeal to the House of Lords was refused. The motion for leave to further cross-examine defts.' expert witness was dismissed with costs.—BRITISH HARTFORD-FAIRMONT SYNDICATE, LTD. v. JACKSON BROS. (KNOTTINGLEY), LTD. (1932), 49 R. P. Claim 1 was as follows: "An electric switch, of the type referred to comprising a base, a sliding actuating rod or stem passing through the base, fixed contacts on the base, a transversely disposed contact bar or bridge extending from opposite sides of the said rod or stem so as to engage & connect the said fixed contact contacts by an outward pull of the rod or stem, & laterally spaced outstanding guard parts or walls on the base between which the contact bar or bridge moves throughout its range of travel & which thus prevent turning or rotating of the actuating rod or stem in both the 'on' & 'off' positions of the switch." Pltfs. commenced an action for infringement of the patent. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid by reason of want of novelty, subject-matter, & utility :—Held : in the alleged infringement the contact bar or bridge did not move throughout its range of travel between the outstanding guard parts or walls, & consequently defts. had not infringed the patent; & under the circumstances it was unnecessary to consider or express any opinion upon the validity of the claims of the patent. Deft. denied that pltf. was the sole first or true inventor. At the trial pltf. withdrew his claim to an injunction, & deft. admitted that pltf. was the sole first and true inventor :—Held : although it was doubtful whether a declaration could be made that a certain person was a first & true inventor in the absence of the A.-G., upon deft.'s admission at the trial pltf. was to be treated as the successful party so far as the claim was for a declaration. An order was made that, upon deft. admitting that pltf. was the sole first & true inventor, deft. should pay the costs of the action, except so far as they had been increased by the claim for an injunction, & that pltf. should pay deft.'s costs of the action so far as they had been increased by the claim for an injunction, with a set-off.—KILLEN v. MACMILLAN (1932), 49 R. 3317a. -.]—(1) The amendment of Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), s. 36, by Patents & Designs Act, 1919 (c. 80), was not intended to abrogate the rule which had prevailed ever since Challender v. Royle, No. 2273, was decided, that a pltf. in a threats action might, if he so desired, raise the question of the validity of the patent. The obvious reason for the amendment was to widen the scope of the section so as to enable a threats action to be brought not merely against the patentee, but against any person claiming to have an interest in the patent. The alterations in the subsequent part of the section were consequential upon the main alteration & were not intended to, & did not in fact, abrogate the rule which was laid down in Challender v. Royle, No. 2273.

(2) I do not understand how a patent that is invalid can be infringed. The truth of the matter is, that when one talks of the infringement of a patent one does not mean an infringement of the document, but the letters patent itself. You cannot infringe a document. One means infringement of the monopoly rights conferred by the letters patent

Deft. co.'s legal title to the patents was not completed till Dec. 2, 1931, & the writ issued by them in an action for infringement was not issued until Dec. 3, 1931. Defts. admitted that threats had been made, & at the trial stated that they did not intend to contest the case with regard to the second patent. They submitted to an injunction in terms of the writ as regards that patent. Pltfs. alleged that the first patent was neither valid nor infringed & they relied on prior publication, prior common general knowledge, & lack of utility. Defts. affirmed that the patent was valid & that it had been infringed; & they proposed to rely also on the proviso to sect. 36 of Patents & Designs Acts, 1907–1928:—Held: the proviso had no application to the present case, as the action for infringement had not been commenced & prosecuted with due diligence; the patent was valid but that there was no infringement. An injunction was granted & defts. were ordered to pay the costs of the action except in so far as the costs had been increased by the issue of validity of the first patent, & defts. were given the costs as far as related to the validity of that patent with a set-off; & an inquiry as to damages was ordered.—PITTEVIL & CO. v. BRACKELSBERG MELTING PROCESSES, LTD. Captain Le M. purchased a ring, which he was allowed to take away, & which was immediately pawned by M. with defts. A few days later M., purporting to act on behalf of Captain Le M., took away a diamond bracelet, which he disposed of in the same way to defts. Both the ring & bracelet were invoiced to the S. S. Co. M. was convicted & sentenced for larceny by a trick, but the ct. refused restitution of the property. Pltfs. had been paid the price of the ring by the S. S. Co. as invoiced to them, & now sought to recover the bracelet from defts. :—Held : pltfs. had no title in law to maintain the action. A fundamental point fatal to pltfs.' claim was that the words " owner of the goods " in Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 24 (1), meant the owner of the goods from whom they were actually stolen, & not some previous owner from whom the title had been derived. In the present case the sale was to the S. S. 652a. —— Commencement during twenty-one years from testator's death.]—Testator, who died in 1893, gave his net residue, subject to certain life annuities which did not exhaust the income, in trust for a bachelor's children who should attain twenty-one with a gift over in default. On Mar. 11, 1896, the surplus income was ordered to be accumulated for twenty-one years from testator's death, i.e., until Nov. 6, 1914, or until the bachelor's previous death without leaving issue. During this twenty-one years' period the bachelor married & died leaving three children, two of whom were still living. Temporary orders for maintenance were made. On Nov. 12, 1914, it was declared that as from Nov. 6, 1914, the two children then living were entitled to maintenance under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 43 (1), but that notwithstanding sect. 43 (2) any income not so applied passed as on an intestacy. On July 20, 1927, the elder child attained twenty-one, & her contingent moiety vested in possession. The question having arisen whether, having regard to Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 165, the order of Nov. 12, 1914, ought still to be acted on with regard to the younger child's contingent moiety:—Held: (1) the effect of sect. 165 was that the years of minority accumulation, which commenced during the twenty-one years' period, were not to be reckoned in ascertaining that period, & the income of the younger child's contingent

SECT. 4.—OVERSEERS (Vol. XXXVII., p. 204).

24a. Overseer becoming transferred officer—Removal—Powers of rating authority.]—By Local Government Act, 1894 (c. 73), s. 5 (1), the power of appointing & revoking the appointment of an assistant overseer for any rural parish having a parish council is transferred to & vested in the parish council.—An assistant overseer so appointed by a parish council which was subsequently transformed into an urban district council, became a "transferred officer" under the Rating & Valuation Act, 1925 (c. 90). He was summarily dismissed by the urban district council as the rating authority:—Held: the council could dismiss the officer without notice or cause, & without affording him a hearing, provided that in so dismissing him they did not act dishonestly, corruptly, or in bad faith—BROWN v. DAGENHAM URBAN COUNCIL, [1929] 1 K. 34a. Abolition—Local Government Act, 1929 (c. 17), s. 1—Transfer of "parish property"—What included.]—Pltfs., the City of London Corpn., claimed a declaration that a certain capital fund invested in 5 per cent. War Loan Stock in the hands of the City of London Guardians, being the balance of the proceeds of the sale by defts. of a poor law institution as the H. Institution, was "parish property" within Local Government Act, 1929 (c. 17), s. 115, & that it was "property with respect to which special provision is made" within sect. 113 of the 1929 Act, & would on Apr. 1, 1930, by virtue of sect. 115 of the 1929 Act, be transferred to & vest in pltfs. & not in the London County Council. By sect. 1 of 1929 Act, the functions of the City of London Guardians were transferred to the London County Council on Apr. 1, 1930, on which date the Guardians were abolished. Sect. 113 of the 1929 Act transferred to the London County Council all property & liabilities of the City of London Guardians, except those for which special provision was made in the Act. The only special provision which was suggested to apply was that contained in sect. 115. By sect. 115, sub-sect. 1, of all parish property on the appointed day, namely, Apr. 1, 1930, vested in a board of guardians was to be transferred to the appropriate council, in this case the Common Council of the City of London. The H. Institution & Infirmary was acquired by the City of London Guardians in 1871 for the purposes of their functions in the relief of the poor. By an order dated Apr. 6, 1921, the Minister of Health, the successor of the Local Government Board, sanctioned the sale by the City of London Guardians by the H. Institution, &, by a further order, directed that the net proceeds of the sale should be invested in 5 per cent. War Loan Stock, & that the Guardians should stand possessed of the securities so purchased on trust to receive & pay into the common fund of the Union the interest accruing therefrom:—Held: (1) the property in the capital fund in question & the interest thereon was not "parish property" within 1929 Act, s. 115; (2) it was not transferred by that Act to the representative of the City of London; (3) the property in the fund was transferred to & vested in the London County Council for the benefit of the whole area administered by the London County Council; & (4) it was not subject to any condition that the income of the fund should be credited to the City Corpn. in computing the amount of the contributions due from the City Corpn. to the County fund.—LONDON (CITY) CORPN. v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL. 38a. Loans to strikers' families—Resolution cancelling repayment—Void.]—Defts., a board of guardians, upon the outbreak of the coal dispute of 1926 resolved to give outdoor relief to the wives & families of miners & other workmen who were unemployed because of the dispute, & that such relief should be given by loan, subject to an undertaking to be given by the head of each household to repay the loan by weekly instalments, or, by arrangement with the employers, deductions from wages to commence five weeks after the resumption of work. In pursuance of this resolution defts. granted relief to miners' families during the continuance of the dispute to the amount of £195,957. Repayment commenced in Jan. 1927, the terms being modified from time to time. On July 11, 1929, the total balance due on the loans was £145,924, & it was then being repaid by about 5,000 miners at the rate of nearly £400 a week, some having already repaid their loans in full, & others having been entirely released from payment. On that day defts. passed a resolution that the whole balance of the loans owing in respect of relief received by miners' wives & families should be excused & cancelled. In an action by pltf. at the relation of the corpn. of a borough situate & owning rateable property within defts.' area:—Held: (1) the resolution to cancel the loans was ultra vires & void & must not be acted upon; (2) even if there was any general discretionary power in defts. to release the debtors, it was not properly or reasonably exercised, as they had considered solely the interest of the debtors, without any inquiry into the ability of all or any of them to continue paying off their loans, there being no evidence of any general inability to repay, or request for the cancellation of the debts.—A.-G. v. TYNEMOUTH UNION, [1930] 1 Ch. 616; 99 L. In Feb. 1927 applts. made a written application to resp. for repayment, & in Aug. 1927 summonses were issued against resp. & against his employers to recover the amount due. The justices held, as more than six months had elapsed since the date when the last instalment of the loan was advanced, they had no jurisdiction by reason of Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), s. 11, & they dismissed the summons :—Held : the matter of complaint did not arise until the application for repayment was made.—ASHBY-DE-LA-ZOUCH GUARDIANS v. SUMMERS, [1928] 2 K. The order directed that the corpn. of the united counties of L. & G. should pay a weekly sum to the society for the maintenance of the infants. It was afterwards discovered that the town of X., of which the infants were residents, was a separate municipality, so constituted by Act of Ontario legislature in 1922; & on May 19, 1927, the magistrate amended his order by directing that the maintenance money should be paid by the town corpn. instead of the counties corpn. The town corpn. repudiated its liability & this action was brought to enforce payment :—Held : the magistrate had jurisdiction to make the first order, but the magistrate not having, on or before May 19, 1927, been designated a "judge" within Children's Protection Act, 1927, had no jurisdiction to make the amending order.—FRONTENAC CHILDREN'S AID SOC. v. GANANOQUE, [1929] 3 D. By a deed, dated in 1913, the settlor, with the consent of her mother, exercised the power of revocation & new appointment in such a manner that after her death in 1928 the question arose whether certain trusts declared by the deed of 1913 were valid, their validity depending upon the decision by the ct. of the question whether the power of revocation & new appointment was a general power or a special power :—Held : it would not be right to hold that, upon the terms of the powers contained in the marriage settlement, the settlor was in substance the owner of the property, & consequently free to deal with it in any way she pleased, & the power was a special power.—Re WATTS, COFFEY v. WATTS, [1931] 2 Ch. 302; 100 L. J. Ch. 353; 145 L. T. 520.

269a. Exercise by joint will.]—Testator devised & bequeathed the residue of his real & personal estate to his wife for life & after her death to his son & daughter for their sole & separate use during the term of their natural lives & after their decease to such persons & to such ends & purposes as the son & daughter should by will appoint & in default of appointment to his right heirs for ever. The brother & sister executed a joint will. The brother died in Nov. 1917, having by his separate will confirmed the joint will, & the joint will, the separate will, & a codicil thereto were admitted to probate as being his last testamentary disposition. The mother died on Aug. 8, 1931. The question then arose whether the appointment by the joint will was a good exercise of the power of appointment by the brother & sister:—Held: a joint appointment by will could be made by two persons; if the sister did not revoke the joint will, then upon her death & the joint will being admitted to probate as part of her testamentary dispositions it would be an effective exercise of the power of appointment, & would comply with the requirements in the will of the father.—Re DUDDELL, ROUNDWAY v. ROUNDWAY, [1932] 1 Ch. 585; 101 L. The son predeceased him, leaving one child. Testator's widow by her will appointed the estate to the daughter. Upon a summons to determine whether the power was valid at the date of testator's death, & whether the appointment was valid in regard to one-half of the estate:—Held: (1) by reason of the death of the son before testator the widow had power to appoint only one-half of the estate; (2) the appointment, though excessive, was not wholly void, but was valid up to one-half of the estate.—Re TURNER, HUDSON v. TURNER, [1932] 1 Ch. 31; 101 L. 505a. —— —— ——.]—Under the will of a testator who died in 1890, A. had a general testamentary power of appointment over a share of his residuary trust estate. There was a provision that in default of appointment the unappointed share should be held in trust for the persons who at the death of A. would be entitled under Statutes of Distribution. A. by her will appointed her sister I. her executrix & directed that all her debts & funeral expenses should be paid, & after giving certain pecuniary legacies she gave "all the remainder of my property to my sister, I., to be disposed of as she thinks fit at her death." A. died a spinster in Feb. 1929, but, as the husband of I. had witnessed the will, the residuary gift could not take effect. Doubts having arisen whether A. had effectually exercised the general power of appointment given her by the will of testator:—Held: testatrix had shown an intention of taking the property subject to the power of appointment out of the instrument creating the power by treating it as forming one mass with her own property. It passed, therefore, as if she had died intestate in respect of it & went to the persons entitled according to the Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23).—Re VANDER BYL, FLADGATE v. GORE, [1931] 1 Ch. 216; 100 L. 521a. —— Subsequent confirmation by codicil.]—(1) Testatrix in her will expressed an intention to exercise a power to appoint a life interest in certain trust funds or other property to her husband, but at the date of the will no such power had been created. Subsequently, a power was created whereby she was given a power to appoint a life interest in certain trust funds to her husband, &, subsequently to the creation of such power, the testatrix made a codicil confirming her will in respect inter alia to the exercise of such power:—Held: there was a valid exercise of the power of appointment of such life interest in favour of her husband.

(2) Subsequently to the date of the codicil another power was created, whereby the testatrix was given a power to appoint a life interest in other trust funds to her husband, but before her death she made no other will or codicil nor executed any other instrument whereby she exercised such other power :— Held : there had been no valid appointment of such life interest in such other trust funds in favour of her husband.—Re BOWER, BOWER v. MERCER, [1930] 2 Ch. 82 ; 99 L. 671a. Appointment to husband by will—Husband predeceasing testatrix—No intention to benefit husband's estate.]—A wife, who was of illegitimate birth, having under the trusts of her marriage settlement, made in 1892, a general testamentary power of appointment in default of issue, by her will in express exercise of that power & " to the intent that this my will shall take effect, whether I survive or predecease my husband," appointed the residue of the settled funds, after payment thereout of her debts & some legacies, to her husband for his own use & benefit absolutely. Her will contained no other disposition than the appointment. Her husband having predeceased her & she having died on Mar. 11, 1932, childless :— Held : even assuming testatrix knew that, if she died childless & her husband predeceased her, the settlement funds would in consequence of her illegitimacy pass to the Crown, the prefatory words were ineffectual to appoint the residue of those funds to the exors. of the husband, so as to make it part of his estate, & the appointment failed by lapse.—Re LADD, HENDERSON v. PORTER, [1932] 2 Ch. 219 ; 101 L. Part V.—Appointment Not in accordance with Terms of Power.

830a. —— Appointment to trustees of child's marriage settlement — Share settled.] — A daughter being entitled under the marriage settlement of her father & mother to such share & interest in land & money as the surviving mother should appoint, provided by her own marriage settlement that all such share & interest to which she should become entitled, under her mother's settlement, should be vested in trustees to the use of her intended husband for life, remainder to herself for life, remainder to the children of the marriage. Four years after the marriage the mother appointed a sum to be paid to the trustees of the daughter's settlement, upon the uses therein expressed, in satisfaction of the daughter's share & interest under the marriage settlement of the father & mother :—Held : this was substantially an appointment to the daughter, & valid.—LIMBERT v. GROTE (1832), 1 My. & K. 1 ; 39 E. The contract of sale referred to was for a sum of £100,000, of which £20,000 had already been paid. The contract of sale was subsequently rescinded on the purchaser paying a further sum of £20,000 :—Held : in the events which had happened, the principle that, where a person disposing of a sum among different persons acts on the assumption that he is dealing with a fund of specific amount, & gives part of the fund to one or more persons & the residue to another, if the fund falls short, all the gifts abate proportionately, would not apply, & the sons would get nothing under the gift of the " remainder."—A'BECKETT v. TRUSTEES, EXECUTORS & AGENCY CO. 115a. Title of publication—Infringement of right of property—What amounts to.]—This action was brought to restrain defts., Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., from selling or offering for sale two books which they had recently put on the market entitled : " How to appeal against your rates within the Metropolis " & " How to appeal against your rates without the Metropolis " as being books offered for sale under titles likely to be confused with two books published by pltf. entitled : " How to appeal against your rates in the Metropolis," & " How to appeal against your rates outside the Metropolis." Pltf.'s books were first published in the year 1887 & went through several editions. The books had been extensively advertised & the last editions of the books were published in Nov. 1929. Defts.' books were first published in Jan. 1930. Notwithstanding the fact that it was proved defts.' books had on one occasion been confused with pltf.'s books it was held not to be established by the evidence that defts. had been passing off their books as the books of pltf. :—Held : the words " How to Appeal against your Rates " which were fairly descriptive of the contents of defts.' book as well as of pltf.'s, had not acquired a secondary or special meaning as meaning pltf.'s books only. SUB-SECT. 2.—ON EARNING REMISSION (Vol. XXXVII., p. 561).

34b. No legal right to discharge.]—M. was convicted in Dec. 1925, of certain misdemeanours & sentenced to two years' imprisonment with hard labour & twelve months' imprisonment, the sentences to run consecutively. An order was made by the ct. directing that he should be detained in prison in conformity with the sentences passed. He was first detained in Portsmouth Prison & afterwards in Pentonville Prison. In Dec. 1927, after M. had been removed to Pentonville Prison, the Governor of Portsmouth Prison indorsed on M.'s stage card the forfeiture of five remission marks, to make it agree with M.'s record. There was a dispute whether or not the Governor of Portsmouth Prison had ordered the forfeiture of those marks on May 10, 1926, & the jury differed with regard to it. As a result of the forfeiture of those five marks M. was released by the Governor of Pentonville Prison on July 21, 1928, instead of on July 20. On Aug. 2, 1928, M. brought an action against the Governors of both prisons to recover damages for his detention in prison during that one day. The jury found that the Governor of Portsmouth Prison had not acted maliciously nor with intention to injure M., & that he had not made a false statement:—Held: the Prison Rules did not confer upon M. any legal right to an earlier discharge by the obtaining of remission marks, & that therefore the action could not succeed against either of the Governors; having regard to the findings of the jury the action could not succeed against the Governor of Portsmouth Prison; that deft. was protected by Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61), as the action was not brought within six months of the act that caused the damage, there being no continuance of the injury or damage, as there was no continuance of the act by that deft. which caused the damage; lastly, the Governor of Pentonville Prison was protected, as he had merely acted in pursuance of the order of the ct.—MORRISS v. WINTER, [1930] 1 K. 48a. ——.]—By Treaty of Versailles (Art. 232), Germany undertook to make compensation for all damage done to the civilian population of the Allied & Associated Powers & to their property during the period of the belligerency of each as an Allied or Associated Power against Germany by the aggression of Germany & her allies, & moneys were received by the Crown under this Article. By a petition of right the suppliants, as assignees of civilian claimants who had suffered loss or damage by German aggression during the War, claimed on their behalf payment of compensation out of the moneys paid or payable as reparations under the above Article. The case made by the petition was that the claimants had sent particulars of their claims, first, to Foreign Claims Office &, afterwards, to Reparation Claims Department in accordance with the instructions of His Majesty's Govt., that these claims had been duly verified by the Govt., & were included in the agreed total of claims for reparations which Germany was required to pay under the treaty, & that the Crown in inviting the claimants to submit their claims had constituted itself an agent or a trustee for claimants in respect of any money received by it from Germany on account of reparations, & that any such money was money had & received by the Crown to the use of claimants :—Held : on demurrer by the Crown, the petition afforded no ground for the contention that the money received under the treaty was received by the Crown as an agent or a trustee for claimants, or as money had & received to their use, & was bad as disclosing no ground of claim cognizable by the ct.—CIVILIAN WAR CLAIMANTS ASSOCN., LTD. v. R., [1932] A. Thus the mere fact that a pltf. who has sustained personal injury as the result of the negligence of a village council is a member of the council does not preclude him from recovering damages from the village. Pltf., a member of the council of the deft. village, was injured by the explosion of a chemical fire extinguisher while he was proceeding to use it in helping, together with others, to put out a fire in the village. The jury found that deft. village was negligent in not having the fire extinguisher properly inspected & kept in perfect working order, & also found pltf. guilty of contributory negligence, but only because of the fact that he was a councillor & not because of his operation of the extinguisher. 777b. Stolen goods handed over to alleged owner by Receiver for Metropolitan Police.]—In the end of 1924 the Metropolitan Police found at the house of pltf. & took into their possession a quantity of goods including certain cloth. Pltf. was brought before the police ct. on charges of receiving, & some of the evidence there given tended to show, but did not prove, the identity of the cloth with cloth which had been stolen from a firm of carriers. Pltf. was committed for trial at the London sessions on indictments charging him with having received certain of the goods other than the cloth knowing them to have been stolen, & on an indictment charging him with a similar offence in respect of the cloth, & in Feb. 1925, he was convicted on the first-mentioned indictments & sentenced to five years' penal servitude. He was never tried on the indictment relating to the cloth, but it was allowed to remain upon the record. On Apr. 2, 1925, pltf. not having as yet made any credible claim to the cloth, the Receiver for the Metropolitan Police District handed it over to the firm of carriers, who claimed it, taking from them a written indemnity. On Jan. 16, 1931, pltf. having less than six months before made an unsuccessful demand for the cloth as his property, brought an action against the Receiver & the firm of carriers claiming damages for detinue & conversion of the cloth. The first-named deft. relied, among other defences, upon Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61). The jury, having heard the evidence, found that it did not establish the identity of the cloth with that stolen from the carriers, & they returned a verdict for pltf. against both defts. :—Held : (1) the first deft. in handing over the cloth to the second defts. in Apr. 1925, had acted in "intended execution" of a "public duty" within Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61), s. 1, & as the action in respect of the act of conversion so effected had not been commenced within six months after that act, it was not maintainable in respect thereof; (2) pltf. could not elect to rely only on his claim in detinue, so as to make the time run from his demand & to bring the date of the action within six months after the cause of action. Therefore, judgment should be entered for the first deft. against pltf., & for pltf. against the second deft.—BETTS v. METROPOLITAN POLICE DISTRICT RECEIVER & CARTER PATERSON & CO., LTD., [1932] 2 K. 940a. Detention after receipt of remission marks—Continuance by successive prison Governors.]—M. was convicted in Dec. 1925, of certain misdemeanours & sentenced to two years' imprisonment with hard labour & twelve months' imprisonment, the sentences to run consecutively. An order was made by the ct. directing that he should be detained in prison in conformity with the sentences passed. He was first detained in Portsmouth Prison & afterwards in Pentonville Prison. In Dec. 1927, after M. had been removed to Pentonville Prison, the Governor of Portsmouth Prison indorsed on M.'s stage card the forfeiture of five remission marks, to make it agree with M.'s record. There was a dispute whether or not the Governor of Portsmouth Prison had ordered the forfeiture of those marks on May 10, 1926, & the jury differed with regard to it. As a result of the forfeiture of those five marks M. was released by the Governor of Pentonville Prison on July 21, 1928, instead of on July 20. On Aug. 2, 1928, M. brought an action against the Governors of both prisons to recover damages for his detention in prison during that one day. The jury found that the Governor of Portsmouth Prison had not acted maliciously nor with intention to 949a. Negligence of dock company—Improper repair of ship.]—A dock co. were empowered by a private Act of Parliament to raise, destroy, & remove wrecks in their docks, to sell the wreck & cargo, &, after paying expenses, to pay over the balance to the owners. A ship caught fire & partially sank in their dock. In Feb. 1930 the dock co. repaired the ship, but on taking her out of the dockyard it was found that the repairs were useless, & in June, 1931, she was sold to ship-breakers, & a statement was then prepared & issued by the dock co. showing the amount available for division amongst the cargo owners. In July, 1931, the cargo owners issued a writ claiming damages from the dock co. by reason of their having acted negligently in having tried to repair the ship, whereby the sum available for division amongst the owners was diminished. The dock co. relied on the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61), s. 1 (a), but the cargo owners contended that the action was in time, as their rights were not ascertainable until the preparation of the adjustment statement, & as part of their complaint was the rendering to them of a statement showing too small a balance :—Held : the act or default complained of was in substance the alleged negligence of the dock co. in repairing the ship, this had taken place more than six months before action brought, & therefore the action was barred by the operation of the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61), s. 1 (a).—COPPER EXPORT ASSOCN. The question of what are the interests of the city is certainly, at least primâ facie, one for the city council to pass upon without undue interference from the cts. The mere fact that a bye-law benefits one individual or class at the expense of another does not necessarily indicate that it is not in the "interests of the city." Subsequently, by agreement, defts. appointed a sub-committee to settle all outstanding matters, & an agreement was arrived at between pltfs. & the sub-committee. One of the terms of that agreement was that pltfs.' drainage scheme should remain, although it was contrary to defts.' bye-laws. Defts. having repudiated the agreement to which their sub-committee was a party, pltfs. brought an action claiming specific performance :—Held : as it had not been established that the building of the houses by pltfs. was, or formed part of, a housing scheme to which Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14), s. 99, applied, the verbal contract made by the sub-committee was not binding on defts., for the reason that defts. could not confer upon the sub-committee a power of entering into any such contract. 204a. —— Validity.]—By the proviso to Advertisements Regulation Act, 1907 (c. 27), s. 2, any bye-laws made under that section must provide for the exemption from the operation of such bye-laws of any hoardings or similar structures in use for advertising purposes at the time of the making of the bye-laws & of any advertisements exhibited at that time for a period not less than five years. In 1911 a county council made bye-laws under the section containing such an exemption as is there specified. In 1927 the council made further bye-laws under Advertisements Regulation Acts, 1907 (c. 27) & 1925 (c. 52), containing a similar exemption, which, however, was qualified by the words "but this exemption shall not extend to any hoarding or similar structure or any advertisement to which the bye-law (of 1911) applied":—Held: (1) the bye-law in this form was valid & intra vires, since hoarding, etc., to which the earlier bye-law applied had already enjoyed the statutory period of exemption, & were not entitled to a second period; while others were in no way prejudiced by the exception; (2) a gable end of a building 25 feet high was not a "hoarding or similar structure."—GLOUCESTER BILLPOSTING CO., LTD. v. HOPKINS (1932), 96 J. 204b. —— Construction—"12 feet in height."]—Deft. was summoned for erecting & maintaining for advertising purposes a hoarding or similar structure in contravention of a bye-law made under Advertisements Regulation Act, 1907 (c. 27), s. 2, prohibiting the erection or maintenance for advertising purposes of any hoarding or similar structure exceeding 12 feet in height. The alleged hoarding or structure consisted of rectangular panels or advertisement boards measuring approximately 20 feet in length horizontally & 10 feet in height vertically & attached to the wall of a building. On these panels picture posters were pasted. Although the panels did not themselves exceed 12 feet in height, they were fixed in such a position on the wall as to be more than 12 feet above ground level:—Held: (1) the words 12 feet in height meant the measurement of the hoarding itself & not the height at which it was above ground level; (2) per AVORY, J., neither the wall nor the panels were hoardings or similar structures within the meaning of the bye-law, which was intended to apply to some independent structure erected on the ground & not to panels fixed to a wall.—ROYLE v. ORME (1932), 96 J. 502d. What is " dwelling-house "—Common lodging-house.]—A common lodging-house is a " dwelling-house " within Housing Act, 1930 (c. 39), s. 1 (1), so as to come within the scope of the section. The fact that the people who dwell in it are of such a character & live under such conditions as to make it a common lodging-house does not cause it to cease to be a dwelling-house.—Re ROSS & LEICESTER CORPN. 502e. Validity of clearance order—Mistake in number of days allowed for vacation—Confirmation with modification by Minister of Health.]—A clearance order made by a local authority under Housing Act, 1930 (c. 39), purported to require that certain of the buildings to which it related should be vacated in a less number of days from the date on which it would become operative than the period of twenty-eight days from that date as required by the Act. The Minister of Health confirmed the order with the modification that the less number of days was altered to twenty-eight days. The order did not include a " starred " note to the form of clearance order prescribed by Provisional Regulations, 1930, made under the Act setting forth the substance of sect. 11 of the Act. On an application to the High Ct. under sect. 11 (3) by the owner of these buildings as a person aggrieved by the order to question its validity in regard to them :—Held : (1) the mistake as to the number of days in the order as originally made did not render it an order which was not within the powers of the Act, or prevent it from applying to these buildings ; the order having been confirmed by the Minister with the above-mentioned modification, it could not be said that the requirement of the Act as to the number of days was not complied with by the order ; &, therefore, that mistake in the order as originally made was not a ground on which the High Ct. should quash the order in so far as it affected these buildings ; (2) the omission of the starred note did not render the order an order which was not within the powers of the Act ; assuming that it was a requirement of the Act that that note should be included in the order, there was no evidence in the case before the ct. to show that the interests of appct. had been substantially prejudiced by that requirement not having been complied with ; &, therefore, the omission of the note was not a ground on which the High Ct. ought to quash the order.

s. 9, in respect that she, " being the owner within the meaning of the Act," had let the houses as dwelling-houses, or alternatively had permitted them to be so occupied. It appeared that the houses, which had been closed in 1928 under a closing order, remained unoccupied until 1930, when, by permission of the husband of the accused, they were occupied by tenants, from whom he collected rents. It further appeared that, for the period involved in the case, the husband was generally known to act as factor for his wife in the management of her properties, including the houses in question. On these facts the Sheriff-substitute found the charge not proven :—Held : in the absence of an express finding that the husband was in fact his wife's factor, & that, in that capacity, he had let the subjects with his wife's knowledge & approval, it could not be said that she had been proved to have let them, or permitted them to be occupied, within the meaning of the statute.—HAIG v. THOMPSON, [1931] S. A plan was deposited in the Lands Titles Registration Office, & showed certain private roads which were marked " private roads to be vested in " the owner :—Held : the fee-simple of these roads did not vest, by virtue of Town Planning & Development Act, 1920, in the district council. —LOXTON DISTRICT COUNCIL v. BRUCE, [1927] S. that it was not a requirement of the Act that the starred note should be included in the order.

(3) The High Ct. will entertain an application under Housing Act, 1930 (c. 39), s. 11 (3), by a person aggrieved by a clearance order, who desires to question its validity only on the grounds mentioned in that sub-section or either of them, namely, that the order is not within the powers of the Act, or that any requirement of the Act has not been complied with, or possibly on the further ground that there is no evidence to support the order; & not on the ground that the evidence is insufficient to support the order.—Re BOWMAN, SOUTH SHIELDS (THAMES STREET) CLEARANCE ORDER, 1931, [1932] 2 K. Improvement scheme—Validity—Particulars of proposed development must be shown.]—An improvement scheme purporting to be made under the provisions of Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14), after providing for the acquisition & clearing of an unhealthy area, proceeded to empower the local authority to sell, lease or otherwise dispose of, as they thought fit, the cleared area or to appropriate or use it for any purpose approved by the Minister of Health. The scheme further provided that if the Minister so required, the local authority should provide a number of dwellings, not exceeding 72, suitable for accommodation of persons of the working classes, on a site either within or without the area, according to a scheme to be approved by the Minister. The scheme had been presented to the Minister with a petition for its confirmation: —Held: in order to be a valid improvement scheme within Part II. of the Act, a scheme must, besides providing for the acquisition & clearance of an area, contain particulars of the proposed development of the area, & not confer on the local authority an unrestricted power to sell or lease the cleared area.—R. v. MINISTER OF HEALTH, Ex p. DAVIS, [1929] 1 K. 506c. —— —— Confirmation of unauthorised scheme—Effect of Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14), s. 40 (5).]—Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14), s. 40, which empowers the Minister of Health to make an order confirming, with or without modifications, an improvement scheme made under the Act, & provides that "the order of the Minister when made shall have effect as if enacted in this Act," does not preclude the ct. from calling in question the order of the Minister where the scheme presented to him for confirmation is inconsistent with the provisions of the Act.

The Corpn. of Liverpool submitted to the Minister of Health for confirmation a document under the common seal purporting to be an improvement scheme under Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14), s. 35, in respect of an unhealthy area within the city. The first part of this document, after defining the area proposed to be dealt with, by clause 5, empowered the corpn. in general terms to make & widen & stop up or deviate any street in the area, directed them to appropriate other parts of the land to the erection of dwelling-houses for the working classes, & provided that any lands not required for these purposes might be disposed of as the corpn. might think fit. The second part contained estimates of the cost of acquiring the land & of the lay-out, & stated that there were no surplus lands. The Minister, after holding a public local inquiry, made an order modifying the scheme by providing (inter alia), in lieu of clause 5, that the whole of the lands in the area should, subject to the provision of any necessary streets & approaches, be used for the purposes of rehousing, & confirming the scheme as so modified. The owner of two houses which it was proposed to acquire compulsorily under the scheme on account of their sanitary condition obtained a rule nisi for a writ of certiorari to quash the order of the Minister as being made without jurisdiction, inasmuch as the scheme which the order purported to confirm was not an improvement scheme within the meaning of the Act in respect that (a) it was not accompanied by a lay-out plan & (b) it provided that land within the area might be disposed of as the corpn. might think fit:—Held: the scheme, whatever its defects, was an improvement scheme within the meaning of the Act, & any defects in the scheme had been cured by the order of the Minister.—MINISTER OF HEALTH v. R., Ex p. YAFFE, [1931] A. By a resolution passed by the City Council on July 22, 1926, pltfs.' slaughter-house was removed from the register upon the ground that no slaughtering had been done on the premises between Mar. 1924, & July, 1926 :—Held : upon the evidence, these premises had throughout the period in question been continuously occupied by pltfs. as a slaughter-house & used as such. The local authority were therefore not entitled under sect. 126 to remove the name from the register, even although there had been a breach of the regulations on the part of pltfs.—WOOLLISCROFT v. STOKE-ON-TRENT CORPN. 584a. Adoption of Acts—Right to poll.]—A meeting of ratepayers was summoned for the purpose of determining whether the provisions of the Public Libraries Acts should be adopted in defts.' district. A chairman having been chosen, the resolution to adopt the Acts was carried upon a show of hands ; a poll was demanded, but the chairman refused to grant it. Defts. declined to put in force the Acts : —Held : the right to demand a poll existed by the common law, & had not been taken away by any of the provisions contained in the Public Libraries Acts, & defts. could not be compelled by mandamus to carry out the Acts.

The question is whether it is not an attribute at common law of all public meetings, that any qualified person may demand a poll, & the meeting may be enlarged so that all persons duly qualified may come in & take part in the decision. Cannot a meeting be adjourned at common law ? n (p. 252) i. —— —— Powers of Minister.]—The Crown expropriated a certain area for use in the building of the terminal of the Hudson Bay Railway at Churchill & for a port on Hudson Bay. At the date of the taking there were no permanent habitations anywhere in the vicinity save a Hudson Bay Post & Mounted Police Post. The future of Churchill was altogether dependent upon the completion of the work for which the land was taken:—Held: under the Expropriation Act a Minister of the Crown may take any land for the use of His Majesty as he thinks advisable to take, & his decision or judgment that the lands so taken are necessary for a public work is not open to review by the cts. This power or authority does not interfere with the security in the enjoyment of private property, as the Crown must compensate the owner of any lands so taken for the value thereof & all damages resulting from the expropriation. Speculative prices paid by purchasers of real estate in the vicinity, some fifteen years before the expropriation in question, are not a fair criterion of the market value of similar property at the date of the expropriation thereof. The advantages due to the carrying out of the scheme for which the lands were taken cannot be considered in fixing the compensation to be paid for the said lands.—R. v. BEECH, [1930] Ex. C. Act came into force, conferring jurisdiction on this ct.; (2) the legal proceedings already instituted before the Provincial Cts., under the Railway Act, should be there continued & even enforced, defts. having a vested right to do so under the law existing at the date of expropriation. When the effect of a repeal is to take away a right, primâ facie, it is not retroactive; but when it deals exclusively with procedure it is retroactive.—CANADIAN NATIONAL RY. At the close of pltf.'s case deft.'s counsel had moved to have the case withdrawn from the jury on the ground that it was manifest that there had been contributory negligence:—Held: the case should have been taken from the jury on the ground that it was evident from pltf.'s own case that, even if the facts were that deft. had not given the proper warnings, the accident could not have happened but for pltf.'s negligence in remaining on the track.—CONVERSE v. CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. By sub-sect. 4 of that sect., the time for appeal to a Standing Arbitrator is fixed at three months from the date of the determination. The claims were discussed at a meeting held on Apr. 26, 1928, at the co.'s registered office. L., the co.'s assistant general manager, concluded by asserting that the cases of all pltfs. were governed by a decision of the Standing Arbitrator refusing the claim of one B., but no formal letter refusing the claims was sent to pltfs. or their solr. It was subsequently contended on behalf of the railway co. that the co. had given its "determination" of the claims, within Railways Act, 1921 (c. 55), at the meeting of Apr. 26, & that the proposed appeals were out of time. In an action by pltfs. for a declaration that their claims were not determined by the co. on Apr. 26, 1928, within Railways Act, 1921 (c. 55), Sched. 3, para. 5, or at all:—Held: decisions on claims for compensation must be formulated in a definite manner in the name & on behalf of the co. & communicated forthwith to the claimants; & on the facts there had been no such determination.—MACDONALD v. GREAT WESTERN RY. st. Injury through failure to apply emergency brake.]—Pltf., a workman employed by deft., was injured while laying new track on deft.'s right-of-way. His foot was caught between a rail & a tie & a wheel of the "pioneer" of the work train which was proceeding behind the workmen struck & crushed his leg. The jury found deft. responsible for the injury because of the fault of the brakesman on the "pioneer" in not responding quickly enough in applying the emergency air-brake when sensing the danger. The jury negatived any negligence on pltf.'s part. The evidence as to whether the brakesman applied the emergency brake at all was contradictory:—Held: the jury's finding must be taken to mean that, if the brakesman did apply the brake, he did not do so as quickly as he might up train. In an action by the widow of the foreman for damages against the co. for breach of statutory duty, the judge directed the jury that a regulation of the co. under which the foreman of a gang was entrusted with the duty of seeing that a look-out man was provided whenever he or any of his gang were at work upon the line was a compliance with r. 9. The jury found that the co. had not omitted to perform their statutory duty of providing a look-out man, & that the foreman's death was caused by the negligence of one or the other or both of the men, & judgment was entered for the co. :—Held : (1) a motion for a new trial, on the grounds of misdirection & that the verdict was against the weight of evidence, must be refused ; (2) the rule does not require the look-out man provided to be some one who is not a member of the gang itself, but is appointed additionally. (3) Semble : the duty of the railway co. under the rule in any case of danger is an absolute duty to provide a look-out man & to see that he is instructed to act. The co. does not comply with the rule by merely making regulations under which the foreman of a gang is entrusted with the duty of appointing a look-out man ; &, if the foreman fails in that duty, the co. may be made liable for injury happening to a member of the gang other than the foreman himself.—VINCENT v. SOUTHERN RY. ll (p. 375) i. —— —— —— To contribute to cost of works.]—The Board of Railway Comrs. for Canada when making an order for contribution to the costs of works is entitled to have regard to the state of matters existing when the order for contribution is made. If new interests which are affected by the work have arisen since it was originally ordered, the Board can competently order contribution to the cost to be made from such quarters. The test of liability to contribute is not necessarily to be found in the answer to the question whether an order to execute the work could originally have been pronounced against the party sought to be made liable to contribute. Once it is established that a co., municipality or person was within the meaning of the Railway Act "interested in or affected by" the construction of a work, the jurisdiction of the Railway Board under the Act to order it to contribute to the cost of the works is unassailable. The question of the quantum of the contribution is a matter entirely in the discretion of the Board. The Parliament of Canada has jurisdiction to confer on the Board authority to compel such contribution from a corpn. so interested or affected even though it is a provincial corpn.—CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. The function of the Board as to tolls & charges is, excepting as to powers conferred by sect. 358 of the Act, limited to regulating charges for carriage & for those other services which are incidental to carriage, as railway services, within the meaning of the Act. The wharfage service in question is not such a service. This would appear to be so independently of, but is put beyond doubt by, sect. 358. (5) of sect. 325 of the Railway Act declares the powers of the Board under the Act to fix & determine just & reasonable rates shall not be limited or in any manner affected by the provisions of any Act of the Parliament of Canada, or by any agreement made or entered into pursuant thereto, save & except as to rates on grain & flour from points west of Fort William to Fort William and Port Arthur. The wording of this sub-sect. should not be construed as a restriction upon the powers of the Board to fix the rates set out in the Order now in question. On the contrary, it seems from the language used that Parliament contemplated that the Board would look at & consider the statutes & agreements relating to rates which had been in force or agreed upon, & desired to make it clear that, with the exception of the Crow's Nest Agreement, the Board was not to be bound by any such statute & agreement. What weight these statutes & agreements shall have is left to the discretion of the Board; &, subject to certain conditions, the obligation rests upon the Board of fixing rates which are "fair & reasonable." In this case, the own conduct of the Canadian National Railways since the Order in question was made has been such as to justify the inference that, in their judgment, the rates were not unfair or unreasonable.—Re BOARD OF RY. 931a. —— Extent of duty.]—(1) The duty of a railway co. under Regulation of Railways Act, 1873 (c. 48), s. 17, to keep its canals in repair & open for navigation is not an absolute duty, nor, on the other hand, is it limited, as in the case of highway authorities, to acts of misfeasance. It is a duty to take reasonable care.

(2) A railway co. acquired a canal 150 years after it had been constructed. One of the locks collapsed. It was found that the baulks of timber on which the walls rested were laid transversely on the soil which formed the bed of the lock. The proper method would have been to lay the baulks upon vertical piles driven into the ground:—Held: no evidence of negligence on the part of the railway co. that on the appearance of cracks in the walls & subsidence of the soil at the side of the walls they failed to investigate the foundations of the lock, an operation which might have involved the closing of the canal for some months.

(3) In order to found a claim for damages for the closing of a canal, pltf. must show that there has been caused to him thereby peculiar damage greater than that caused to the general public.

(4) An agreement by traders with a railway co., that they would establish a gravel business near a canal of the railway co., & would pay a reduced rate to be afterwards agreed for the transport of gravel by the canal, & would erect machinery at their own expense, in consideration whereof the railway co. would permit the traders to erect machinery & other plant for carrying gravel over the canal & railway, & would repair the canal:—Held: to be void for uncertainty.

Can., 1927, c. 170, the Railway Board has jurisdiction to impose a proportion of the cost of work, which in the exercise of its powers it has ordered to be carried out, only upon a co., municipality, or person interested in or affected by the order. But in determining whether a particular co., municipality or person is so interested or affected the Railway Board can have regard to the circumstances existing not only when the work was ordered but also when it makes its order allocating the cost, or reviews that order under sect. 51; further, absence of benefit from the work executed does not necessarily show absence of interest in or affection by the order to carry out the work. In cases in which the Railway Board has jurisdiction the amount of the contribution is within the discretion of the Board. were required under s. 17 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873 (c. 48), s. 17, to keep the canal open & navigable. At a later date the railway co. entered into an agreement with the county council having jurisdiction in the locality under which the council agreed to remove the bridge & to construct a new bridge in substitution therefor; & the council covenanted that they would "from time to time & at all times thereafter well & sufficiently maintain & repair the new bridge & the roadway & footpaths upon the same & the approaches thereto." The agreement provided for a headway of six feet between the arch of the new bridge & the towing-path passing under it. The bridge & the neighbouring part of the canal for considerable distances on both sides of the bridge were in a mining area which had been subsiding for a long time prior to the agreement; & within sixteen years thereafter, owing to further subsidences, there was a general sinking of the bridge, & the towing-path. As, however, the water level remained the same, the railway co. found it necessary, in order to avoid flooding, to raise the towing-path—the resulting effect being that the headway between the bridge & the towing-path was reduced to four feet six inches, which was insufficient for the convenient working of the canal:—Held: the covenant on the part of defts. to "maintain" the bridge did not impose upon them an obligation to raise the bridge so as to obtain the six feet of clearance for the use of the waterway, even although pltfs. had found it necessary to raise the towing-path.—GREAT WESTERN RY. v. MONMOUTHSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL (1930), 94 J. After Mar. 1926 the building was no longer used as an industrial school & pltfs. removed their stores & furniture. The removal was completed in Apr. 1926, except that a caretaker was left in possession with a few articles of furniture for his use. In Mar. 1927 pltfs. decided to use the premises partly as an elementary school & partly for other purposes. Defts. rated pltfs. in respect of the building for the two periods ending Sept. 30, 1926, & Mar. 31, 1927, & it was admitted that the rate was duly made & confirmed. e i. —— Closed during trade depression.]—Premises purchased by resps. in 1923 were used by them as a malthouse until the autumn of 1927, when, owing to trade depression, they dismissed their staff & closed the premises indefinitely. The premises were not subsequently utilised by resps. in any way. When the premises were closed the machinery therein was left intact, but none of it could be removed without damaging the building, except a screening cylinder, which would cost more to remove than it was worth. Resps. tried to sell the premises, but failed to do so. The premises as they stood were not capable of use save as a malt-house :—Held : the premises were capable of being used as malting premises at any time, but there had been no beneficial occupation of the premises during the year for which the poor rate was claimed. — OFFALY COUNTY COUNCIL & RIORDAN v. WILLIAMS, [1930] I. 226f. — Tea blending premises.]—Resps. occupied & used premises which were registered under the Factory & Workshops Acts. They imported teas from Ceylon, Java, India, China, & other foreign countries. The teas were brought to the premises in question for blending, sifting, cutting, milling, & packing for export abroad for sale wholesale to the public as tea. No tea went out of the premises until after blending, & no blended teas from the premises were supplied or distributed to any part of the United Kingdom, & no blended teas came into the premises. Apart from the basement, which was used & occupied solely as a tin-box factory, the premises were used (a) as premises for blending, sifting, cutting, milling, & packing teas imported from abroad so as to make the teas suitable for export abroad for sale wholesale to the public as tea; & (b) as premises for exporting abroad for sale to the oublic as blended tea the tea leaves so blended. 226k. —.]—Applts., a firm of seed merchants, owned & occupied a hereditament consisting of a large warehouse, used for cleaning & testing seeds of their own growth for the purposes of sale, & certain subsidiary buildings, including offices, which were admittedly not used for industrial purposes. The hereditament was registered as a factory. A claim that the hereditament was an industrial hereditament was opposed by the Crown on the ground that the premises were primarily occupied & used for the purposes of a retail shop. By a special case stated it was found that all the seeds were sold to customers other than the trade, that orders for the same were received by applts. at their offices, & that the seeds were despatched from the warehouse in fulfilment of such orders. At the hearing in the House of Lords, in answer to a request by the House for further information as to the exact nature of the uses to which the hereditament was put, it was agreed that the seeds were sold in approximately equal quantities to trade customers & to customers other than the trade, that the retail sales were effected either by travellers or by letters addressed to the hereditament or by telephone; that the offices had none of the physical features of a shop, & that the applts. had no accommodation adapted for the purpose of the physical resort of customers:—Held: the hereditament was not primarily occupied & used for the purposes of a retail shop & it was an industrial hereditament.—TOOGOOD & SONS, LTD. v. GREEN, [1932] A. 226t. Beer bottling premises. Brewers occupied a bottling store in which beer brewed by them elsewhere was matured, carbonated, filtered & bottled, & from which, after the bottles had been corked & labelled, it was distributed to the trade. The beer when it entered the premises was unmarketable, & was converted by processes carried on therein into the commodity known as bottled beer. The hereditament was a factory within Factory & Workshop Acts. The revenue officer objected to the inclusion of the hereditament in the special list as an industrial hereditament under 1928 Act, s. 3, on the ground that it was primarily occupied & used for the purposes of distributive wholesale business within exception (c) in sect. 3 (1):—Held: the treatment to which the beer was subjected in the hereditament was not a mere prelude to distribution, but changed the liquid from an unfinished article to a finished one, namely, bottled beer, which was not ready for distribution until the bottles had been corked & labelled, & the hereditament did not fall within the exception & was therefore an industrial hereditament.—SEDGWICK (CAMBERWELL REVENUE OFFICER) v. CAMBERWELL ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE & WATNEY, COMBE, REID & Co., [1931] A. 226u. —— Chain cable testing establishment.]—Resps. occupied & used a testing establishment for the purpose of carrying on the business of testing & finishing cables & anchors under a licence from the Board of Trade, pursuant to the Anchors & Chain Cables Act, 1899, & they gave certificates in respect of the cables & anchors which had passed the tests. The Act of 1899 prohibited the sale in this country of anchors & cables which had not been proved according to its provisions. The hereditament was admitted to be a factory within Factory & Workshop Acts. The processes employed involved the manufacture & replacement of faulty links in cables or faulty parts in anchors, & the scaling, tarring & finishing of cables & anchors before delivery to the ultimate consignees. The revenue officer objected to the inclusion of the hereditament in the special list as an industrial hereditament on the ground that it was primarily occupied & used for purposes which were not those of a factory or workshop within exception (f) in 1928 Act, s. 3 (1):—Held: the hereditament was primarily occupied & used for the purpose of testing operations, which were not factory purposes, & fell within the exception.—GROVE (DUDLEY REVENUE OFFICER) v. LLOYD'S BRITISH TESTING CO., LTD., [1931] A. 226x. —— —— —— —— Retail shop on same premises.]—Resps. were the occupiers of a hereditament entered by the assessment committee in the special list & therein apportioned as to £59 industrial user & as to £146 non-industrial user. The revenue officer appealed against the inclusion of the hereditament in the special list on the ground (inter alia) that it was primarily occupied & used for the purposes of a retail shop. The hereditament consisted of a three-storied building which was in the sole occupation of resps., who were bespoke tailors & outfitters. They also owned a retail shop for the sale of shirts, collars, socks, hats & ties on the same premises in which the manufacture of clothes was carried on. The hereditament was registered as a workshop:—Held: as a matter of law the hereditament could not be dissected as being occupied & used partly as a retail shop but mainly as a workshop. The business conducted on the hereditament was a unified business & the workshop must be treated as ancillary to the trade or business of a retail shop.—WILKINSON (REVENUE OFFICER) v. SIBLEY & DONOVAN [1932] 1 K. As regarded the custom-house, the buildings erected & owned by the occupiers, the ground out-with the dock precincts leased to the occupiers, & the cattle sheds:—Held: they were not freight transport subjects, in respect that they were not occupied & used for dock purposes as part of a dock undertaking, but for the special purposes of the occupiers.—CLYDE NAVIGATION TRUSTEES v. INLAND REVENUE, INLAND REVENUE v. KIRKWALL ASSESSOR, [1930] S. . —— —— —— Newspaper offices & printing works—Apportionment of editorial & advertising rooms.]—Printing offices & works in which a newspaper was composed, printed, & published, were included in the special list under 1928 Act as an industrial hereditament, & an apportionment was made of the net annual value of the hereditament according as its various parts were used for industrial or non-industrial purposes:—Held: (1) the hereditament was properly included in the special list as an industrial hereditament, as the composing, printing, & publishing of a newspaper was the making of an article & the adapting for sale of an article within Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 149, & therefore the hereditament came within the definition of a non-textile factory, the primary purpose for which the hereditament was occupied & used being an industrial purpose; (2) the annual value of the hereditament must be apportioned according to the occupation & use thereof for industrial purposes, & the occupation & use for other purposes; those portions of the premises which were occupied & used for printing, composing, engraving, publishing & circulating were used for industrial purposes & entitled to be derated, but that those portions of the premises which were occupied & used for the editorial department, general administrative offices & clerical staff, advertising department, stationery counter, & returns store were used for non-industrial purposes & not entitled to be derated.—CARDIFF REVENUE OFFICER v. CARDIFF ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE & WESTERN MAIL, LTD., CARDIFF REVENUE OFFICER v. CARDIFF ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE & DAVID DUNCAN & SONS, LTD., WESTMINSTER REVENUE OFFICER v. DAILY MIRROR NEWSPAPERS, LTD., [1931] 1 K. 226aa. Wholesale dairy.]—Resps., who were wholesale dairymen, occupied & used certain premises for carrying out the processes of cleaning & pasteurising milk & of cheesemaking. The milk, after cleaning & pasteurisation, & the cheese after ripening, were sent to the respondents' selling centres. The assessment committee found that the premises were an industrial hereditament & were entitled to be derated:—Held: as the question was one of fact, & as there was no evidence on which the conclusion of the assessment committee could be varied, their decision must be affirmed.—CARMARTHEN REVENUE OFFICER v. UNITED DAIRIES (WHOLESALE), LTD. 226bb. ——Meaning of "contiguous."]—The only point decided in this case which was then remitted to sessions for further consideration of other points was that a hereditament in the occupation of the resps. was not "contiguous" to another 235 yards away, & that Quarter Sessions was wrong in law in holding that it was contiguous so as to be treated as forming one hereditament with the other premises for purposes of de-rating.—SOUTHWARK REVENUE OFFICER v. HOE (R.) & CO., LTD. (1930), 143 L. T. 544; 94 J. P. 170; 46 T. L. R. 528; 28 L. G. R. 446; (1926–31), 2 B. R. A. 723.

226cc. —.]—The word "contiguous" must be construed in its ordinary & proper sense as meaning "touching," & not in its loose sense as meaning "neighbouring."

In five cases properties in the same occupation as the main industrial hereditaments were alleged to be part of the main industrial hereditament as being contiguous thereto. The distance in a direct line between the two properties sought to be treated as part of a single hereditament varied from 20 yards to 60 yards. In one case the properties were only separated by a public thoroughfare, but in that case the property sought to be added was used as a stable. In the other four cases the properties were separated by other properties in different ownership:—Held: the two properties in four of the cases were not contiguous to each other & therefore could not be treated as parts of a single hereditament within sect. 3 (3), & in the fifth case, inasmuch as the property sought to be added was used as a stable, & therefore, under sect. 3 (2), was to be deemed not to form part of the factory or workshop, it could not therefore be one of the properties which "are used as parts of a single . . . factory" within sect. 3 (3).—SPILLERS, LTD. v. CARDIFF ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE & PRITCHARD (CARDIFF REVENUE OFFICER), PIERCE (WIRRAL REVENUE OFFICER) v. WIRRAL ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE & SPILLERS, LTD., PINSENT (PLYMOUTH REVENUE OFFICER) v. PLYMOUTH ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE & OCTAGON BREWERY CO., BLUNT (WEST DERBY REVENUE OFFICER) v. WEST DERBY ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE & TATE & LYLE, LTD., [1931] 2 K. 226ff. Freight-transport hereditament—Particular instances.]—(1) Certain bonded warehouses near the port of Liverpool were used for the storage of tobacco, wine & sugar passing through the port, & the bulk of these goods was stored for a very substantial time:—Held: on the facts the warehouses were primarily used for warehousing merchandise not in the course of transport & were not subjects for derating.

(2) A wool warehouse not actually connected with any particular dock & not a bonded warehouse was used as a storage place for wool conveyed thereto by the Dock Authority at the charge of the consignee to be sold at the regular wool sales :—Held : the warehouse was not used for transport purposes, but as a place for preparing goods for sale, & was not entitled to be derated.

(3) Three grain warehouses had as their special feature an elevator by which grain was discharged from ships, barges or carts into the warehouse, & when sold, moved out again into sea or land vehicles. The bulk of the grain remained in the warehouses for a short time only, & the revenue derived from shipping & unshipping exceeded that derived from storage & warehousing :—Held : the warehouses were used to a substantial extent for purposes of shipping & unshipping & were entitled to be derated as freight-transport hereditaments.

Therefore, when a general engineering works consists of four departments, one of which falls within the definition of " iron & steel works " in Local Government Act, 1929 (c. 17), Sched. XI., Part I., para. 17, it cannot for the purpose of the above scheme be considered as four separate works, but must be regarded as a whole, & a general engineering works is not an iron & steel works.—CENTRAL MARINE ENGINE WORKS v. AMALGAMATED RY. 226jj. —— Cold storage—Apportionment.]—Applt. co. occupied two hereditaments abutting on the Thames which were used as cold stores, being equipped with refrigerating machinery & insulation necessary for dealing with shipments of refrigerated goods arriving in the port of London from colonial & foreign markets. The goods were brought to the hereditaments from the ocean-going steamers in insulated barges, on delivery into which the liability of the shipowners ceased. The goods were sorted to marks in the hereditaments. In one of these 17½ per cent. of the goods were delivered out immediately after sorting, while of the balance of 82½ per cent. part did not remain in the hereditament longer than twenty-eight days, & part remained for a longer period. In the other hereditament 12 per cent. were delivered out immediately after sorting, the balance remaining for a period up to twenty-eight days or longer. Each hereditament had, besides its refrigerating chambers & machinery, a crane for the unshipping of goods, a non-insulated reception front & a non-insulated delivery front. On a claim by applt. co. for the derating of the hereditaments :—Held : (1) the hereditaments, so far as regarded the refrigerating machinery & chambers, were " primarily occupied & used for warehousing merchandise not in the course of being transported," & therefore were not entitled to be derated ; (2) the crane, non-insulated reception front & non-insulated delivery front were primarily used for dock purposes, & were entitled to be derated ; & therefore (3) the value of the hereditaments for derating purposes must be apportioned, the apportionment being between the value of the refrigerating chambers, etc., which were not the subject of derating, on the one hand, & the value of the crane, non-insulated reception & delivery fronts, which were the subject of derating, on the other hand.

Per SCRUTTON, L.J. : The primary use of refrigerating chambers is to store goods not being transported, rather than, like barges, to serve as a means of transport.—UNION COLD STORAGE CO. v. MOON, [1932] 2 K. B. 648 ; 101 L. J. K. B. 791 ; 147 L. T. 487 ; 96 J. P. 432 ; 30 L. G. R. 433, C. A.

h i. —— ——.]—Christ College Trust, as the owner of certain lands & buildings in Hobart, was rated by the municipal council in respect of such buildings which were used as a public boys' school. All pupils, with unimportant exceptions, were liable to pay fees. The fees received were considerably less than the expense of the school. The deficiency was made good from income derived from capital invested in trust for the school. Under the trust deed by which the school was established, & Christ College Acts, 1926, no member of the board of management could derive any profit from the school :—Held : even if the school were used for charitable purposes it was not used solely for such purposes, in that the compulsory payment of fees by pupils made the institution a business ; &, the words " charitable purposes " should be construed ejusdem generis with hospital & benevolent society, & not in their technical sense.—CHRIST COLLEGE TRUST v. HOBART CORPN., 22 Tas. 903a. —— ——.]—By sect. 111 of the Manchester Corpn. Waterworks Act, 1847, the corpn. were authorised to levy a domestic water rate on occupiers of property in the city & a public water rate on owners of such property. A poor rate was made in respect of a hereditament consisting of part of the aqueduct from T. to M. in the township of L. The method of assessment adopted by the corpn. & the assessment committee was that approved by the House of Lords in Kingston Union v. Metropolitan Water Board, No. 901, the profits basis system. For the relevant year the revenue of the corpn. in respect of their water undertaking was £755,043 5*s.* 8*d.*, including £79,099 13*s.* 11*d.*, the amount collected in respect of the public water rate. After deducting the expenditure of carrying on the undertaking there remained a balance of £462,335 4*s.* 2*d.*, &, out of this, provision was made (i) for payment of interest & dividends; (ii) for sinking fund in respect of the moneys borrowed by the corpn. under the statutory powers for their water undertaking, including sums to meet expenditure on the construction of works, none of which were completed or occupied or brought into use until after the period for which this rate was made; & (iii) for the promotion of the Bill for the Manchester Corpn. The assessment committee, for the purposes of their valuation of this hereditament, included the whole of the sum of £79,099 13*s.* 11*d.*, the proceeds of the public water rate, in the gross revenue of the corpn.'s water undertaking & made no deduction in respect of debt charges:—Held: this sum should be excluded. But for the fact that the landlords' charges were included in the account there would have been no need for the hypothetical tenant to raise this public water rate or any part of it. On May 10, 1928, applts. entered into a new lease for a term of twenty years of part of their properties. Quarter sessions found that under the trade conditions prevailing at the time when the rate was made, none of applts.' properties could be worked except at a loss, & that there was no indication that conditions of trade were likely to improve within a year; &, further, that the only basis on which any one could have been found who might have entered into a tenancy of the properties at that time would have been on the assumption that his tenancy would continue for a term of years & in the hope that conditions of trade would improve during that period. Upon these findings they rejected applts.' contention:—Held: (1) the expression "term of years," as used by quarter sessions, meant a tenancy from year to year, which might be put an end to on notice; where a colliery was actually being worked by the occupier as a going concern the expectation of better trade subsequent to the year of assessment was a consideration which might be taken into account in arriving at the true assessment; (2) inasmuch as quarter sessions had not included any matter of law which they ought to have excluded, or excluded any matter of law which they ought to have included, the quantum of the rateable values of the mines was a pure question of fact for that ct.—CONSETT IRON CO., LTD. v. DURHAM COUNTY ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE FOR NO. 5 OR NORTH-WESTERN AREA, [1931] A. 1146a. —— —— Rating & Valuation Act, 1925 (c. 90), Sched. I., provisions 11, 12.]—By provision 12 of Sched. I. to the Rating & Valuation Act, 1925: "No person who is a member of any committee to which the duties of the rating authority with respect to the preparation of the valuation list are delegated shall be qualified for appointment as a member of the assessment committee."

A rating authority had appointed a sub-committee to fix the values of properties in the district for the purpose of the preparation of the valuation list. They appointed P. & G. members thereof, & subsequently appointed the same two persons as their representatives on the resp. assessment committee. The applicant had given notice of objections to his assessment to the resp. committee, & on learning the above facts, obtained a rule nisi for a prohibition to that committee from hearing & determining his objection:—Held: (1) a writ of prohibition would lie to an assessment committee; (2) within provision 12, the duties of the rating authority with respect to the preparation of the valuation list had been delegated to the sub-committee of which P. & G. were members, &, consequently, they were disqualified from sitting on the assessment committee under provision 12, although at the time of their appointment thereto they were not disqualified; (3) P. & G. were not interested "otherwise" within provision 11, which refers to an interest ejusdem generis as that of an owner or occupier.—R. v. NORTH WORCESTERSHIRE ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE, Ex p. HADLEY, [1929] 2 K. 1158a. —— No injustice—Similar properties incorrectly assessed.]—Applts., who were assessed in respect of their premises at £325 gross & £267 rateable value, objected that they had been incorrectly & unfairly assessed in that seven other hereditaments of the same class in the same valuation list had been assessed at lower figures. Applts. called no evidence to prove that their assessment was higher than the rent which might be expected to be obtained for their premises, & their only witness agreed that the rent would be at least £325 ; nor did applts. seek to alter the assessments of the seven other hereditaments, but they sought to use these as evidence that their own assessment was excessive & unfair :—Held : as applts.' hereditament had been entered in the valuation list at the proper figure, evidence that the seven other hereditaments had been assessed at a lower figure was irrelevant & could not be used to justify a reduction of applts.' assessment. That evidence was of no weight unless for the purpose, on proper notice, of correcting the inaccuracy of the other hereditaments.—LADIES' HOSIERY & UNDERWEAR, LTD. v. WEST MIDDLESEX ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE, [1932] 2 K. 1184a. Duty of rating authority to alter " then current rate "—On alteration of valuation list by assessment committee.]—Applts., in Jan. 1927, gave notice of objection to the valuation list, & relief was refused by the assessment committee. In Nov. 1927 the new assessment committee which came into being on Apr. 1, 1927, reconsidered applts.' objection & granted relief, as from Apr. 1, 1926. They altered the valuation list accordingly, but the rating authority refused to alter the rate book, on the ground that the assessment committee could not make their reconsidered decision relate back to the earlier rating period in which the objection had been originally taken & decided :—Held : it was the duty of the rating authority to alter their " then current rate " on receipt of notice from the assessment committee, & " then current rate " meant the rate current at the date of the objection.—KINGSTON MILL, STOCKPORT, LTD. v. OWEN (1928), 141 L. 1392a. Next sessions after date of rate—Not date of realisation of grievance—County Rate Act, 1852 (c. 81), s. 22.]—The appeal given by above sect., to a parish which is " aggrieved by any rate or assessment " made upon the county rate basis to " the next quarter sessions of the peace after such cause of appeal shall have arisen " must be brought to the next practicable quarter sessions after the parish is in fact aggrieved by the rate; the appeal is not to the next practicable quarter sessions to be held after the parish finds out that it is aggrieved.

A county rate which affected the parish of M. was made in Oct. 1904. In Jan. 1905, as the result of an appeal by a railway co. against their assessment to the poor rate in the parish of M., the rateable value of the parish for the purpose of the county rate basis or standard was reduced by a considerable sum. On Apr. 17, 1905, the parish council of M. gave notice of appeal to the next quarter sessions against such part of the basis or standard as affected that parish, & also against the rate existing upon that basis or standard, 1564a. Failure to object in time—Whether mandamus to alter lies.]—The prosecutors were the occupiers of hereditaments which they claimed to be industrial hereditaments, but on Dec. 11, 1929, quarter sessions decided, subject to a special case, that the said hereditaments were not entitled to be placed in the special list. Before the case stated was heard, the quinquennial valuation list, 1930, was deposited & approved. No objection to that list, which included all the said hereditaments as non-industrial, was taken by the prosecutors on the assumption that, if the Div. Ct. decided in their favour on the case stated, the amendment of the new valuation list would follow automatically. On Apr. 6, 1931, the new valuation list came into force, and on Apr. 23, 1931, the Div. Ct. allowed the prosecutors' appeal from quarter sessions, & ordered the hereditaments to be inserted in the special list. This was done so far as the old valuation list was concerned, but the rating authority refused to alter the new valuation list, on the ground that they

sc. Intention to sever—Sufficiency of evidence.]—A husband & wife, under a certain deed executed in 1884, prior to their marriage, became equitable joint tenants of a farm at C., held under a tenancy from year to year, & also of another farm at R. In 1900 the wife purchased the farm at R., & was registered a owner in fee simple, subject to equities. In 1911 the husband purchased the farm at C., & was registered as owner in fee simple, subject to equities. The husband died in 1921, &, by his will, left the farm at C. to one of his sons. The wife claimed the farm by survivorship:—Held: a severance of the joint tenancy in the farm did not, as a matter of law, result from the purchase of the fee simple by the husband. Also, on the evidence, the ct. could not infer that the husband & wife had agreed to sever the joint tenancy in both farms.—FLYNN v. FLYNN, [1930] I. R. 337.—IR.

911a. First registration under Land Transfer Acts, 1875 & 1897—Effect of Land Registration Act, 1925 (c. 21), s. 147.]—The purchasers of freehold land caused themselves to be registered as first proprietors with an absolute title under Land Transfer Acts, 1875 & 1897, of the land purporting to be conveyed to them, which included two narrow strips of woodland of which, as the ct. decided in this action, an adjoining owner was in possession, having acquired a good title by possession to the fee simple at the time of the registration :—Held : that notwithstanding Land Registration Act, 1925 (c. 21), s. 147, the power to rectify the register conferred by sect. 82 (1) of that Act enabled the ct. to order rectification of entries made in the register under Land Transfer Acts, 1875 & 1897, & accordingly that the order for rectification of the register by excluding from pltfs.' registered title the land erroneously included in it had been properly made.—CHOWOOD, LTD. v. LYALL (2), [1930] 2 Ch. 156 ; 99 L. 1175 v. ——.]—Under the definition of "mesne profits" in Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, s. 2 (12), the sum to be awarded is not what pltf. has lost by his exclusion from the land, but what deft. has made, or might with reasonable diligence have made, by his wrongful possession. In the case of agricultural land that depends upon what an ordinary prudent agriculturist would have grown, & if deft. for his own purposes has grown a less profitable crop the mesne profits are not thereby limited. If deft. has let the land the rent received is ordinarily the measure of the profits in the absence of evidence that a higher rent could have been obtained by reasonable diligence; but if he has cultivated the land himself the cultivation profits are the primary consideration.—GRAY v. BHAGU MIAN (1929), 57 L. 221a. —— Bankruptcy of covenantor.]—A marriage having been dissolved by a decree absolute in 1925, the wife remarried shortly afterwards. Immediately before the remarriage the former husband executed a settlement on his former wife in consideration of her release of any claim to alimony or maintenance from him. By the settlement the husband covenanted with his former wife & as a separate covenant with the trustees to pay her, during their joint lives, an annuity of such an amount as after deduction of income tax would yield the clear sum of £3,000 a year for her separate use without power of anticipation whilst under coverture. In 1929 the former husband was adjudicated bkpt. Pltfs., as trustees of the settlement, & defts., the former wife, jointly proved in the bkpcy. for a large sum made up of several items, of which £41,723 represented the capital value of the annuity of £3,000. The proof was admitted, & in Dec. 1931 a dividend of 6*d.* in the pound was paid to pltfs. This amounted to £2,322, of which £1,043 1*s.* 6*d.* was the proportion attributable to the annuity. On a summons taken out by pltfs. to determine the question whether they ought to pay to deft. the dividend so far as it was attributable to the annuity, notwithstanding the restraint upon anticipation, or whether they ought to invest the same, as being capital, in purchasing an annuity for the life of deft. :—Held : the trustees could properly pay the whole dividend to deft.—Re HORNE'S SETTLEMENT, COUTTS & CO. v. DUCHESSA DUSMET DE SMOURS, [1932] 2 Ch. 180 : 101 L. 247a. —— ——.]—Under the will of her then husband made in 1902 & a separation deed & settlement made in 1903 V. was entitled to two annuities of £200 each. Testator, who was also the settlor, died in 1913, & V. afterwards married a Dutch subject, & for the remainder of her life resided in Holland. In 1927 the trustees of the will offered to redeem both annuities, & after some negotiations were informed by V.'s solrs. that they would advise her to accept £6,000 for redemption, the annuities to be paid in full up to the date of redemption. The trustees sent the solrs. a draft release for their approval. V. having informed her solrs. that she would accept the offer of £6,000, they sent her the release engrossed for her execution, & she executed it on Jan. 12, 1928. On Jan. 17 she died, but no notification of her death was received by her solrs. in London until Jan. 31. 254b. —— Annuity charged on premises & business—Sale of business to company—Undertaking of company to pay annuity.]—By his will made in 1913 P. appointed his two sons exors. & devised & bequeathed to them the freeholds upon which his business was carried on & the businesses subject to the payment of an annuity of £300 to his wife. Testator died in 1914. In Feb. 1923 the two sons agreed to sell to a trustee for an intended co. the undertaking & assets of the business in consideration of cash & shares in the co. & an undertaking by the co. to pay all the liabilities of the vendors in relation to the business, including the annuity & a charge to secure the bank overdraft of the vendors' firm. That agreement was carried out by two deeds dated June 1, 1923, one an assignment of the goodwill & the other a conveyance of the freehold premises of the vendors in connection with the business, including freehold premises at L. The conveyance recited the charge to the bank effected by deposit of the deeds, but made no reference to the annuity, & the will was also shortly recited. The conveyance was made by the vendors as beneficial owners, & the habendum was expressed to be subject to a charge by way of collateral security to the bank to secure £774 8*s.* 4*d.*, the amount of the firm's overdraft. On Nov. 19, 1929, the co. sold the freehold premises at L. to deft. J. by a conveyance of the fee simple free from incumbrances in the usual form. The co. having paid off the £774 8*s.* 4*d.* were able to hand over the title deeds to J. The widow was paid her annuity to Dec. 1929, when the co., owing to bad trade, were unable to pay it. The widow then brought this action claiming that J. had taken the property with notice which ought to have put him on inquiry whether the premises were freed from the annuity:—Held: the conveyance to the co. being made subject to the bank charge prevented any inference by J. that the vendors had ceased to act as exors., & the vendors to the co. were shown on the conveyance to be sole beneficiaries under their father's will as well as exors., & the fact that the vendors to the co. conveyed as beneficial owners did not put J. on inquiry, as he was entitled to assume that they were selling as exors.—PARKER v. JUDKIN, [1931] 1 Ch. 475; 100 L. 912a. —— ——.]—The benefit of a covenant to pay a rentcharge does not run with the rentcharge at law, but the covenant is only in gross.

By deed dated Apr. 26, 1867, the Earl of W., the tenant for life of the W. estates, in exercise of certain powers under a private Act, conveyed part of the settled lands to E. in fee simple ; & E. granted thereout to the Earl & the person or persons who would for the time being have been entitled to the receipt of the rents & profits thereof if the conveyance had not been made yearly & for every year for ever thereafter the rent of £142 7*s.* 3*d.* There were the usual powers of distress & entry & a covenant by the grantee for himself, his heirs, exors., administrators & assigns with the Earl his heirs & assigns & other the person or persons who would for the time being have been entitled as aforesaid that he, the grantee, his heirs & assigns, would pay the yearly rent thereby reserved to the person or persons entitled thereto under the reservation thereinbefore contained. The Earl died in 1882, & under & by virtue of various deaths & two successive disentailing deeds & resettlements the W. estates passed ultimately to the present infant tenant in tail & became vested in the pltfs. as statutory owners thereof. In none of those title deeds was there an express assignment of the benefit of the covenant to pay the rentcharge. E. died in 1887, leaving a will of which the first deft. was exor., he & the other defts. being the present trustees thereof. In 1920 the trustees sold & conveyed the land conveyed to their testator in 1867 to W. in fee simple, subject to the rentcharge & to the covenants on the part of the grantee contained in the conveyance of 1867. In 1927 W. became bkpt., & by an order of Aug. 8, 1929, the bkpt.'s interest in the land was vested in pltfs. in fee simple. Payments of the rentcharge having ceased to be made since Dec. 25, 1927, pltfs. brought this action for payment by defts. of £231, the arrears which accrued down to the date when the land was vested in them :—Held : (1) notwithstanding the absence of express words of limitation a perpetual rentcharge had been effectually created ; (2) the benefit of a covenant to pay the rentcharge did not run with the rentcharge ; (3) Real Property Act, 1845 (c. 106), s. 5, now Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 56, did not affect the second question, as the sect. only applied to covenants which ran with the land or property.—GRANT v. EDMONDSON, [1931] 1 Ch. 1 ; 100 L. SUB-SECT. 1.—BETTING DUTY (Vol. XXXIX., p. 232).

NOTE.—This Duty was abolished by Finance Act, 1930 (c. 28), s. 4.

Add the following case :—

93a. Who liable to duty — Club — Managing totalisator.]—A limited co. was the proprietor of a club formed for social intercourse. Upon the club premises betting on horse races was transacted through the instrumentality of two machines, called totalisators, owned by the co. & worked by the co.'s servants. Any member desiring to use these machines for the purpose of backing horses applied to join the club pool, &, if elected as a pool member, he became entitled on payment of a small subscription to operate, & for this purpose he was supplied with credit vouchers of varying amounts. Under the rules of the pool 10 per cent. of the gross amount of the stakes on each race was retained by the co. in respect of the facilities provided & the expenses of management, & the balance was divided among the backers, called in the rules " investors," of the winning horse in the proportion of their stakes. The winnings for each week were paid by the co. from its own funds irrespective of any possible loss owing to dishonour of the vouchers. The rules provided that the club acted simply as a distributing agent. Upon an information preferred by the A.-G. against the co. alleging that the co. was liable to pay betting duty in respect of wagers on horse races made by members of the club by means of these machines, it was admitted that the co. was a bookmaker & that the transactions in question were bets within Finance Act, 1926 (c. 22), s. 15 :—Held : the bets were not made with the co., but by the members inter se, & the claim of the Crown failed.—A.-G. v. LUNCHEON & SPORTS CLUB, LTD., [1929] A. The employee had sole charge of the premises in the absence of the bookmaker, who attended race meetings in other towns during the flat racing season, & had on one occasion been absent from the premises for ten days consecutively. The business of both cos. was carried on in the same premises & the officers of both were the same. The manufacturing co. sold the major portion of its products to the selling co. on the basis of costs plus 15 per cent. profit. The Crown claimed that the manufacturing, or alternatively both cos. were liable for the sales tax upon the basis of the sales price to the public by the selling co., namely, the market price.—Held : the selling price arranged between the two deft. cos. was not the sale price within the statute. however, that gallonage tax shall not be payable "when such goods are manufactured for export under regulations prescribed by the Minister of Customs & Excise," & that sales tax shall not be payable on "goods exported," with a provision for a refund on "domestic goods exported under regulations" similarly prescribed :—Held : the exemption from gallonage tax, like that from sales tax, applied only to goods actually exported, & it operated although no regulations had been prescribed ; & an export of beer to the U.S.A. was within the exempting provisions although the import was contrary to the law of that country. Further, beer sold to a purchaser in the U.S.A. was within the exemptions where it had been consigned to him at a Canadian port, & was proved to have been shipped from there into the U.S.A. in smaller consignments, mostly to sub-purchasers.—CARLING EXPORT BREWING & MALTING CO., LTD. v. R., [1931] A. S. C., 1927, ss. 86, 87, for sales tax on the lumber so consumed. The intention of the Act was to levy the tax on the sale price of all goods produced or manufactured in Canada, whether they be sold by the manufacturer or consumed by himself for his own purposes.—R. v. FRASER COMPANIES, LTD., [1931] S. C., 1927, c. 179. Clause 4 of the special case agreed on stated that "the cost of producing such samples was paid by [deft.] as a necessary expense of business, & [deft.] in its books treated such expense as a necessary cost of production of articles manufactured & sold, in respect of which last-mentioned articles [deft.] has paid sales tax" :—Held : the "use" by the manufacturer or producer of goods not sold, dealt with in sect. 87 (d), includes any use whatever that he may make of such goods, & is wide enough to cover their "use" for advertising purposes by their distribution as free samples, & would have covered their use in the present case, & the samples would have been subject to the tax, but for said clause 4 of the special case, which must be taken as an admission that the sales tax had already been paid upon the cost of producing the samples for free distribution, in which case to hold them now subject to the tax would involve double taxation, which the legislature should not be taken to have intended.—R. v. HENRY K. o xviii. —— To what sales applicable.]—Sales tax imposed by Sales Tax Acts (No. 1), 1930, is chargeable on goods manufactured in Australia, & treated by the manufacturer as stock for sale by him by retail prior to forming part of any other article. Beads or button blanks, nearly spherical in shape, made of trocas shell & perforated by one hole were imported into the United Kingdom. After grading them the importers made or completed the making of them into shoe-buttons in the United Kingdom, by the insertion of shanks by means of a machine into & through the holes, & then sorting, cleaning, dyeing, repolishing & resorting them for shade. The cost of the shanking was one-seventh of the total cost of the completed article; material, labour & a proportion of overheads:—Held: in deciding what is the meaning of the expression "unfinished" button in sect. 9 (3), the ct. should consider the object of the sect., which is to protect the English button trade. The statute was directed against those who imported goods, which were not quite buttons, but upon which the bulk of the work had been done abroad, very little remaining to be done by the manufacturers in the United Kingdom. 440a. Voluntary disposition inter vivos—Property disposed of including stock exempt from stamp duty.]—A deed of settlement, which operated as a voluntary disposition inter vivos, was made of certain stocks, shares, marketable securities & policies of life insurance; including certain Govt. stocks. The settlement operated as a transfer of the policies of life insurance, but the stocks, shares & marketable securities were subsequently transferred to the trustees of the settlement by separate transfers. Ad valorem "voluntary disposition" duty under Finance (1909–10) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 74, was subsequently paid or assessed, without dispute, in respect of the stocks, shares & marketable securities & policies of life insurance, with the exception of the Govt. stocks, which were exempt from duty on transfer by the General Exemptions from all Stamp Duties in the First Schedule to Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39). The comrs. held that the settlement was also chargeable with ad valorem "settlement" duty on the value of the Govt. stocks included in it. The settlor, however, contended that no duty was payable in respect of those stocks, as they were included in the settlement with other stocks in respect of which ad valorem transfer duty & not settlement duty was payable under Finance (1909–10) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 74 (1) :—Held : the Govt. stocks were distinct matters, within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 4 (a), from the other property dealt with by the settlement, &, therefore, the settlement could be separately charged as if it were a separate instrument, with settlement duty in respect of the Govt. stock.—ANSELL v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1929] 1 K. 841a. Right to pension—Not enforceable at law.]—An established civil servant of the Crown has, on the true construction of Superannuation Acts, 1834 to 1909, no legal right to a superannuation allowance or, when such an allowance has been awarded to him by the Lords Comrs. of the Treasury, to an allowance of an amount fixed by reference to the scale contained in Superannuation Act, 1859 (c. 26), s. 2, as amended by Superannuation Act, 1909 (c. 10), ss. 1, 3 (1).

Applts., four retired civil servants who had qualified for the award of a superannuation allowance, claimed to be entitled as of right to have superannuation allowances calculated on the full amount of their annual salaries & emoluments, including a bonus granted by the Treasury to civil servants, in accordance with the scale provided by Superannuation Act, 1859 (c. 26), s. 2, as amended by Superannuation Act, 1909 (c. 10), ss. 1, 3 (1). Two of applts. entered the Civil Service on the faith of a statement contained in a Treasury minute of June 14, 1859. to the effect that all persons appointed subsequent to the passing of the Act of 1859 were to be held entitled to the retiring allowances prescribed by the second sect. of that Act, & they contended that the minute was a continuing offer by the Treasury on behalf of the Crown to such persons that they should receive superannuation allowances on the terms therein contained, & that that offer had been accepted by both applts. A third applt. entered the service of the National Telephone Co. in 1895, & on the transfer of the telephones to the Post Office under Telephone Act, 1911 (c. 26), assigned his share in a contributory pension fund to the Postmaster-General, & was appointed to a pensionable office in the Post Office which qualified him for a superannuation allowance under sect. 6 of that Act, which, by sect. 10, was to be read as one with the Superannuation Acts, 1834 to 1909. The Lords Comrs. of the Treasury, acting in accordance with a Treasury minute dated Mar. 20, 1922, awarded to each of applts. a superannuation allowance calculated on a basis differing from & less favourable to him than that provided by sect. 2 of 1859 Act, as amended by sect. 1 & sect. 3 (1) of 1909 Act, & computed his allowance (a) on his fixed annual salary & emoluments, exclusive of his bonus emoluments; & (b) on a sum less than the full amount of his annual bonus emolument:—Held: (1) applts. had no legal right enforceable in a ct. of law to superannuation allowances calculated accord-

R. S. C., 1927 (c. 42), s. 183, as being in Canadian waters contrary to its provision. The defence alleged that the entry into Canadian waters was due to the fact that the sole man in command, during the illness of the master believed himself without the three mile limit. The anchorage was made in the dark, & this man had been battling with the elements for two days alone, had only had three hours' sleep in 72, & was exhausted:—Held: in the circumstances, he could not be regarded as a mariner in ordinary conditions, & could not be called upon to take such precautions as would in other circumstances be required by this ct., & the entry was due to "unavoidable causes."—R. v. "MARY C. se. Seizure of unregistered motor boat — Departure without clearance.]—A certain unregistered motor boat of less than 10 tons tonnage was seized under sect. 244 of Customs Act for departing from a port in Canada without a clearance. She had been moored at one pier in the Customs port of Sydney & left this pier to go to another point in the same port:—Held: (1) inasmuch as the motor boat in question was not required to be registered, & was not eligible for clearance by Customs on a coasting voyage, she was not required to obtain a clearance under the provisions of the Customs Act before leaving her port or place of mooring &, in consequence, she was not liable for penalty imposed by sect. 244 of the Act; (2) the boat in question did not depart from the port of Sydney within the meaning of said section & the provisions of the statute do not apply to a small boat which is unregistered & which is proceeding from one point in any port to another point in the same port without goods on board, & that she was not required to clear.—HEARN v. R., [1931] Ex. 841a i. Right to pension—Not enforceable at law.]—Held: a civil servant, retired or removed from office, has no right of action to recover any allowance under the Superannuation Act, such allowance being entirely in the discretion of the executive authority. That no contractual relationship arises between the Crown & its servants with respect to such allowances. To create such contractual relationship would require express statutory enactment.—MILLER v. R., [1931] Ex. C. R. 22.—CAN.

On Mar. 6, 1913, he was again engaged & continued in the service until Feb. 1, 1928, when he retired. The Superannuation Board decided that he was entitled to a retiring allowance calculated only in respect of his service from Mar. 6, 1913, to the date of his retirement:—Held: he was entitled to the payment of superannuation allowance calculated upon the whole period of his service, viz. 39 years.—Ex p. GIBBONS (1928), 29 S. 430a. "Current prices."]—By an agreement dated July 12, 1927, pltfs. & defts. agreed that pltfs. were to deal with defts.' entire output of Jarrow pig iron available for delivery in Scotland, pltfs. undertaking to push the sale of the same in Scotland in preference to any other brand. They were to base their prices on the current prices for Middlesbrough pig iron, free on truck makers' works or f.o.b. makers' wharf, excluding Tees dues, & to pay cash on Mondays for the previous weeks' shipments. Disputes having arisen between the parties about the prices which pltfs. ought to charge for the pig iron which they sold, defts. notified pltfs. that they terminated the agreement as from Apr. 22, 1928. Pltfs. brought an action for breach of contract, because, as they alleged, defts. refused to supply them at "the current prices for the Middlesbrough pig iron." Defts. contended that the phrase "current prices" were the list prices which were published every week in a trade newspaper by a group or combine of iron founders in Middlesbrough, but pltfs. contended that "current prices" meant the price at which pig iron was actually being sold in Scotland by the sole agent of the combine :—Held : the expression "current prices" in the agreement meant the list prices which were published every week by the combine in Middlesbrough, & did not mean the price at which pig iron was actually being sold in Scotland by the sole agent of the combine.—JACKS & CO. v. PALMER'S SHIPBUILDING & IRON CO. The usual & current trade discount at the time was four cents off the retail or "tank wagon price." Subsequently defts. made special contracts with other dealers, representing about 90 per cent. of the trade. Under these contracts defts. was given the exclusive sale to said dealers for a period of years & the dealers were allowed an extra discount of two cents over the usual four cents :—Held : said subsequent special contracts did not displace the original "current market price" as the foundation of pltf.'s rights under his contract, &, therefore, he was not, as he contended, entitled to a discount of seven cents below the retail price.—JACKSON v. SHELL OIL CO., [1931] 1 W. contracted in the belief that the goods supplied by the sellers were in accordance with the contract, whereas the meal was not in accordance with the contract, & he counterclaimed for rescission of the agreement & for the return of the money paid under it & also for damages for the breach of contract:—Held: the various deliveries of meal which had been made by the sellers before the date of the agreement did not, by reason of the adulteration, answer the contract description & therefore might have been rejected by the buyer if the defects had been discovered in time, notwithstanding the clause in the contract: "the goods to be taken with all faults & defects, damaged or inferior, if any, at valuation to be arranged . . ." because that clause applied only to goods which answered the trade description, & did not shut out the overriding warranty in Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 13, that in a sale of goods by description there is an implied condition that the goods shall correspond with the description. Further, that the clause in the contract that "Each delivery or shipment shall be treated as a separate contract, & the failure to give or to take any delivery or shipment shall not cancel the contract as to future deliveries or shipments" could not be construed so as to defeat the rights of the buyer under Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 31 (2), to treat the breach of contract by the sellers as a repudiation of the whole contract; notwithstanding that the sellers had no knowledge of the defects & had no intention to deliver defective articles, inasmuch as the intention of a seller must be judged from his acts. But although the buyer, if he had at the date of the agreement for cancellation ascertained all the facts relating to the past deliveries, might have been entitled to treat the contract as having been repudiated by the sellers, yet as it was in the circumstances doubtful whether he would have so elected, the defence that the agreement had been entered into under such a mutual mistake as would justify a rescission of the agreement failed, even apart from any question of restitutio in integrum. The buyer, however, was entitled to damages in respect of the defective quality of the meal that had been delivered, & to a declaration that, in view of the defective quality of the meal, he was not bound to take delivery of the meal that was undelivered.—ROBERT A. When the timber arrived the buyers found that almost the whole of it had been carried on deck & had been damaged by sea water, & they refused to accept it, on the ground that it was not the timber specified in the contract:—Held: the words "under deck" were a condition of the contract, & were part of the contract description of the goods, & on both grounds the buyers were entitled to reject.—MONTAGUE L. 856b. —— —— Defect ascertained by third party.] Crane manufacturers sold a crane in parts to a firm of builders, the arrangement being that the parts were to be assembled by the builders' men. The builders had in their employment an experienced crane erector, who in assembling the parts found that certain cog-wheels worked stiffly, did not fit accurately, & required to be remedied; he accordingly marked in chalk the places where there was inaccurate fitting, saying at the same time that he would have to report the matter to his employers. Before the defects so discovered had been remedied the erector began working the crane, & while he was so engaged a part of it fell & killed him, the fall being due to the defects above mentioned. In an action by his widow under the Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), against the manufacturers of the crane:—Held: the defects being discoverable on reasonable inspection, &, having in fact been discovered by the deceased man, the manufacturers owed him no duty & were not liable for the accident.—FARR v. BUTTERS BROS. & Co., [1932] 2 K. The contract further provided that in the event of accidents on board steamers the operation of the contract was to be suspended & at the buyers' option the contract quantity was to be reduced pro rata. For one of the deliveries the buyers nominated a steamer which they had on time charter, but at the time the steamer, without the knowledge of the buyers, was unseaworthy, & the buyers, on learning that the steamer had had an accident & must be dry docked, intimated their exercise of their option to reduce the quantity of oil to be taken. The sellers contended that it was the duty of the buyers to charter some other vessel:—Held: on a case stated by an arbitrator, the buyers did not warrant the seaworthiness of vessels which they nominated for the performance of such a contract, & they were entitled to exercise their option.—MEDWAY OIL & STORAGE CO., LTD. v. RUSSIAN OIL PRODUCTS, LTD. Defts. required a truck for immediate use on a contract for the construction of a new highway, necessitating a truck in first-class mechanical condition for immediate & continuous use for hauling purposes. All this was known to one H., pltf.'s representative, who stated to defts. that the truck was in first-class mechanical condition. Defts. had trouble from the start in keeping the truck running, but they continued to use it, both parties trying to remedy its condition. In an action to recover the purchase price defts. counterclaimed for damages for breach of warranty:—Held: both parties understood the order to call for a certain second-hand truck in first-class mechanical condition, & such being the subject-matter of the sale the above recited clause in the order did not give pltf. the right to supply something different. 1812a. —— —— Shipment of goods before contract—Ship visiting other ports before issue of bill of lading.]—A contract, dated July 2, provided for the sale of frozen rabbits & their shipment from Sydney c.i.f. Liverpool by a named steamer to sail during Aug. The bill of lading, which was dated Aug. 17, stated that the goods had been shipped by the steamer, then lying in Sydney. The steamer shipped the goods, or the bulk of them, at Sydney on June 25, when she proceeded to Queensland ports, thereafter returning to Sydney, & finally sailing from that port for Liverpool on Aug. 17. The buyers declined to take delivery of the goods, & the sellers claimed damages from them for breach of contract :—Held : the sellers were not entitled to recover, inasmuch as they had themselves committed breaches of the contract, by supplying goods the shipment of which had already taken place before the date of the contract of sale, & by tendering a bill of lading the issue of which had been delayed for so long as seven weeks after the shipment, the steamer having in the meantime visited other ports several hundred miles from the port of shipment.—FOREMAN & ELLAMS, LTD. v. BLACKBURN, [1928] 2 K. 1814a. Date of shipment incorrectly stated.] The seller under a c.i.f. contract tendered to the buyer a bill of lading which stated, not fraudulently, but contrary to the fact, that the shipment had taken place in the contract month. Being unaware of this fact at the time of the tender, the buyer accepted the shipment, & entered into sub-contracts for the sale of a portion of the goods, those sub-contracts containing a clause that " the bill or bills of lading shall be conclusive evidence of the date of shipment." The sub-purchasers refused to take delivery, alleging that the shipment had not been made during the contract month. The buyer under the original contract having then ascertained that the goods had not been shipped during the contract month :—Held : (1) he was entitled to damages for the breach by the seller of his obligation to deliver a bill of lading stating the date of shipment correctly, the measure of damages being the difference between the market price & the contract price of the goods ; (2) the buyer was not bound to enforce, for the purpose of minimising the damages, the contracts with the sub-purchasers, as to do so, after he knew that the shipment date was incorrect, might seriously injure his commercial reputation.—FINLAY (JAMES) & CO. v. N. fixing the dimensions of the goods did not provide for any variation in thickness such as would have been permitted by use of the word "about." Shipment was to be made by a summer shipment & was in fact made on Oct. 9. Resps. refused to accept, on the ground that there had not been a summer shipment. The question was referred to arbn. & an award was made that the shipment was in order because it had been made during the period of open water & was therefore a summer shipment within the meaning of that phrase in the particular trade. The award was accepted by both parties, but subsequently resps. again refused to accept the goods, on the ground that they did not comply with the contract description. This dispute also was referred to arbn., & an award was made that, although the goods were not in fact of the contract description, they were so nearly of the contract description that they were commercially within it & must be accepted. The award was in the form of a special case, & on argument of the case the award was reversed. Applts. now appealed:—Held: dismissing the appeal, as the goods were not strictly of the contract description, & the variation from that description was not so small as to come within the principle de minimis non curat lex, & applts. had not protected themselves by inserting in the contract the word "about" or other like provision, the resps. were entitled to reject.—RONAASEN (E. When the cargo arrived the buyer found that, after allowing for the permitted variation, in some classes of the timber there had been overshipment, in some classes there had been short shipment, & in some classes there had been no shipment at all. The buyer thereupon rejected the whole of the timber on the ground that the sellers had failed to perform the contract:—Held: on a special case stated by an arbitrator, the clause as to rejection could not prevent rejection where the goods tendered were not the goods "specified," &, as the goods tendered were not, in respect of quantity, the goods specified, the clause did not apply, & the buyer was entitled to reject.—GREEN v. ARCOS, LTD. S., 1920, is of the essence of the contract; but an immaterial deviation from the phraseology thereof is not a ground on which either party can avoid his proper obligation. With respect to the words "work" & "purpose" in the clause relating to the work which the machine is intended to perform, in so far as work implies purpose, it rests with the purchaser to state the purpose & he is equally responsible with the vendor for the words inserted to express it.— ——— & MACHINERY CO.

26a. Verbal acceptance—Proof of.]—In a conflict of recollection as to statements made at an interview, considerable weight ought to be attached to contemporaneous writings throwing some light on what in fact occurred. The onus of proving an unconditional verbal acceptance of an offer in writing to sell real estate ought to be regarded as a heavy one, to be discharged only by clear evidence of the fact. In a case of reasonable doubt the ct. must take the view that the verbal acceptance has not been established (MAUGHAM, J.).—WATSON v. DAVIES, [1931] 1 Ch. 455, 468; 100 L. J. Ch. 87; 144 L. Relying on this promise, the purchaser entered into a written agreement to purchase, & the plot was duly conveyed to him. The co. did not construct the road within a reasonable time, or at all, & the purchaser brought an action claiming damages for breach of contract:—Held: a promise to construct a road, apart from any conveyance of the land over which it was intended to run, was not a "contract for the sale or other disposition of land or any interest in land" & consequently that an action would lie upon it, although it was oral, without infringing the provisions of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 40 (1).—JAMESON v. KINMELL BAY LAND CO., LTD. Pltf. refused to agree to pay interest, & in a suit for specific performance contended that the whole contract as to interest was evidenced by the above telegram from deft. & pltf.'s reply to it. Part IV.—Conditions of Sale, Particulars and Special Stipulations.

576a. —— ——.]—Leasehold shops described in the particulars of sale as "Valuable business premises" were put up for sale by auction, subject to special conditions of sale & also to the National Conditions of Sale, by one of which, namely, the sixth, it was stipulated that the leases or copies thereof might be examined at the office of the vendors' solrs. before the sale & that the purchaser, whether or not he inspected the same, should be deemed to have bought with notice of the contents thereof. Deft. only became aware of the sale on the day when it was held &, having on that day been supplied by the auctioneers with the particulars & special conditions, but not with the National Conditions, & relying upon the truth of the description in the particulars, he bid at the sale & was declared to be the highest bidder thereat. He then signed the usual form of memorandum to the effect above stated & paid a deposit to the auctioneers. In the course of investigating the title it came to deft.'s knowledge for the first time that the leases under which the properties were held were subject to covenants which prohibited any other trade or business than that of a ladies' outfitter, fancy draper & manufacturer of ladies' clothing from being carried on upon the properties. In consequence of the existence of those restrictive covenants & the failure of the pltfs. to procure their removal or the licence of the lessors to use the properties for the purposes of any business, the deft. refused to complete the purchase. In an action by the vendors for specific performance in which deft. counterclaimed rescission of the contract & to recover his deposit :—Held : (1) a shop which could be used for one purpose only was not fairly described as "valuable business premises"; (2) such a misleading representation by pltfs. in their particulars of sale disentitled them, notwithstanding the sixth condition, to the assistance of the ct. to compel deft., who purchased in reliance upon the truth of such representation, to specifically perform his part of a contract for a consideration different from that which he was led to expect.—CHARLES HUNT, LTD. v. PALMER, [1931] 2 Ch. 287; 100 L. 771a. —— ——.]—At a sale by auction of property belonging to deft. pltf. became the purchaser of a freehold cottage, subject to the National Conditions of Sale, clause 10 of which provided that no error, misstatement or omission in the particulars should annul the sale, nor should any compensation be allowed by either party in respect thereof. The particulars stated that the cottage was let to a tenant whose notice to quite had determined, but who had been allowed to remain in occupation on sufferance, & that the premises would be sold with vacant possession on completion. The statement was misleading, as the premises were in fact in the occupation of a sub-tenant, who claimed to be entitled to remain on as a statutory tenant under Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (Restriction) Acts, & refused to vacate them. The purchaser refused to complete without vacant possession, with which he could have resold the property at a profit, & sued the vendor for damages for breach of contract :—Held : the action failed. There was no breach of contract, the statement in the particulars being an error or misstatement within clause 10 of the conditions in respect of which the purchaser

838a. —.]—At an auction sale the purchaser bought freehold property sold subject to certain special conditions & to the General Conditions of Sale, 1925. The particulars & conditions of sale did not disclose the fact that two sewers, vested in the local authority & known by the vendors to exist, ran along the east side of the premises & along the yard at the back. Objection was taken on behalf of the purchaser. The vendors refused to release him from the contract, contending that the existence of the sewers did not prevent the use of the premises as a dwelling-house, for which the purchaser had bought them; but abatement of the purchase price was offered by way of compensation. The purchaser declined the offer, & by this summons asked for a declaration that the property was substantially different from that agreed to be sold, & for rescission, or, alternatively, a declaration that he was entitled to compensation:—Held: the failure to disclose the existence of the sewers, although materially affecting the description, did not force upon the purchaser property substantially different from that agreed to be sold; & the contract could be performed subject to compensation under Condition 35 of the General Conditions of Sale, 1925.—Re BELCHAM & GAWLEY'S CONTRACT, [1930] 1 Ch. 56; 99 L. 880a. Contract for completion "on or about" given date.]—By a contract dated Oct. 19, 1928, pltf. agreed to sell to deft. all her right, title & interest in a licensed house known as The Thorns, of which she was the licensee. The contract provided that the purchase money should be paid "on or about" Nov. 10, 1928, & that deft. should forfeit the deposit of £120 which he had paid if he should fail to fulfil his part of the contract; also that either party refusing to comply with or neglecting to perform any part of the agreement should pay to the other, on demand, the sum of £200. On Oct. 3, 1928, deft. had given to the brewers who were the freeholders of The Thorne references which they had accepted by Oct. 10. He went to the magistrates' clerk & signed the ordinary notices on reference to a request for a temporary transfer on Nov. 10, & for full transfer on Dec. 8. At least a week before Nov. 10 deft. knew that he would be unable to complete the purchase of The Thorns unless he could raise a loan. His brokers acting in the matter sent him a notice to attend on Nov. 10. He did so, & first saw the brewers, telling them that he could not complete, & that the notice of application for transfer would have to be withdrawn & another one given. He then arranged with pltf. that completion should take place on Dec. 8. Deft., however, did not attend to complete. On Dec. 22 deft. stated that he would complete on Jan. 30. In an action by pltf. for a declaration that the contract had been rescinded & the deposit of £120 forfeited, & for damages:—Held: in the circumstances, & particularly having regard to the subject-matter, time was of the essence of the contract.—LOCK v. BELL, [1931] 1 Ch. 35; 100 L. 1104a. Sale by vendor in specified capacity.]—Where, in a vendor & purchaser contract, it is stated that the vendor will make title in a specified capacity, the contract does not amount to a warranty that he will make title in a particular manner. The warranty is no more than a warranty that a good title shall be made ; & the purchaser can be forced to accept such good title, even though made by the vendor in a capacity other than that specified.

By special conditions of sale, subject to which two houses were sold by auction, it was stated that the vendors were selling as " trustees for sale " under the will of A. On examination of the title by the purchasers, it appeared that no trust for sale was contained in the will :—Held : the above statement did not affect the powers of the vendors to make a good title as the legal personal representatives of A.—Re SPENCER & HAUSER'S CONTRACT, [1928] Ch. 598 ; 97 L. 1162a. ——— Covenant by vendor to indemnify mortgagee—Registered charge.]—On July 11, 1929, the purchaser bought Lot 2 at a sale by auction & paid a deposit. The particulars of sale described Lot 2 as an unrestricted freehold, practically an island block, with four frontages to Little Orford Street & three other streets in Chelsea, the block forming an excellent building site, when the existing buildings came into hand. On examining the vendors' registered absolute title the purchaser found Entry 7 in the Charges Register stating in effect that on the transfer of Lot 2 & other property to the vendors on May 23, 1929, by mtgees. selling under their power of sale in a mtge, of Feb. 17, 1903, from Co. A., the former owners, the vendors by way of indemnity to the mtgees., but not further or otherwise covenanted to perform the obligations of Co. A. under a deed of Dec. 23, 1905, made between Co. A. & the Chelsea Borough Council & under a London County Council Order of Dec. 12, 1905. The deed of Dec. 23, 1905, made in pursuance of a large building scheme by Co. A. provided for the stopping up (inter alia) of Little Orford Street & for making certain new streets, including a new transverse street bisecting Lot 2. The Borough Council were to obtain the necessary Closing Orders, & Co. A. were to lay out the new streets at their own expense. By their order of Dec. 12, 1905, the London County Council on the application of Co. A. sanctioned the new streets subject to certain conditions including a condition that Co. A. should covenant to lay them out, & on Dec. 21, 1905, Co. A. covenanted accordingly. On July 10, 1906, on the Borough Council's application, the justices made a Closing Order for Little Orford Street. For financial & other reasons this part of Co. A.'s scheme had not yet been proceeded with. Little Orford Street was still open ; it was in fact repaired by the Borough Council ; & at the date of the contract neither the vendors nor the purchaser knew of the Closing Order's existence. On discovering Entry 7 the purchaser required the vendors to delete it from the Register & to obtain a release of the obligations, &, on their refusal, he issued a vendor & purchaser summons for a declaration that a good title was not shown. On subsequently discovering the Closing Order he discontinued the summons & brought this action claiming a declaration that he was entitled to repudiate the contract, damages for breach, & return of the deposit. The vendors denied any breach & counterclaimed for specific performance :—Held : (1) as the title of the vendors & their mtgee. predecessors was paramount to the 1905 documents, so that they were not bound by Co. A.'s obligations thereunder, & the vendors' covenant of indemnity was a mere personal covenant to indemnify the mtgees. against a non-existent liability, the purchaser was not entitled to require the removal of Entry 7 from the vendors' registered title, but must be satisfied with a clean transfer not referring to the indemnity, & it would be the Registrar's duty to omit any reference thereto in the purchaser's registered title ; (2) the twenty-four years' old Closing Order did not affect the title, but, if & so far as it was inconsistent with the particulars, merely raised a case of innocent misrepresentation, on which the purchaser could neither repudiate the contract nor recover damages, his only remedy being to resist specific performance. Therefore, the purchaser's action failed on both points ; (3) on the vendors' counterclaim for specific performance that there was in fact no misrepresentation in the particulars, as the word "street" even in London did not necessarily mean a public highway. There was therefore no ground for refusing specific performance.—BARNES v. CADOGAN DEVELOPMENTS, LTD., [1930] 1 Ch. 479; 99 L. J. Ch. 274; 142 L. T. 626.

n i. —— To knowledge of vendor—Effect of sale on action for purchase-money.]—Resp., representing the vendor, sued applt., representing the purchaser, for the balance of the price of sale of a certain parcel of land. The latter denied his liability on the ground that the property could not be transferred to him by the vendor as it had been sold for unpaid taxes; but the vendor contended that the purchaser was still bound because the sale of the property for taxes was due to the failure by the purchaser to pay them as covenanted :—Held : resp.'s action should be dismissed. The vendor was aware that the taxes had not been paid & was looking to the purchaser for the money wherewith to pay them; he had already collected some rent for the property which he was holding as a credit against the taxes, & it can be inferred that the vendor anticipated that payments on account of taxes, when made, would pass through his hands. When, therefore, the property was sold for taxes, it was not because the vendor was misled into a belief that the purchaser had paid or intended to pay the taxes; the vendor had been notified, previously to the sale for taxes, that the purchaser repudiated the contract & was looking for a refund of his payments, & in withholding payment of the municipal claim the vendor acted deliberately, with a full knowledge of the facts.—ROYAL TRUST CO. v. KENNEDY, [1930] S. t i. —— Value of crop.]—In ascertaining whether an unfounded representation by a buyer or seller is open to redress in any form, the means of knowledge of the parties must be considered. If the misrepresentation is on a subject peculiarly within the knowledge of the party making it & be relied on by the other party it may be legally cognisable, but where the facts are not only available to the other party but also he applies or is able to apply unrestricted means of injury, & is not induced to withhold inquiry, the alleged misrepresentation is probably no more than "dealers' talk" in which each party from his own standpoint of buyer or seller usually indulges.

A purchaser of a farm sued for rescission of the contract of sale on the ground that he had been induced to buy by the vendor's statement that the crop, which was then cut & included in the sale but not yet threshed, was worth a certain amount which, after threshing, proved to be excessive, to the extent of about two & a half times its real value. The judge, who dealt with the representation as an innocent one, decreed rescission, & deft. appealed :—Held : because of the application of the above principle, & also because of the difficulty in finding that a representation of that kind was one which was really relied on by pltf. & went to the root of the contract, the appeal should be allowed.—RASCH v. HORNE, [1930] 1 W. 2475a. —— Consent in favour of specified nominee.]—On a sale of leaseholds by an original lessee, completion in favour of a solvent nominee of the purchaser can be enforced, unless it is shown that the sale was granted upon considerations purely personal to the purchaser, but the purchaser must join in the assignment for the purpose of guaranteeing the performance of the covenants.

Pltf. co. agreed to purchase from deft. property of which deft. was under-lessee. Her underlease contained a covenant not to assign without the under-lessor's consent, not to be withheld in the case of a responsible assignee. The under-lessor refused a licence to assign to pltf. co., but deft.'s solrs. were informed that a licence would be granted to complete in favour of a specified nominee. The licence was in fact available, but deft. never formally applied for it; & ultimately her solrs. returned the deposit paid by pltf. co., who thereupon brought this action for specific performance :—Held : deft. could be compelled to complete in favour of the specified nominee.

These conditions contained one in the usual form enabling the vendor to rescind the contract if the purchaser made any objection or requisition which the vendor was unable or unwilling to remove or comply with. The sale broke down following the vendor's reply to a requisition of the purchaser, the vendor having added that if the purchaser insisted on the requisition he would rescind the contract, pursuant to the conditions of sale. This reply was, in the opinion of the ct., neither capricious nor unreasonable. The purchaser replied stating that he insisted on his objection, & that he required the vendor to return the deposit & the auctioneer's fees. The vendor returned the deposit, but not the auctioneer's fees, & the purchaser subsequently sued the vendor for the amount of them :—Held : as the only way in which the purchaser could recover these fees was as damages for breach of contract, & as there had been no breach of contract on the vendor's part, the claim failed.—M'MAHON v. GAFFNEY, [1930] I. sl. Fixtures—What are.]—On the question whether a certain thing is a fixture the position of an unpaid vendor with respect to a purchaser of the land, like that of a mtgee. with respect to a mtgor., is much stronger than that of a landlord where the thing is claimed by a tenant. Since the intention with which the thing was placed upon the land is one of the main factors in determining said question the inference that the real intention was that the thing should be a permanent improvement of the freehold is more readily to be drawn in the case of a purchaser who placed the thing on land which he has agreed to buy or found it already there than it is in the case where the thing is placed upon the land by a tenant. The thing in question in the present case was a two-storey building with an attached lean-to, the whole resting on stones laid on the ground, there being a dirt cellar under the main building.—PEIKOFF v. BRIGHTWELL (No. 2), [1932] 1 W. what the Ct. of Appeal thought it meant, it would follow that the purchaser was at liberty through the medium of his solr. to decline the title from mere caprice; but none of the judges accepted this extreme view. It is reasonable, they thought, to imply good faith as a necessary ingredient. On the other hand, it seems to be putting an undue strain on the words to construe them, when used by a layman, as connoting not the approval of his own solr., which is their plain, ordinary meaning, but the decision of a ct. of justice after an unknown delay & at an unascertainable cost (MAUGHAM, J.).—CURTIS MOFFAT, LTD. v. WHEELER, [1929] 2 Ch. 224; 98 L. (3) In order to keep their estate purely residential pltfs.' predecessors had imposed covenants preventing any house being used "otherwise than as a private dwelling-house." They or pltfs. had, however, licensed a number of schools, some blocks of flats, a hotel, &, in certain exceptional circumstances, three boarding houses, & without pltfs.' knowledge about half a dozen other boarding houses were being carried on in the area, which, however, still remained mainly residential :—Held : these acts & omissions did not prevent the pltfs. from restraining deft. from using his house as a guest house.—CHATSWORTH ESTATES CO. v. FEWELL, [1931] 1 Ch. 224 ; 100 L. These restrictions were entered in the Charges Register at the Land Registry. Appct., unable to sell the premises as a private residence, negotiated with persons willing to buy them if the restrictions could be proved no longer effective. So far as could be ascertained, the premises had never been the subject of a building scheme: the Comrs. no longer owned any property in the immediate neighbourhood; & neither they nor their successors in title to properties adjacent to the premises claimed the right to enforce the restrictions. On a summons for a declaration, under sect. 84 (2) of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), that no part of the premises was any longer affected by any of the restrictions, & for the cancellation of the entry of the restrictions in the Charges Register:—Held: as there had never been a building scheme, & as the restrictions had never been expressly assigned or expressed to be for the benefit of adjacent property of the Comrs. or of any defined area near the premises, there was no one who could enforce the restrictions, which therefore no longer affected the premises.—Re SUNNYFIELD, [1932] 1 Ch. 79; 101 L. 2922a. —— ——.]—By an agreement in writing deft. agreed to sell to pltf. a plot of land, part of a building estate, with a dwelling-house thereon in course of erection, & to complete the dwelling-house in accordance with plans of other houses, with fittings similar in all material particulars to those in other houses, erected on the estate. A deed of conveyance of the premises to pltf. was subsequently executed by the parties. The deed contained no reference to the building of the house or to any work done or to be done by deft. in the way of completing it or otherwise. Pltf. brought an action for breach of the agreement, alleging that deft. had thereby contracted that the builders' work should be carried out in a proper, efficient, & workmanlike manner, & that the materials used should be fit & proper for the purpose, & averring that none of these terms or conditions had been fulfilled:—Held: the agreement to complete the house being collateral to the deed of conveyance was not merged therein &, breaches of that agreement having been proved, pltf. was entitled to recover.—LAWRENCE v. CASSEL, [1930] 2 K. 2922c. —— ——.]—At common law in the absence of express contract a landlord of an unfurnished house is not liable to his tenant, nor is a vendor of real estate liable to his purchaser, for defects in the house or land rendering it dangerous or unfit for occupation, even if the defects are due to his construction or are within his knowledge.

A firm of builders, having built several houses which was nearly completed. They agreed to complete the house by the end of Oct. 1929, & to make it fit for habitation, & like in decoration & design to the other houses on the estate. The agreement contained a clause enabling C. B. to go into possession before completion as tenant at will. The house, like the others on the estate, was fitted with a particular make of boiler, which was placed on the kitchen & was heated by a Bunsen gas burner. Above the kitchen was a bathroom. From a cupboard in the bathroom a linen chute ran down to a cupboard in the kitchen connected with the boiler by a pipe. There was no flue to carry gas or fumes from the burner to the outward air. C. B. with his wife & child went into occupation on Sept. 28. The C. Gas. Co.'s inspector examined the gas fittings & set the regulator fitted to the burner so that 45 cubic feet of gas & no more passed into burner per hour. On Oct. 26, C. B. & his wife were found dead in bathroom, poisoned by carbon monoxide gas. A few days afterwards the regulator was found so set that much more than 45 cubic feet could pass into the burner in an hour. The boiler with its burner & the linen chute were parts of the realty. The boiler with the burner properly regulated was not dangerous. It was the business of the Gas

One of the tenants for life died in the lifetime of the settlor. A summons was taken out by the Public Trustee for the direction of the ct. as to the application of the accumulations of income of the share of the tenant for life who died in the lifetime of the settlor, having regard to the facts that (a) no grandchild of the settlor had attained the age of twenty-one years, or being female had married, at the death of the settlor; (b) one of the grandchildren of the settlor was born after the dates, when two of such grandchildren had attained the age of twenty-one years, & (c) a grandchild of the settlor, who survived the settlor, died under the age of twenty-one years:—Held: (1) the property from which the accumulated income arose must be regarded as the share to which the infant would become ultimately entitled, even though that share might be reduced by reason of other members of the class coming into existence; (2) the share of the grandchild, who had died under the age of twenty-one years, which had been provisionally assigned to that grandchild, ought to be treated as not having been properly assigned, & that portion of the money which had accrued while the infant was a member of the class, & which had not been applied in the maintenance & education of the infant, ought to be reassigned amongst the other persons who were at that time members of the class; (3) observations on the method of dealing with accumulations of income provisionally assigned to infant members of a class, having regard to Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 43, & Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 31.—Re KING, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. ALDRIDGE, [1928] Ch. 330; 97 L. Immediately before the commencement of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), all the cestuis que vie were dead except one, & all the original participants in income were also dead except one, & the income for many years had been distributed amongst their respective estates or assigns:—Held: (1) the land was held in undivided shares within Law of Property Act, 1925, Sched. I., Part IV., par. 1.

The trustees having received, through their surveyor, a notice from the local authority that certain premises, forming part of the trust estate, were in a defective condition, carried out the necessary repairs, & temporarily paid the cost thereof out of the rents of the trust estate:—Held: (2) the trustees having asked the ct. for directions, the ct. was free to determine how the expenses ought to be borne; (3) the expenses should be borne by capital.—Re ROBINS, HOLLAND v. GILLAM, [1928] Ch. 721; 97 L. 1873a. —— —— ——.]—Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 28 (2), has not deprived the ct. of its inherent jurisdiction to decide, in a proper case, that the cost of certain repairs to settled land ought to be borne by capital.

The intestate died possessed of an estate which included freehold cottages in a bad state of repair. After the death the local authority served notices to carry out repairs, including re-roofing & pointing of chimney stacks. Some of these repairs, in view of the state of the property at the intestate's death, would have amounted to "permanent improvements"; & this summons, issued upon the application of the administrator of the estate, raised questions as to the incidence of their cost:—Held: (1) the cost of repairs which are "improvements" within Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), Sched. III., Pts. I, II., may properly & primâ facie ought to be borne by capital; (2) works not being "improvements" within these parts of that Sched. may properly be so borne if they are shown to be works in the nature of permanent improvements; (3) ordinary current repairs & "casual repairs," i.e., those carried out in the ordinary course, generally at the cost of the tenant for life, cannot be treated as being "permanent improvements"; (4) Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 28 (2), does not compel Settled Land Act trustees to pay the costs of all repairs out of income, & does not deprive them of their discretion under Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 102.—Re SMITH, VINCENT v. SMITH, [1930] 1 Ch. 88; 99 L. J. Ch. 27; 142 L. T. 178.

1873b. — Effect of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 28 (1).]—The effect of above sub-sect. is (a) to give to trustees for sale powers of management of land, including the repair & rebuilding of houses, the cost of which, by virtue of sub-section 3 of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 102, is payable out of income, & (b) to give power to trustees to make improvements which, under Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 84, coupled with the provisions of Sched. III. thereto, can be paid for out of capital. Therefore where trustees have a choice of powers under above sub-sect., they should be guided in their choice by the equitable principles laid down & applied in Re Hotchkys, Freke v. Calmady, No. 1869, & the language of the judgment in Re Gray, Public Trustee v. Woodhouse, No. 1872, is not to be construed as an authority

In 1869 the persons who had then become absolute owners subject to the lease settled the property in strict settlement, giving to a trustee ample powers of management, with powers to grant leases with or without covenants for renewal, & to perform any covenant for renewal previously entered into by any previous owner, or by the trustee for the time being, so that in every such appointment, lease or demise the best rent be reserved without taking any fine or premium. 1998a. "Distribution of capital assets."] — A limited co. not in liquidation can make no payment by way of return of capital to its shareholders except as a step in an authorised reduction of capital. Any other distribution of money, whether called dividend or bonus or any other name, can only be made by way of dividing profits. Moneys so paid to a shareholder who is a trustee consequently will belong primâ facie to the person beneficially entitled to the income of the trust estate. If the moneys or any part of them are to be treated as corpus, there must be some provision of the trust deed which brings about that result; no statement by the co. or its officers can affect the rights of the beneficiaries in the matter.

In 1925 a pastoral co. in New South Wales sold substantially the whole of its lands, live stock & other assets, & ceased to carry on its business. In 1926 a dividend was declared & paid as "a distribution of capital assets in advance of the winding up." No question arose in the appeal as to that dividend. In Nov. 1927, the co. declared & paid a dividend, stating that it was paid out of the sale of the breeding stock. Upon an originating summons issued by trustees, who held over two-thirds of the shares issued, the Supreme Ct. held that the dividend should be treated as capital of the trust estate. Upon appeal to the Privy Council resps., while supporting that decision, contended alternatively that the dividend could not have been paid but for a breach of duty by the trustees in not opposing resolutions passed in 1926 altering one of the co.'s articles of assocn.:—Held: the dividend should be treated as income of the trust estate, but the moneys should be retained by the trustees for a limited period, in order that the beneficiaries might, if they wished, assert in hostile litigation a claim based upon the alternative contention above stated, the materials necessary to dispose of that point not being fully before the board.—HILL (R. 2243b. —— —— Opposition to Bill in Parliament.]—An estate was settled by the will of a testator, his widow being the first, & his nephew the second tenant for life. During the lifetime of the widow she expended out of her own moneys various sums in making improvements upon the estate. Some of these sums were expended before, & some after the commencement of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38). With regard to those which were expended after the commencement of the Act, no scheme was, prior to the execution of the works, submitted for approval, either to the trustees of the settlement or to the ct., in accordance with sect. 26 of the Act. The widow also, prior to the commencement of the Act, paid out of her own moneys the costs of the successful opposition of the trustees to some bills in Parliament, which contained provisions injuriously affecting the estate. The repayment to the widow of all the sums thus expended by her was secured by four bonds given to her by the nephew. After the death of the widow the nephew, being then tenant for life in possession of the estate, applied to the ct. of a direction to the trustees to apply capital money in their hands in payment of the amounts due upon the bonds:—Held: independently of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 36, the ct., under its general jurisdiction, had power to direct the payment of the costs of the Parliamentary opposition out of the capital money, & payment was directed accordingly.—Re ORMROD'S SETTLED ESTATE, [1892] 2 Ch. 318; 61 L. Trustees with duties to perform.]—A testator died, having by his will bequeathed settled legacies & having thereby also by legal limitations settled freeholds which in the events which happened became vested free from incumbrances & charges in pltf. From time to time there had been appointments of new trustees of testator's will for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts & other purposes, including three by deeds of 1902, 1904, & 1915. In 1924 pltf. had been appointed Settled Land Act trustee of testator's will, jointly with the then trustees thereof, the appointment being limited to the freeholds. At the date when the freeholds became vested absolutely in the pltf., the trusts of some of the settled legacies were still on foot. Ct., together with the fixtures & fittings & all his furniture, pictures (except some), china, plate, linen, grand piano, & all chattels & other effects therein, to his trustees upon trust to permit his sister, E., to reside there after his death, if she should wish to do so, & to have the use & enjoyment thereof during her life free of rent or other payment, & he gave to his sister the use & enjoyment of his said house, garden, & grounds, & everything contained therein, for her life accordingly, & he directed his trustees after her death or during her life if she should not wish to reside or continue to reside there to sell the same (except certain articles therein), with power to postpone such sale as they might think proper, & divide the proceeds between certain charities. He died on June 26, 1918, & the lady entered into possession thereof immediately. In 1925 she went abroad temporarily for the benefit of her health, the place being left in charge of servants, & she paid the Sched. A. tax. In 1926, owing to severe illness, she was prevented from returning to England, & the house was let by her from time to time, & she still paid Sched. A. tax thereon. In 1927 she sold the house as tenant for life or a person having the powers of a tenant for life, & shortly after the contents, other than the excepted articles, were sold by the trustees. On a summons taken out by the trustees asking whether she had any, &, if any, what interest in the proceeds of sale of the leasehold property & the income thereof:—Held: on the evidence, it must be deemed that those powers were properly exercised by her. The power of sale in the trustees never arose, nor did they purport to exercise it. She had not therefore forfeited her interest in the proceeds of sale of the leasehold property or the income thereof.—Re ACKLOM, OAKESHOTT v. HAWKINS, [1929] 1 Ch. 195; 98 L. J. Ch. 44; 140 L. 2889a. Power to vary leases—Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 59—Construction of section.]—It is apparent, in my opinion, that Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 59 (1), is dealing only with a question of form, because it is clear from the final words of sect. 59 (1) that no more is being authorised than what might have been done under Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 52 (1). The provision in question is that "every such lease or grant shall, after such variation, release, waiver or modification as aforesaid, be such a lease or grant as might then have been" granted after a surrender, etc. In my opinion sect. 59 (1) is not limited to cases where the result of the variation, release, waiver or modification will at common law effect a surrender & regrant. This section is conferring a power on the tenant for life to execute documents in a particular form which he could have executed in another form as the result of the surrender or the surrender & regrant of the land previously dealt with. It relates to the widest possible release, variation, waiver or modification, including cases in which only part of the land comprised in the old lease or grant is the subject of those alterations (MAUGHAM, J.).—Re SAVILE SETTLED ESTATES, SAVILE v. SAVILE, [1931] 2 Ch. 210, 216; 100 L. On the evidence the proposed new lease reserved the best rent that could reasonably be obtained, & contained a proviso for re-entry on non-payment of the rent for twenty-one days:—Held: the tenant for life had power under Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 42 (1), & Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 150, to grant the new lease although the underlease remained outstanding. 3047a. -.]—On Dec. 31, 1925, certain land stood limited to the use of A. for life, & after his death, subject to certain jointure rentcharges for life, & subject to certain portions which had been charged upon the estate, & which had been further secured by the limitation of a legal term, to the use of trustees upon trust for sale. The settlement under which the land so stood limited was a compound settlement, consisting of various documents, including two deeds of 1911 & 1913. In due course a vesting deed was executed in favour of A. A. died on Dec. 4, 1926, & probate, limited to the settled land, was granted to the trustees of the compound settlement as his special representatives, on the footing that that settlement did not come to an end on his death. There were separate trustees of the two deeds of 1911 & 1913. Clause 11 of the 1911 deed gave to the trustees thereof all the powers conferred on a tenant for life by Settled Land Acts, 1882 to 1890:—Held: (1) the whole legal estate, the subject-matter of the settlement, was not held upon trust for sale; (2) in view of clause 11 of the 1911 deed the trustees of the two deeds of 1911 & 1913 were persons on whom Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 23 (1), conferred the powers of a tenant for life, & they were statutory owners under the compound settlement; & when they sold the land they would sell it as statutory owners & not as trustees for sale, & they must pay over the proceeds of sale to the trustees of the compound settlement.—Re NORTON, PINNEY v. BEAUCHAMP, [1929] 1 Ch. 84; 98 L. Contents—Vesting deed on resettlement—Compound settlement.]—X. & Y., the trustees of an indenture of resettlement dated Aug. 26, 1915, by which certain property was settled subject to a jointure, executed on May 1, 1926, a vesting deed reciting the resettlement & purporting to vest the property in the tenant for life. On Dec. 31, 1925, X. was the sole surviving trustee for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts of an indenture of settlement dated July 12, 1882, which together with the resettlement & two other documents formed the compound settlement of the property. On July 5, 1926, the tenant for life entered into four contracts for the sale of a portion of the property to a purchaser. The purchaser raised objections to the title on the ground that the vesting deed was not framed in accordance with the provisions of the Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18): (a) as it only dealt with the resettlement & not with the compound settlement; (b) as it was not executed by the trustees of the compound settlement; & (c) as it did not contain the names of the persons who were the trustees of the compound settlement. The tenant for life took out a summons for a declaration that a good title to the property had been shown:—Held: the vesting deed did not comply with the requirements of the 1925 Act with reference to the compound settlement & the tenant for life was not able to exercise his statutory powers as tenant for life in respect of the disposal of his property; & the summons must be dismissed.—Re CAYLEY & EVANS' CONTRACT, [1930] 2 Ch. 143; 99 L. 3138. For the existing paragraph substitute the following paragraph :—
—— —— Settled land.]—By the will of testator, who died in 1884, his real estate was devised to trustees upon trust to permit his widow to receive the rents thereof during her life, & after her decease upon trust to pay same to or for the benefit of such of his two daughters, E. & M., as should be then living & should for the time being be single & unmarried in equal shares if more than one, & when both should be married upon trust as to both capital as well as income for all testator's children in equal shares. Testator's widow died in 1889, & on the death of E., in 1927, questions arose as to the respective interests of E. & M. & testator's children in the income & capital of the real estate. The ct. having decided that E. & M. were entitled to the income of the real estate during their joint lives in equal shares, & upon the death of E. her sister M. became entitled to the whole of the income during her spinsterhood, & upon her marriage or death the whole estate would become divisible in equal shares between the children of testator, the further question arose whether, on Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), coming into force, the devised real estate vested in the then surviving trustee of the will upon the statutory trusts under Sched. I., Part IV., par. 1 (1), or in her or the Public Trustee under par. 1 (3) :—Held : (1) as the purposes of the trusts of testator's will were such as might continue beyond the life of his widow, the real estate devised by the will was, at the date of Law of Property Act, 1925, coming into force, by the effect of Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 31, vested in the then surviving trustee of the will in fee simple in trust for E. & M., who were then beneficially interested in equity until one of them should marry or die in undivided shares vested in possession ; (2) although their interests were not absolute interests, the case fell within Sched. I., Part IV., par. 1 (1), & the real estate thereupon vested in the trustee of the will upon the statutory trusts ; (3) when a case fell within par. 1 (1) it did not become necessary to consider whether it fell within any of the subsequent sub-paragraphs.—Re DAWSON'S SETTLED ESTATES, [1928] Ch. 421 ; 97 L. 3138a. —— —— ——.]—Testator, who died on June 16, 1881, leaving a widow & eight children, by his will gave all his estate to his wife & four children, whom he appointed exors. & trustees, upon trust to pay his debts, etc., & bequeathed the remainder of his personal effects to his wife & the income of his freeholds & leaseholds, subject to certain payments, & after her decease to pay such income to his four sons & daughters in certain shares, which were to cease at death, with a proviso as to four quarterly payments to widows of sons, &, subject thereto, gave his estate to the longest liver of his children absolutely. The widow died in 1900, & on the coming into force of the Law of Property Act, 1925, the deft. & daughter, who had since died, were the surviving trustees. All parties interested in the estate now desired a sale, & the question raised by this summons was first, whether pltf. & deft. Secondly, if it be not settled land, whether the entirety was now vested in the surviving trustee, or in the Public Trustee on the statutory trusts :—Held : Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), Sch. 3143a. Only one trustee—Vesting of land in Public Trustee.]—Under & by virtue of the will of a testator who died in 1921, & of subsequent dispositions, acts in the law & events, the legal estate in certain freehold land was, immediately before the commencement of the Law of Property Act, 1925, vested in two persons for their lives share & share alike, the legal estate in remainder expectant upon the lives of those persons & the life of the survivor of them being vested in a single trustee upon trust after the death of the surviving tenant for life to sell the land & divide the proceeds between the testator's nephews & nieces. Upon a summons by the tenants for life, who were desirous of selling the land, to have it determined in whom, upon the coming into force of the Law of Property Act, 1925, the land was vested: — Held: (1) as immediately before the commencement of that Act the land was held at law & in equity in undivided shares, vested in possession, & the entirety thereof was settled land, Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), Sched. I., Part IV., para. 1, sub-para. 3, would apply, if there were more than one trustee of the settlement constituted by the will, in whom the land could vest as joint tenants; but that, as there was only one trustee, the land vested, under clause (i) of the proviso to that sub-para., in the Public Trustee upon the statutory trusts; (2) if, before the Public Trustee accepted the trust, the present trustee (who before the commencement of the Law of Property Act, 1925, was the trustee of the settlement constituted by the will for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts then in force) appointed an additional trustee or trustees of that settlement, the land would vest in the trustees of the settlement as joint tenants upon the statutory trusts.—Re PRICE, PRICE v. PRICE, [1929] 2 Ch. 400; 98 L. 3143c. ———.]—Immediately before the commencement of the Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), the legal estate in land was outstanding in the personal representatives of the settlor & held upon the trusts of a marriage settlement which, in the events which had then happened, were for two daughters of the settlor in undivided shares absolutely:—Held: as the personal representatives then held the land in trust for the daughters in undivided shares vested in possession, they held it, after the Act came into force, upon the statutory trusts, by virtue of Sched. I., Part IV., sub-para. 1 (b) of the Act, with the result that the settlement trustees were not entitled, as, but for Part IV., they would be to call for a conveyance of the legal estate; but the personal representatives held the land on trust for sale & were entitled to sell the same, unless the daughters elected to call for a conveyance.—Re FORSTER, SOMERVILLE v. OLDHAM, [1929] 1 Ch. 146; 98 L. 3143d. ——— What is "settled land" within paragraph 2.]—Under a settlement contained in a will the settled property was directed to be held, after the death of the first tenant for life, in trust, as to both corpus & income, for the children & issue of the first tenant for life in equal shares as therein mentioned. The first tenant for life died in 1929, having by her will appointed to be her exors. & trustees two persons who, at the date of her death, were trustees of the settlement & of the will containing it. 3143e. ——— Effect on interest of tenant for life under condition to reside on premises.]—Testator died in 1922, having by his will made in 1915 directed (inter alia) that pltf. should pay the net income of his freehold farm & lands & of his share of minerals thereunder equally between herself & his nephew until testator's youngest or only daughter should attain the age of twenty-one & thereafter between herself for life or until marriage, the nephew for life "or so long as he shall reside upon & assist in the management of my said farm," & testator's two daughters for their lives & the survivor of them for her life. Subject thereto testator devised the farm & lands to the children of his daughters as in the will mentioned. Testator's nephew lived with him at the farm, & assisted in its management until the testator's death, after which he continued to live there & to manage it. Accordingly, upon the coming into force of the Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), the property vested in pltf. upon the statutory trusts. On a summons taken out by pltf. in 1931 & asking (inter alia) whether, upon a sale of the farm & lands under the statutory trusts, or upon the exercise by her of any power of leasing conferred on her by statute or by the will, & in particular upon the exercise of any such power in favour of testator's nephew, his interest in the income would determine:—Held: upon the true construction of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 35, the nephew's life interest would not be forfeited upon any exercise in his lifetime of the statutory trusts.—Re DAVIES' WILL TRUSTS, BEVAN v. WILLIAMS, [1932] 1 Ch. 530; 101 L. By a codicil power was conferred upon the trustees after the expiration of five years from the testator's death to sell his residuary estate or any part thereof by public auction but not by private contract. Upon a summons raising questions, whether the trustees or the persons entitled to the surplus income until cesser of the annuities were the proper persons in whom the land ought to be vested by the exor.; &, if the trustees were the proper persons, whether the annuitants were persons whose wishes ought to be given effect to by the trustees for sale:—Held: (1) the land was held in equity in undivided shares; (2) the land was devised in undivided shares within Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 34 (3), with the result that it was devised to the trustees, who were trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Act, 1925, upon the statutory trusts; (3) those trustees were the persons in whom the land ought to be vested.—Re HOUSE, WESTMINSTER BANK v. EVERETT, [1929] 2 Ch. 166; 98 L. 3260a. —— Payment by trustees—Right to reimbursement.]—The husband in a marriage settlement covenanted (inter alia) to pay the premiums on a policy of life insurance. In default of his doing so, the trustees paid the premium & sought to recover the amount so paid from the covenantor. The settlement expressly empowered the trustees to apply the income in making any payments for keeping on foot the policy, & provided that it should not be obligatory on them to enforce the husband's covenants. There was no covenant by the husband to reimburse the trustees in respect of any payment so made by them:—Held: (1) it was an implied term that the husband should reimburse the trustees; (2) the claim of the trustees was not in debt but for damages for breach of covenant, & therefore they could not specially indorse their writ; (3) the damages were substantial & not merely nominal, & the trustees were entitled to recover the full amount paid by them.—SCHLESINGER & JOSEPH v. MOSTYN, [1932] 1 K. SEWERS AND DRAINS.

Part I.—Sewers and Drains for Sanitary Purposes.

14a. —— —— ——.]—Applts. were the owners of three adjoining houses in the borough of Aldershot. Resp. corpn. claimed to recover from applts. certain sums as due to them under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 41, & Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (c. 50), s. 19, in respect of certain drainage works executed by resps. The three houses owned by applts. formed part of a row of fifteen houses, the remaining twelve belonging to other owners. The drainage in the case of each house was discharged by one pipe into a large single pipe which ran the whole length of the houses under the public highway & took the drainage from all the fifteen houses. Resps. claimed that the whole of that single pipe was a "single private drain" within sect. 19 (1) of 1890 Act:—Held: the large single pipe which carried the drainage of all the fifteen houses, being one continuous pipe, was not a "single private drain" within sect. 19 (1) of 1890 Act. Resps. had therefore not established their case.—HILL v. ALDERSHOT BOROUGH COUNCIL (1932), 96 J. P. 493, C. A.

19a. ——.]—Pltf. was the owner of a house & grounds on the X. estate, a leaseholder in 1900 & freeholder since 1920. Down to 1912 there was no drainage system for the estate, but in that year a system was established, which so far as affected this property was called "the northern system," by the then owners of the estate with an effective outfall, but without any reference to the local authority, which was maintained since 1920 by means of contributions from property owners to the owner of the part where the disposal works were situated. From these works the effluent passed into the river M., but owing to the filter bed ceasing to function, pollution of the river occurred, & this outfall being stopped by the action of the Thames Conservancy, the effluent was now carried over the adjoining land. In an action by pltf. for a declaration that the system vested in defts. & that they were liable to maintain it:—Held: the line of pipes which communicated with the disposal works was a sewer which vested in the local authority, but the remedy of pltf. was to appeal on behalf of the whole of the persons in the district to the Ministry of Health under P. H. Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 299.—CLARK v. EPSOM RURAL COUNCIL, [1929] 1 Ch. 287; 98 L. J. Ch. 88; 140 L. T. 246; 93 J. P. 67; 45 T. L. R. 106; 27 L. G. R. 328.

197a. —— Sewer laid above ground—By private owner—Maintenance by local authority.]—Defts., who were the urban sanitary authority, served notices, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), ss. 23, 36, upon the owners of a row of houses within the district requiring them within a certain time to provide water-closets in the houses & to connect the same with the main sewer. By arrangement among the owners the work was carried out by the owner of two of the houses, one of which was occupied by pltf. A six-inch earthenware pipe was laid through the gardens at the backs of the houses to receive the drainage of each house & to discharge into the main sewer. This pipe was laid underground until it came to the garden of the house in which pltf. lived, where, owing to a fall in the land half the pipe appeared above the ground. About three years after the pipe was laid pltf. in going down her garden slipped on the pipe & was injured. In an action against the urban district council to recover damages for the personal injuries so sustained, the pipe being a "sewer" which was vested in them, the jury found that the sewer was constructed so as to be dangerous to the occupants of the house, that defts. had notice of its dangerous condition, & were negligent in not obviating the danger:—Held: as deft. council would have been entitled, if they had themselves constructed the sewer, to lay it above ground, they were not guilty of any breach of duty in maintaining the sewer in the same condition as it was when laid, &

262a. Liability for maintenance.]—The Lewisham Board of Works was constituted under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), with an area extending over Penge, & all sewers in their district, except the main sewer, were vested in the Board, who were bound to repair them. Metropolis Management Act, 1862 (c. 102), empowered the Board to execute sewerage works beyond their own district where necessary, & in 1865 the Board, for the purpose of the drainage of Penge, constructed a sewer in Penge, which passed through the Beckenham district, not under the control of the Board, to the Lewisham district, where it joined the main sewer. The Act of 1862 did not vest this sewer in the Board, & did not in terms oblige the Board to repair it, but this obligation was expressly imposed on the Board by the Beckenham Sewerage Act of 1873, which empowered the Beckenham authority to connect up with the sewer in their area in return for certain money payments. This sewer having become inadequate, a second was constructed nearly alongside, & it assisted to carry off the sewage of Penge. By London Government Act, 1899 (c. 16), District Boards of Works were abolished, & the Lewisham Corporation was created, but by the Penge Order of 1900, made in pursuance of this Act, the district of Penge was taken out of the control of the corpn. & became part of the county of Kent, & a scheme of adjustments was made, whereby all property of the Lewisham Board used, & all liabilities of the Board incurred, solely or mainly for the benefit of Penge, where transferred to the Penge District Council, & the question whether any property had been used or any liability had been incurred solely or mainly for the benefit of Penge was to be finally determined by the commissioners appointed under the Act; but the scheme made no provision dealing with the question whether the obligation to maintain the Penge sewers, so far as they were laid in Beckenham, was cast upon the Lewisham Corpn. or not. In an action by the Urban District Council of Penge against the Lewisham Corpn. for a declaration that this obligation was cast upon the corpn.:—Held: (1) the jurisdiction of the ct. to determine this question was not ousted by the Penge Order; (2) both the original & the relief sewers were constructed wholly or mainly for the benefit of Penge, & that the action failed.—PENGE URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. LEWISHAM CORPN. 304a. Reconstruction of drain — What amounts to.]—The L. C. C. made a bye-law that a person who should entirely or partially reconstruct any pipe or drain communicating with a sewer should deposit plans of the proposed work, with the proviso that plans should not be required in the case of any repair which did not involve the entire reconstruction of the pipe or drain; & another bye-law as to ventilation, which was to apply to every person who should reconstruct in an existing building any pipe or drain communicating with a sewer. Premises situate in the metropolis were drained at the rear by a line of pipes which took the surface water drainage of the premises through two gullies in the yard & which communicated with a sewer. This line of pipes was not laid upon concrete & was not ventilated, & the drain having become a nuisance, notice was served on the owner to abate the same. The owner opened up the ground, took up the pipes, most of which were defective or broken, & relaid the drain in the same line upon a foundation of concrete. He put in four new lengths of pipes & a new gully & connection, replacing in the drain one old pipe & gully only, & leaving in the ground an old pipe which was not defective:—Held: the work done to the drain was a "reconstruction" of the drain, & not merely a "repair" of it, & that the bye-laws applied.—AGAR v. NOKES (1905), 93 L. No entry of the offence had been made in the official log-book, & the justices dismissed the complaint on this ground for want of jurisdiction:—Held: the making of the entry in the official log-book was not a condition precedent to the hearing of the complaint. Even where no entry of an offence had been made, & there had consequently been default under the section, the Court was not without jurisdiction to proceed. 685 b i. Indemnity under Merchant Shipping (International Labour Convention) Act, 1925—Unemployment due to wreck—What amounts to.]—A seaman was engaged under an agreement to serve as an engineer of a trawler for the period from July to Dec. 1930. On Sept. 25, 1930, the trawler sustained damage in consequence of a collision at sea, but she was able to make port under her own steam. On reaching port the crew were paid off, & the ship was laid up for repairs for a period of fourteen days; thereafter the seaman was re-engaged. He claimed wages, in terms of Merchant Shipping (International Labour Conventions) Act, 1925, s. 1 (1), for the fourteen days during which the ship was under repair, on the ground that his service had been terminated by reason of the "wreck" of the ship:—Held: the damage did not constitute a "wreck" within sect. 1 (1), in respect that the period required for repairs was not so prolonged as to render the ship unable to continue within a reasonable time the adventure contemplated in the agreement with the seaman.—BARRAS v. ABERDEEN STEAM TRAWLING & FISHING CO., [1932] S. Deft. was duly notified that pltf. held the note:—Held: deft.'s conduct was the sole cause of the impossibility of performance, & having by his own conduct made it impossible for the ship to leave B.C. he was liable on the note.—IMPERIAL VETERANS IN CANADA v. EASTERN FREIGHTERS, LTD. 1780a. Breach of duty—Broker assuming to charter vessel to himself—Ratification of wrongful act.]—Pltfs., owners of the D., instructed H., a broker, to procure a charterparty for their ship. H. being minded, in breach of his duty as a broker, to make use of the ship for his own ends, purported to effect a charterparty dated Aug. 9, 1926, between pltfs & an export co. of Danzig " & others " as charterers. This document was signed by H. " as agent only " for the owners & by H. " on behalf of the charterers as per separate chartering notes." By one of the clauses of the document the shipowners were to have a lien for all dead freight & demurrage at the port of loading. H. had no authority to act on behalf of the export co., who knew nothing about the transaction. Defts., timber merchants in London, bought from S. & Co., shippers in Danzig, red wood at a price including cost, freight & insurance from Danzig to London. S. & Co. engaged cargo space for the wood on board the D., by means of chartering notes signed by H. purporting to act " by order of the owners," but without their authority, & the wood was shipped on board the D. at Danzig under bills of lading signed by H. purporting to act for & on behalf of & with the authority of the master. Each bill of lading incorporated the terms, conditions & clauses of the so-called charterparty of Aug. 9, among which was the above lien clause. The bills of lading were indorsed by S. & Co. & tendered under the contract of sale to defts., who accepted them & paid S. & Co. for the goods. The D. left Danzig without a full cargo several days after the lay days had expired. When she arrived in London the master deposited the wood with wharfingers subject to a lien in favour of pltfs. for dead freight & demurrage, & pltfs. brought an action against defts. for a declaration that they were entitled to the lien :—Held : the lien clause in the document of Aug. 9 was incorporated in the bills of lading, on the grounds that (1) pltfs., by taking the cargo on board their ship & issuing bills of lading in respect of it after they knew of H.'s breach of duty in assuming to charter their vessel to himself, had ratified his act & so validated the charterparty, & (2) the incorporation of the lien clause was not in any way dependent or contingent upon the charterparty being a valid or effective document, for in the absence of a condition to the contrary, one document, or part thereof, might be incorporated in another, although the first document had, of itself, no legal effect whatever ; (3) defts. could not support a plea in avoidance of circuity of action, because it was essential to that plea that the amount recoverable by deft. pleading it

(2) is established when it is proved that deft. honestly endeavoured to obtain a full crew & that his failure to do so did not arise from his omission to do something which he reasonably ought to have done ; (2) firemen & trimmers form part of a ship's engine-room staff within the sub-section.—DAY v. YATES (1931), 45 C. from pltf. in the action in which it was pleaded should be the exact amount recoverable by pltf. from him; & as S. & Co. were not parties to the action, it could not be averred that the damages, if any, recoverable by defts. from S. & Co. for breach of the contract of sale would be the same in amount as the sum recoverable by pltfs. from defts. under the terms of the bills of lading, & it did not appear that S. & Co. had any cause of action against pltfs., whose liabilities depended upon the bills of lading.—AKT. 2059a. Express exception in charterparty.]—By a charterparty in the form known as the Baltic & White Sea Conference Uniform Time Charter it was agreed between the owner of a steamship & charterers that the steamship should be taken on time charter by the charterers on terms & conditions which included: "Clause 8: Captain to prosecute all voyages with utmost dispatch. . . ." "Clause 10: . . . Should steamer be driven into port, or to anchorage, by stress of weather . . . causing detention to steamer, time so lost & expenses incurred shall be for charterers' account, even if caused through fault or want of due diligence by owners' servants." "Clause 12: Owners only to be responsible . . . for delay during the currency of this charter . . . if such delay . . . has been caused by want of due diligence on the part of owners or their manager, in making steamer seaworthy & fitted for the voyage, or any other personal act, or omission, or default of owners or their manager. Owners not to be responsible in any other case, nor for damage or delay whatsoever & howsoever caused, even if caused by neglect or default by owners' servants." During a voyage under the charterparty the captain, owing to bad weather, put into three harbours or sheltering places. The charterers having alleged that the captain had failed to prosecute his voyage "with utmost dispatch" within clause 8 of the charterparty & having claimed an allowance of hire in respect of the delay, recourse was had to arbn. The umpire found that there was nothing to justify the captain in putting into the harbours or sheltering places which he entered, that he had not prosecuted the voyage "with utmost dispatch" & that delay had been caused thereby, but that the delay had not been caused by any "personal act, or omission, or default" of the owner or his manager within clause 12. The award having been stated in the form of a special case:—Held: the owner was protected from liability for the delay by the provisions of clause 12 of the charterparty which, while not qualifying the duty to prosecute all voyages with utmost dispatch, placed on the captain by clause 8, afforded the owner a defence in such an action as the present.—ISTROS, S.S. 2104a. —— Damage sustained before making of charterparty.]—A time charterparty contained the following cesser clause: "In the event of loss of time from deficiency of men or stores, breakdown of machinery, whether partial or otherwise, collision, stranding, fire in ship & (or) cargo, damage or interference by authorities preventing the working of the vessel for more than twelve running hours, the payment of hire shall cease until she be again in an efficient state to resume her service at the place where the accident occurred. . . ." After the steamer came on hire she went into dry dock for four days to repair damage which she had sustained in collision before coming on hire. The owners allowed the charterers four days' hire, & claimed to recover the amount so allowed from the defts. in the collision action:—Held: the above cesser clause applied to damage arising before as well as after the making of the charterparty; the charterers were entitled to deduct four days' hire; & the owners were entitled to recover the amount so deducted from the defts. as damages for loss of use of their steamer.—THE ESSEX ENVOY (1929), 141 L. At the end of the 60 days deft. informed pltf. personally at V. that deft. would not require the boat any longer, & undertook to notify his cannery manager to that effect, but the notification did not reach the latter before the boat had left for another of deft.'s canneries, & on arrival there the manager told the captain, & also the engineer who was representing pltf., that he would not release the boat & that they should fish at a certain place. 2230a. ——.]—Defts. bought timber to be shipped to Liverpool, & it was shipped in pltf.'s steamer along with the cargo of other shippers. The bill of lading was a clean bill, stating that a specified quantity had been shipped in good condition, & incorporating the terms of the charterparty, which provided that the statements in the bill of lading as to the goods having been shipped in good condition, & as to the aggregate number of pieces delivered to the steamer, should be conclusive evidence against the shipowner. At the time of signing the bill of lading the master signed a protest stating that part of defts.' goods was in bad condition. Defts. were indorsees of the bill of lading, & after the arrival of the steamer pltf. informed them that part of the cargo had been damaged before shipment. There being nothing to indicate to defts. that the damaged part belonged to them, defts. accepted the bill of lading, when presented, & they paid for the timber. On delivery they found that the timber was defective, & that the quantity was less than the specified quantity. The shipowner sued defts. for balance of freight, & defts. counterclaimed for damages for delivering part of the goods in a damaged condition, & for failing to deliver part of the goods shipped :—Held : as the information of defts. was not of such a nature as to justify them in rejecting the bill of lading, pltf. was estopped from disputing the statements in it, & defts. were entitled to succeed on their counterclaim.—EVANS v. JAMES WEBSTER & BROTHERS, LTD. c 1. —— Refusal to pay demand draft.]—Pltf. co., made a written contract of sale & purchase with P. for the supply of certain oils. The contract contained (inter alia) the following "terms" : "Net cash by demand draft on arrival of vessel or vessels carrying the goods. . . . Seller's liability shall cease upon presentation of bill of lading, or, at their option, by presentation of an order for delivery alone . . . shipment of the goods to constitute delivery." P. on giving the order, gave to pltf. co. a cheque for £50, such sum to be deducted from the purchase-price when draft was presented for payment. The bill of lading, which was made to order & not to P., was tendered, with a demand draft attached, to P. & refused. The oils, upon arrival, were seized by defts. under several distress warrants on unsatisfied judgments obtained against P. On an originating summons to determine in whom was the property in the oil :—Held : upon a consideration of the contract & all the surrounding circumstances, the intention of the parties was that the property in the goods should not pass until payment of the demand draft, & the property in the goods never passed from pltf. co.—SOCONY PROPRIETARY, LTD. v. BEGG [1931] N. 2974b. ——.]—(1) The operation of loading a ship involves all that is required, i.e., stowing &, semble, where necessary, lashing, to put the cargo in a condition in which it can be carried.

By a charterparty a ship was to proceed to specified ports as ordered by the charterers, there load a cargo of pit props, & deliver it to an English port. By the charterparty the vessel was to be " provided with a deck load, at full freight, at charterers' risk, not exceeding what she can reasonably stow & carry." By an exception clause accidents of navigation, or latent defects in, or accidents to, hull &/or machinery were (inter alia) excepted " even when occasioned by the negligence, default, or error in judgment of the . . . master, mariners, or other persons employed by the shipowner, or for whose acts he is responsible. . . ." The ship loaded part of her cargo at one port & then proceeded to B. to ship the remainder. When the last sling load of deck cargo had been placed on deck, but before it had been stowed, the ship took a list, first to starboard & then to port, the bulwarks carried away, & a large quantity of cargo shot overboard & was lost. The judge held on the evidence that at the time of the loss the ship was unseaworthy owing to the deck load being excessive & that the captain was negligent in loading the ship as he did. In an action by the charterers against the shipowners for the value of the cargo lost :—Held : (2) as, at the beginning of the loading, the ship was seaworthy to receive & hold the cargo, & as, at the time of the loss, the operation of loading had not been completed, all the cargo not having been stowed, there was no breach of the warranty of seaworthiness & pltfs. were not entitled to recover ; (3) although the words in the

" deemed insufficiently packed," & the owner proves that the goods were delivered in a damaged condition, if the carrier claims the benefit of the immunity specified in r. 2 (n) of Art. IV. of the Sched., the onus lies on him of affirmatively establishing (a) the goods were insufficiently packed, & (b) that the insufficient packing was the cause of the damage to the goods.—Parke, Lacey, Hardie, Ltd. v. Clan MacFadyen, The Ship (1930), 30 S. charterparty, " at charterers' risk," standing alone, did not excuse defts. in the case of a loss due to negligence on their part or on the part of their servants, those words must be read with the exception clause, & the effect of reading the two together was to enable defts. to rely on the exception clause, which protected them against the consequences of such negligence.—SVENSSONS (C. 3059a. —— ——.]—Resp. defts., in Oct. 1919, shipped 412 tons of West African produce on the applt. pltfs.' schooner, the R., for carriage from C. on the west coast of Africa to Liverpool. A clause in the bill of lading provided that freight was due on shipment & should be payable on demand, ship or goods lost or not lost. Defts. paid half the freight on shipment. The vessel & cargo were lost during the voyage, & as the goods never reached Liverpool, defts. refused to pay pltfs. the balance of freight, & pltfs. now claimed the balance of freight. Defts. pleaded that the vessel was in fact unseaworthy, & that therefore the bill of lading contract could not be enforced against them. By clause 2 of the bill of lading: " The co. shall not be liable for, or for any loss or damage arising from or due to, collision, . . . or any other peril of the sea . . . of whatsoever nature or kind, whether any perils, causes, or things in this clause mentioned are due to or arise . . . from the wrongful act, omission, or error in judgment or negligence of . . . any person whomsoever in the service of the co. . . . & whether due to or arising . . . from unseaworthiness of the ship . . . provided in case of any loss, injury, or damage arising from or due to unseaworthiness of the ship at the beginning of the voyage all reasonable means shall have been taken to provide against such unseaworthiness. The co. may entrust to experienced or qualified officers, servants, or agents the duty of providing against unseaworthiness, & shall then be deemed to have fulfilled its obligations hereunder . . ." :—Held: defts. had failed to discharge the onus which lay on them of proving that the vessel was unseaworthy at the beginning of the voyage. Moreover, even if the vessel had in fact been unseaworthy pltfs. were protected by clause 2 of the bill of lading, as (a) they had taken all reasonable means to provide against unseaworthiness, & (b) they had entrusted to experienced & qualified officers, servants, or agents, the duty of providing against unseaworthiness, & must therefore be deemed to have fulfilled their obligations under the bill of lading.—COSMOPOLITAN SHIPPING CO. e i. —— Whether contract within Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1924.]—A firm of shipowners contracted to carry a cargo of machinery belonging to a firm of shipbuilders from the latter's premises in Glasgow to their shipyards at Belfast. The contract was arranged by correspondence, in the course of which the shipowners stipulated that the cargo was to be conveyed at owner's risk & subject to the conditions in their sailing-bills. These included a condition that, in contracts were there was no bill of lading, the shipowners would not be liable for loss resulting from unseaworthiness of the ship. The vessel carrying the machinery was lost on the voyage, along with the cargo. No bill of lading had been issued, but, after the loss of the cargo, the shipowners gave the shipbuilers a letter acknowledging receipt of the cargo & specifying it in detail. In an action at the instance of the shipbuilders against the shipowners for recovery of the value of the cargo based on the alleged unseaworthiness of the vessel, the pursuers contended that the contract between the parties was regulated by the Act of 1924, & that the defenders had failed to comply with the provisions of the Act for contracting out of their statutory liability:—Held: that the contract between the parties was not a " contract of carriage " within the meaning of the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1924, in respect (a) that the only receipt granted for the cargo, viz. the letter of acknowledgment given by the defenders to the pursuers, did not constitute either a " bill of lading " or " similar documents of title " within Art. 1 (b) of the Schedule to the Act, & (f) that, the issue of a bill of lading not being within the contemplation of the parties to the contract, the contract could not reasonably be described as " covered " by a bill of lading within the meaning of Art. 1 (b); &, accordingly, that defenders were entitled to contract out of liability for loss resulting from their vessel's unseaworthiness without reference to the Act; & action dismissed.—HARLAND & WOLFF, LTD. v. BURNS & LAIRD LINES, LTD., [illegible] S. Defts.' barge, having taken the machinery on board, proceeded to another steamer & took in additional cargo. While alongside this other steamer the barge was holed by an unknown vessel, & owing to the entrance of water pltfs.' machinery was injured by rust. In an action for breach of the warranty of seaworthiness defts. denied liability on the grounds that the barge was seaworthy when pltfs.' machinery was loaded, & that since, so far as pltfs. were concerned, the loading of additional cargo was part of the voyage, defts. were protected by the owner's risk clause :—Held : the loading was not completed until the additional cargo had been taken on board, &, therefore, as the barge was unseaworthy at the time when she started on her voyage, pltfs. were entitled to recover.—THOMPSON & NORRIS MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. v. ARDLEY, P. 3099a. —— ——.]—A steamship was chartered to proceed to various ports in the River Plate & there load a cargo of grain for carriage to Hamburg. The shipowners had provided bunker coal more than enough to take the ship to the loading ports. Some of this coal was stowed in a reserve bunker on the port side separated from one of the ship's holds only by an unprotected steel bulkhead. The coal was unfit for the voyage. In this respect the vessel was unseaworthy. Shortly after she started on the return voyage a serious fire broke out in the port reserve bunker. The captain put into a port of refuge & incurred expense for the benefit of ship & cargo. In an action by the shipowners against cargo owners for contribution towards a general average expenditure defts. counterclaimed for damages for injury to their cargo owing to the fire. The fire having happened without the actual fault or privity of pltfs. :—Held : (1) by virtue of Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 502, which relieved pltfs. from liability for loss of or damage to the cargo, they were entitled to general average contribution; (2) notwithstanding the unseaworthiness of the ship, pltfs. were not liable for loss of or injury to the cargo.—LOUIS DREYFUS & CO. v. TEMPUS SHIPPING CO., [1931] A. 3162a. —— Within Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1924 (c. 22), Sched., Art. IV., r. 4.]—A cargo of coal was loaded on defts.' steamship, the I., at Swansea, for carriage to Constantinople under bills of lading, which gave the shipowners " liberty . . . to call at any ports in any order, for bunkering or other purposes, . . . all as part of the contract voyage." The shipowners were exempted by the bills of lading from liability for loss due to perils of the seas. The I. was fitted, in the interests of the shipowners, with a superheater, & when she started from Swansea she had on board two engineers, who were there to observe whether the superheater was working efficiently. It was intended that these two engineers should be landed with the pilot at Lundy, but when the vessel reached that island no satisfactory trial of the superheater having been obtained, the two engineers remained on board, & were, later, landed in St. Ives Bay. In proceeding there, & for some time after leaving there, the I. was off the usual route. Shortly after resuming her voyage from St. Ives Bay & before she had returned to the usual route the I. stranded on the Cornish coast, & both ship & cargo were lost. In an action in respect of the loss of the cargo :—Held : (1) the departure of the I. from the contract route did not come within the liberty given by the bills of lading " to call at any ports in any order, for bunkering or other purposes," as the words " or other purposes " must be construed ejusdem generis with the word " bunkering," & as meaning the calling at a port for some purpose having relation to the contract voyage ; (2) the deviation was not a " reasonable deviation " within Art. IV., r. 4, of Sched. to Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1924 (c. 22).

In considering whether a deviation is " reasonable " within Art. IV., r. 4, the interests to be considered are those of the parties to the contract adventure, & this may include consideration of the position of the underwriters (per SCRUTTON, L.J.).

The words " reasonable deviation " mean a deviation whether in the interests of the shipowner, or the cargo owner or both, to which no reasonably minded cargo owner would raise any objection (per GREER, L.J.).

The reasonableness of a deviation must depend upon what would be contemplated reasonably by both parties to the contract adventure, having regard to the exigencies of the route, known or assumed to be known to both parties (per SLESSER, L.J.).

(3) As the Act of 1924 has not altered the former rule whereby any unauthorised deviation from the contract route has the effect of displacing the exemptions in favour of the shipowners contained in the contract of carriage, the exemption from liability in respect of loss due to perils of the seas did not protect the shipowners ; (4) the shipowners were liable in damages, the measure of which was the value of the coal at Constantinople if it had been delivered there in due course.—FOSCOLO, MANGO & CO., LTD. v. STAG LINE, LTD., [1931] 2 K. On the arrival of the ship at Dundee no bill of lading was presented to the ship's agents, who, accordingly, warehoused the goods to await the arrival of the bill. Thereafter, as the result of negotiations between the agents & a third party, the agents, after obtaining from him a letter of guarantee & indemnity which was in favour of themselves only, delivered the cargo to him without insisting on the production of the bill of lading. On Sept. 18, 1918, the third party sold the goods to the War Office & retained the price, & afterwards became bkpt. 3649a. —— —— No other goods to be discharged.]—Certain cotton goods were carried from L. to B., where they were discharged into a lighter. Certain other iron goods, packed in a wooden case, were being lowered into the same lighter when the case broke & the iron goods fell out into the lighter & holed it. Sea-water entered & damaged the cotton goods. Under the contract of carriage lighterage was to be at the risk of the owners, & the provisions of the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1924 (c. 22), were also incorporated. The owners of the cotton goods claimed damages from the owners of the ship :—Held : (1) if the sea transit had ended when the goods were placed in the lighter, defts. were protected by the terms of the bill of lading. The sea transit, however, had not ended : the discharge into the lighter was part of the operation of discharge from the ship & was not complete as long as there were other goods to be discharged into the lighter ; (2) the exception relating to loss due to insufficiency of packing in Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1924 (c. 22), Art. IV. (2) (n), was wide enough to cover the case of the packing of other goods, though primarily it would apply to the goods themselves that were lost or damaged ; (3) on the evidence defts. had shown no negligence on the part of themselves or their servants & were therefore exempt from liability under Art. 3666 iii. ——.]—A charter-party which provided for loading at a daily rate contained a clause that the steamer should employ stevedores appointed by the charterers, but the cargo was to be stowed under the captain's supervision. Time for loading was to be reckoned from twenty-four hours after the master had given written notice that the steamer was ready to load. The master, on arriving at the port of loading, gave notice of readiness. There was only one firm of stevedores at the port, which had been nominated by the charterers, but owing to shortage of labour caused by congestion of shipping the ship could not commence to load until some days after notice had been given. There was available during this time sufficient casual labour to put the cargo, which was ready in trucks, into the ship's slings. Loading at the port was a joint operation :—Held : the charterers were liable for demurrage.—Re LOUIS DREYFUS & CO. & SIR WILLIAM REARDON SMITH & SONS, LTD., [1928] S. A. S. R. 117.—AUS

se. Defences—Practice as to delivery at port of destination.]—Pltf. consigned a package of goods by deft.'s ship from Melbourne to Sydney under the terms of a bill of lading which provided that all liability of deft. should cease "as soon as the goods are free from the ship's tackles," & by another clause, indorsed thereon, that "should the owner fail to take delivery of the goods in accordance with the terms of this contract, such goods may be without notice transhipped into lighters or other craft, landed, warehoused, stored, or in any other way provided for, at the owner's sole risk & expense." Evidence was given that the invariable practice on the part of deft. in discharging cargo of the kind in question was that instead of the consignee taking delivery at the ship's slings the goods were taken by deft.'s servants & tallied into a store, & were subsequently tallied out by deft.'s servants to the consignees ; that a small charge was made by deft. for stacking the goods ; that the package in question was tallied into the store but could not subsequently be found. 3887a. ——.]—(1) A steamer belonging to pltfs. was chartered by defts. to take a grain cargo from Australia to Callao. The charterparty provided (inter alia) that discharge at Callao should be made at an average rate of 450 tons per weather working day, & that if the steamer should be longer detained demurrage should be payable at a rate calculated on her tonnage, which worked out to £65 per day. The steamer arrived at Callao in due course. At that port discharge could only be effected by the employment of stevedors who were members of a trade union which would not allow each man to do more than a limited amount of work per day & would not allow more than 80 tons per day to be discharged from any one hold. As the steamer had only four holds this rule of the union made it impossible to discharge more than 320 tons per day, although the charterparty required a rate of 450 tons. After discharge had proceeded very slowly for some days the captain made an arrangement with the stevedores that in consideration of an increased wage they would do more work, & by spending £123 in this way he saved the steamer two days' demurrage, which would have amounted to £130. In this action pltfs. claimed demurrage which had been actually incurred & also the £123 by which two days' demurrage had been avoided :—Held : the charterparty being one for discharge in a fixed time amounted to a guarantee by defts. that discharge would be completed within that time unless it was delayed by some fault of the shipowner, & as the idleness of the stevedores was not due to any fault of pltfs. demurrage was payable for the time occupied in discharge beyond the time allowed by the charterparty. Pltfs. must also recover the £123, the expenditure of which by the captain had saved demurrage amounting to £130, for which the defts. would have been liable.

(2) The charterparty incorporated the Australian Sea Carriage of Goods Act, 1924, which contains a provision identical with that of r. 3, Art. IV. of the English Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1924 (c. 22), as follows : " The shipper shall not be responsible for loss or damage sustained by the carrier or the ship arising or resulting from any cause without the act, fault, or neglect of the shipper, his agents or his servants." Defts. contended that as the idleness of the stevedores was not due to any act, fault, or neglect on their part they were protected by this rule : —Held : the rule did not abolish the old-established principle of law rendering the charterer liable for demurrage. — LEEDS SHIPPING CO., LTD. v. DUNCAN FOX & CO., LTD. 3920a. —— " Per working hatch."]—A charterparty on a modified Form A of the Chamber of Shipping Welsh Coal Charter, 1896, provided that a coal cargo was to be taken from alongside by consignees at the port of discharge at " the average rate of 125 tons per working hatch per day." A marginal note or memorandum stated that consignees were not obliged to take cargo at a higher rate than 500 tons per day. Despatch money was to be payable at the rate of £15 per day. The cargo, which consisted of about 4,600 tons of coal, was loaded in unequal portions in four holds. In a dispute between the shipowners & charterers as to the method of calculating the lay days & the consequential payment or non-payment of despatch money :—Held : the term in the charterparty " working hatch " denoted a hatch which could be worked because there was cargo in the hold underneath it waiting to be discharged ; the charterparty provided for discharge at the average rate of 125 tons per each working hatch per available day & not 500 tons per day for the whole ship ; when in the ordinary course one hold became empty the rate of discharge from the remaining holds remained at 125 tons & was not proportionately increased ; & the lay days were in the circumstances easily ascertainable by simply dividing by 125 the number of tons of coal in the hatch which contained the largest quantity of cargo.—THE SANDGATE, [1930] P. 30 ; 99 L. 3996a. —— No time lost on balance.]—A steamer was chartered to bring a cargo from the Danube & was to go to Sulina for orders. The charterers were to pay demurrage for detention for more than six hours in waiting for orders, and for time saved in loading they were to have £15 a day despatch money. Clause 9 of the charterparty provided that " if the steamer be longer detained than the time stipulated above demurrage shall be paid . . . at the rate of £30 per running day." The charterers were nearly five days late in giving orders as to the port of loading, but they saved 7¾ days in loading :—Held : clause 9 covered all references to time in the preceding clauses, &, as the steamer had spent a shorter time on her visit to the Danube than she might have taken under the charterparty, nothing was payable by the charterers to the shipowners either as demurrage or as damages for detention.—SOCIETA LIGURE DI ARMAMENTI v. JOINT DANUBE & BLACK SEA SHIPPING AGENCIES OF BRAILA (1931), 47 T. 4026a. —— Insistence on special mode of discharge by consignee.]—Under several bills of lading, which incorporated all the terms of two charterparties in identical terms, pltfs. contracted to carry on board their vessel certain timber consigned to the respective defts. from a Norwegian port to the port of Garston. Under the charterparties the vessel was to " proceed to Garston or so near thereto as she may safely get " ; &, by clause 13, the cargo was to be discharged in the customary manner " on to the quay &/or into lighters &/or craft &/or wagons &/or on to bogies & thereon stowed &/or stacked as customary at the port of discharge, the consignees having the right to select any one or more of these alternatives if customary & available at the time of discharge." Owing to congestion at Garston dock the L. M. & S. Ry. Co., the owners of the dock, informed pltfs.' agents that the co. were unable to accept any vessels for which storage accommodation was required for any material portion of their cargo, but that they could accept vessels where the whole cargo could be discharged into main line railway wagons & sent direct from ship to destination. When the ship arrived off Garston dock defts. refused to agree to this method of discharge & alleged that the customary method of discharge for cargo destined for Garston itself was into " domestic " wagons which took the timber to the storage ground for sorting &/or storing. Ultimately, to put an end to the deadlock, the railway co. arranged to take the timber to another storage ground at Widnes, ten miles away. Pltfs. claimed demurrage or alternatively damages for the detention of their vessel. The judge of the Liverpool Ct. of Passage found for defts. on the ground that defts.' insistence that the timber should be sorted & stored was not a breach of their contract. Pltfs. appealed :—Held : defts. had no right to claim that they were entitled to store the timber on the railway co.'s ground at Garston ; it appeared that the respective consignments of timber could be, & in fact were, delivered without sorting ; &, as main line wagons were available, defts. were liable in damages for their breach of contract in preventing the ship arriving in her discharging berth on the date when but for their insistence on having their timber stored the railway co. would have admitted the ship into dock.—THE VARING, [1931] P. 79 ; 100 L. The ship was chartered to go to Bordeaux to load for Cardiff, the charterparty also providing that average, if any, should be settled according to those rules. During loading at Bordeaux the foremast broke, & damage was done to the ship. For the purpose of repair she was moved to another dock within the port, & the shipowners incurred expenses as follows: wages & provisions of crew, cost of handling & discharging cargo for the purpose of repairs, cost of coal consumed in going in & out & keeping steam up, expense of towing in & out & mooring & port expenses, & cost of coal consumed in shifting the vessel. While staying at Bordeaux the ship was in no danger. On completion of repairs & loading she left for Cardiff, & while she was at sea she fouled some wreckage without any negligence of those on board her, & though there was no immediate danger she was made unfit to encounter the ordinary perils of the sea, & the master put into Cherbourg, as a port of refuge, & had repairs effected. The expenses at Cherbourg were similar to those at Bordeaux:—Held: (1) the cost of repairs in each case was recoverable as particular average; (2) the other expenses at Bordeaux could not be claimed as general average, since no danger was in operation there; (3) the other expenses at Cherbourg could be claimed as general average since, though there was no immediate danger, the vessel was not fit, without repair, to encounter the perils of the sea.—VLASSOPOULOS v. BRITISH & FOREIGN MARINE INSURANCE CO., LTD., [1929] 1 K. 4313a. -.]—A steamship belonging to pltfs. was chartered to carry a cargo of grain from various ports in the River Plate & to deliver the same at Antwerp or Rotterdam. The charterparty provided that average, if any, was to be payable according to York-Antwerp Rules, 1924. It also contained an exceptions clause which provided that the steamer should not be liable for loss or damage occasioned "by fire from any cause or wheresoever occurring . . . or any latent defects in hull, machinery or appurtenances . . . arising in the navigation of the steamer, even when occasioned by the negligence, default or error of judgment of the . . . master, mariners or other servants of the shipowners . . . (not resulting, however, in any case from want of due diligence by the owners of the steamer, or by the ship's husband or manager)." The steamer bunkered at Rotterdam, where she took on board enough bunker coal to take her to the Plate & bring her back to Europe. She carried a cargo of coal from Cardiff to a port in the Plate & was kept waiting a fortnight before she could get into her berth to discharge that cargo. Shortly after she had arrived at her first loading port in the Plate & had commenced to load a cargo of maize a fire broke out by spontaneous combustion in her bunker coal, which had been on the ship for two & a half months since June 30, & had been carried through the tropics, & a portion of the bunker coal was shifted on to the deck. The ship then proceeded to another port in the Plate to complete loading her cargo of maize. On the way another fire was discovered in the bunker coal, which was extinguished after a fortnight & after discharging all the bunker coal on to the deck & subsequently replacing it in the bunkers. The owners of the steamer claimed to recover from defts., who were the indorsees of the bills of lading in respect of the cargo of maize, a contribution in general average for the expense so incurred:—Held: (1) the unexplained occurrence of the fires afforded a reasonable presumption that they were due to a defect or unfitness of the bunker coal at the time of the loading of the cargo which amounted to a breach of warranty, & as the ship was unseaworthy pltfs. could not recover a general average contribution from the cargo owners for sacrifice due to their own fault & breach of contract; (2) neither the exception in the charterparty of latent defects nor Rule D of the York-Antwerp Rules, 1924, which provided that a claim in general average was not to be barred because it arose by the default of the carrier, enabled pltfs. to maintain their claim for a contribution in general average.—FIUMANA SOCIETÀ DI NAVIGAZIONE v. BUNGE & CO., LTD., [1930] 2 K. 5146 i. Liability for

The owners of the P. contracted with a towing co. to have the P. towed from her berth to a grain elevator to unload her cargo. The P. had no motive power. Owing to the breaking of the tow line at one stage of the movement the P. continued her forward movement past the elevator & reached the south end of the harbour where the S. was laid up, puncturing the latter under the water line, by an anchor left hanging down on the port bow of the P. partly under water. This anchor was left so hanging down by those on the tow notwithstanding a warning by the tug master :—Held : (1) when commencing the towing of a ship her anchor is left, by the joint negligence of the tug master & those in charge of the ship, in such a position as to constitute a danger to other vessels, & does in fact cause such damage, the tow & tug are each responsible & liable for the damages so caused ; (2) when a vessel at anchor or moored at a dock is run into by another, the onus is upon the moving vessel to justify or excuse her action ; (3) towage is a joint undertaking, & although the motive power may be wholly that of the tug, yet both tug & tow are bound to take reasonable care & to use reasonable skill in performing the operation. This duty is not affected by the terms of the towage contract, which cannot regulate the relations between the tug & tow & third parties ; (4) persons on board the tow such as a shipkeeper & his helpers, though not a regular navigating crew, in regard to reasonable care & skill, may be treated as agents of the owners of the ship in performing or neglecting to perform such duties as the towage contract or the exigencies of the operation casts upon them ; (5) provision in a towage contract that the operation is at " owner's risk " will not absolve the tug in case of negligence in navigation so far as third parties are concerned.—CANADA S.S. 5608a. —— —— Other vessel moored.]—A dumb hopper made fast by forward moorings to a moored vessel, & swinging with the tide, is herself a moored vessel, & not a vessel under way within the Port of London River bye-laws. The M., a dumb hopper loaded with spoil, had been moored alongside a dredger in Blackwall Reach, River Thames. Her after moorings were cast off, & she commenced to swing with the tide, being still made fast forward by her forward moorings. She was exhibiting one white riding light forward & one white riding light aft. In these circumstances the D., a steamship bound up-river, came into collision with the M. :—Held : (1) the M. was not a vessel under way ; (2) in any case the M. was probably a " lighter " within the meaning of the Port of London River bye-laws 1914–26, & was not required to carry side lights when under way, & no lights were laid down by the bye-laws for her to carry ; (3) the M., being moored to the dredger, which was moored to buoys, was herself moored & bound to exhibit two white riding lights in accordance with bye-law 14 ; (4) the D. was alone to blame for the collision.—THE DAGMAR (1929), 141 L. 5608b. —— Dumb barge.]—Pltfs.' steamship S. was lying moored at a tier on the south side of the River Thames. Defts.' dumb barge P. was lying inside of the S. & attached to her by ropes fore & aft. When the work of receiving cargo from the S. ceased for the day the P. was left alongside the S. unlighted & unattended. The S. was exhibiting the usual anchor light. During the night some unknown craft came into collision with the P. & she filled & sank, &, as the tide ebbed, the S. rested on the submerged hull of the P. & both vessels were damaged. Under bye-law 14 of the Port of London River Bye-laws, a vessel under 150 feet in length " when at anchor or moored " by night must exhibit a riding light ; but by proviso (a) to the bye-law : " Where masted vessels are lying made fast at the moorings in the tiers, only the outermost off shore of such vessels in each tier shall be required to exhibit the riding light " ; & by proviso (c), " . . . Lighters made fast at wharves, piers or jetties or alongside vessels thereat, shall not be required to exhibit the riding light " :—Held : (1) it was not negligent to leave the P. unattended ; but (2) not being a masted vessel nor made fast to a vessel at a wharf, pier or jetty, the P. could not bring herself within either proviso (a) or (c) ; accordingly there was nothing to take her out of the obligation imposed upon her under the main part of the bye-law to exhibit a riding light ; (3) as defts. could not prove that the absence of the light was not a cause of the collision with the unknown craft, they failed to discharge the onus upon them, & there must be judgment for pltfs.—THE PRINCESS, [1929] P. 287 ; 98 L. Immediately afterwards the steamship ported her helm, &, in attempting to cross the bows of the barque, was struck on the port side by the bowsprit & stem of the barque & sank with all hands except one :—Held : the exhibition of the green flare by the barque was not a breach of Article 12 ; the green flare was intended simply to attract attention, & did not call upon the steamship to do anything 5648a. Vessel under way—Meaning of "under way."]—Under bye-law 28 (e) of the Port of London River Bye-laws, 1914–1926, in fog, "a steam vessel under way about to turn & whilst turning round shall sound at intervals of not more than two minutes four short blasts in rapid succession, followed, if turning with her head to . . . port, by two short blasts." Bye-law 5 provides that "in these bye-laws . . . unless there be something in the subject or context repugnant to such construction . . . the expression 'under way' when used in relation to a vessel means when she is not at anchor . . . & includes a vessel dropping up or down the river with her anchor on the ground." In order to come to anchor on account of fog pltfs.' vessel Pakeha, bound up-river on the flood tide, sounded the appropriate signal under bye-law 28 (e), hard-a-starboarded her helm, & put her engines full speed astern. When she had swung two or three points the anchor was let go with thirty fathoms of chain & was reported to be holding. Her navigation lights were then switched off, the anchor lights switched on & the bell commenced to be rung for fog. The engines had then to be worked half ahead & full speed ahead for about a minute & a half to avoid a small vessel at anchor, & were then put full speed astern for about a minute & then stopped. About ten minutes after the anchor had been let go, & when the Pakeha had nearly swung head to tide, she was run into by defts.' steamship. Defts. alleged (inter alia) that the Pakeha was a vessel under way & turning in the river, & required, therefore, to continue sounding the signal of four short blasts followed by two:—Held: following the criterion laid down in The Esk, The Gitana, No. 5521, as the Pakeha was holden by & under the control" of her anchor during all the time in question, she was not "under way," & was right in ringing her bell, the appropriate signal for a vessel at anchor in a fog.—THE PALEMBANG, [1929] P. 246; 98 L. The fact of the aircraft being in the air with only a limited supply of petrol was not a circumstance which justified the aircraft carrier for failure to comply with the regulations.—H.M.S. 5748b. —— Unless clear that safe to continue course.]—Under Article 16, a steam vessel hearing the fog signals of a vessel, apparently forward of the beam, is required to stop her engines & then navigate with caution.

The B., a large liner going down Channel in a dense fog at a speed of about 4 knots, heard, on the starboard side about abeam or a little abaft it, the fog whistle of the steamship B. G. After the whistle had been heard four or five times more, getting louder & nearer & apparently still on the same bearing, the master of the B. decided that he must act. He accordingly starboarded & increased his engine power to assist the helm. The B. G. then came into sight 100 to 150 yards away on the starboard side, crossing the bows of the B. from starboard to port, & the two vessels came into collision:—Held: (1) the main cause of the collision was the bad navigation of the B. G. (inter alia) in altering her course in fog, proceeding at excessive speed, & failing to stop on hearing the whistle of the B. forward of her beam.

The conclusion on the authorities is that in fog, unless the vessel hearing a whistle is quite clear that to continue course & speed will not involve risk of collision, she should always stop her engines (per CUR.).

(2) The B. was also partly to blame, inasmuch as the fact that the fog signals of the B. G. were getting louder & nearer on the same bearing was a clear indication of danger, & that accordingly good seamanship required the B. to stop after hearing the second or third blast, when those on board would know for certain that the other ship

Not more than one minute before the collision, defts.' vessel sounded a short blast & hard a-ported, & afterwards before the collision stopped & reversed; pltfs.' vessel blew a short blast in reply, but by some mistake starboarded instead of porting, though, if she had ported, there would have been no collision:—Held: defts.' vessel was bound under Art. 21 of the Sea Regulations, 1897, to keep her course & speed until the other vessel could not by her own action alone avoid the collision.—THE ORNEN (1900), 79 L. M.* did not alter, the O., when the vessels were under three-quarters of a mile apart, hard-a-starboarded to pass under the stern of the K. M. & sounded two short blasts. Twenty or thirty seconds afterwards the K. M. hard-a-ported & sounded one short blast, & the two vessels came into collision less than three minutes after the alteration of course by the O. It being admitted that the K. M. was partly to blame for the collision, the question was whether the O. was also to blame:—Held: the master of the O. was justified in acting when he did, but not in starboarding & maintaining his speed. He ought, first of all, to have stopped & reversed his engines &, in addition, whatever action he took should have been under a port helm:—Held: both vessels were to blame.—KITANO MARU S.S. 5757 i. When duty arises—Vessel approaching.]—The question whether vessels approaching one another in a fog should not merely stop their engines but also their way, or reverse their engines, must be decided under the circumstances of each case. In the present case it was held that the H., which did not reverse her engines immediately after hearing the second whistle of the A., did not "navigate with caution," within the meaning of art. 16 of the Collision Regulations, after, at least, she heard that whistle & thereupon should have realised that as it showed no indication of broadening the danger was imminently increasing.—OLSEN & CO. 6050a. Navigable channel divided into two fairways.]—THE ZILLAH, No. 6064a, post.

6064a. -.]—A collision occurred between pltfs.' & defts.' steamships in a part of Queenstown Harbour known as the inner man-of-war anchorage, where the navigable fairway is bisected by a line of Admiralty battleships' mooring buoys, thus forming a northern & a southern channel. The two vessels were navigating, pltfs.' steamship up & defts.' steamship down, the northern channel, & the collision was found by the ct. to have taken place on the south side of the said channel. By virtue of their powers under Dockyard Ports Regulation Act, 1865 (c. 125), the Lords Comrs. of the Admiralty exercise authority over Queenstown Harbour as a dockyard port, but by Order in Council of Aug. 10, 1903, it was provided that a fairway would be kept through the inner man-of-war anchorage, & in 1909 the Cork Harbour Comrs., "in pursuance of the powers vested in them by the Cork Harbour Acts, 1820–1903," issued with the approval of the Board of Trade & the consent of the Admiralty, required by sect. 60 of the Cork Harbour Act, 1903, bye-laws for the regulation of navigation in Queenstown Harbour. By bye-law 41 : "Any regulations for preventing collisions at sea for the time being in force, under the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Acts, shall be deemed to apply to the port, & shall be construed as if the following bye-laws, Nos. 42 to 52 (inclusive), were added thereto, & the entire fairway shall be deemed to be a narrow channel." By bye-law 53 : "The foregoing bye-laws, where they refer to any part of the man-of-war anchorages or any other part of the dockyard port, shall apply to any merchant ships that may be temporarily using such parts of the port." The interpretation clause prefixed to the said bye-laws defined "fairway" as "the space within the port for the time being reserved as a highway for vessels in motion." In 1916 the Harbour Comrs. issued a "Description of Fairway," para. 6 of which was as follows : "From the eastern limit of the inner man-of-war anchorage to the White Point Buoy there are two fairways—the northern fairway & the southern fairway. The northern fairway is bounded on the north by an imaginary line from 20 fathoms south of Copper Point Buoy to the western end of Queenstown Deep-water Quay, & thence towards White Point House until Rushbrooke Church bears N.W. by W.½W., & thence to White Point Buoy showing a fixed white light, & on the south by the line of Admlty. battleships' mooring buoys. The southern fairway is bounded on the north by the line of Admlty. battleships' mooring buoys, & on the south by the line of Admlty. torpedo-boat & other mooring buoys along the north of Spit Bank & Haulbowline" :—Held : subject to the general overriding jurisdiction of the Lords Comrs. of the Admiralty, the Harbour Comrs. have power to reserve space within the port as a highway for vessels in motion, & that the effect of the bye-laws, as explained by the reservation contained in the "Description of Fairway," was to constitute in the inner man-of-war anchorage two separate fairways, divided by the line of mooring buoys, in either of which vessels, whether proceeding up or down the harbour, were entitled to navigate, & pltfs.' vessel was alone in fault for the collision for failing to keep on her own starboard side of the northern fairway, in compliance with art. 25.—THE ZILLAH, [1929] P. 266 ; 98 L. 6070a. -.]—The L. was going down the river St. Lawrence outward bound, stemming the tide, following a course in mid-channel, a narrow channel within the meaning of Art. 25, & when about two miles apart sighted the H., which was well over the southern side of the channel, her port side. The available fairway, which was limited by shoals on each side, was well lighted & about twelve hundred feet wide. The H. blew two port helm signals which were not heard, but when within 1,500 feet blew one short blast, put her helm hard-a-port & kept it there until collision. The L. only heard the last short blast. The Regulations of 1910 provided for no signal to warn an oncoming ship of an intended breach of rule by the approaching vessel :—Held : the two ships were jointly liable & equally to blame, & it ought to be inferred from the Regulations of 1910 that signals other than those specified & prescribed were given at the risk of the vessel which gave them ; the L. ought to have sounded two short blasts as a signal to the H. of her intention to continue on her course so as to pass green to green.—LEOPOLD L. SUB-SECT. 9A.—SCHELDT.

6163a. Vessel turning—Duties of other vessels—Both to blame.]—By Article 40, r. 3, of the Scheldt Bye-laws a vessel turning in the river must give the appropriate signal, & every vessel in the vicinity ("proche") proceeding against the tide must stop her way over the ground, & every vessel proceeding with the tide must slacken her speed, until the vessel turning no longer presents any obstacle "au passage."

Applts.' steamship C., a collier, bound up the Scheldt with the tide, had ahead of her the steamship A., which sounded the appropriate signal, that she was going to swing to get head on tide. Resps.' vessel B., one of the Harwich & Antwerp mail boats, was coming down the river at her full speed of 14 knots. She saw the lights of the C. coming up astern of the A., & when she got down towards the A., which was blocking about half of the navigable waterway of some 1,000 feet, she saw the lights of the C. coming under the stern of the A. on the B.'s side of the waterway. The B. kept her speed until about one minute before the collision when she slowed, &, about half a minute afterwards, stopped & went full astern. The President absolved the B. from blame for the ensuing collision on the ground that Article 40, r. 3, did not apply to her under the circumstances, as there was ample waterway for her on her own proper side of the river under the stern of the A. He held that the B. was justified in keeping her speed "until her master saw that there was an element of risk in the turning movement of the A. combined with the oncoming of the C. but before that risk had developed." He held the C. alone to blame for over-starboarding into the water of the B. & for not sounding a signal that she was starboarding. The owners of the C. appealed :—Held : Article 40, r. 3, is directed, not to the moment when the approaching ships get up to the turning ship, but to the time when they are coming towards her & do not know where she may be when they get up to her; the ship coming against the tide cannot excuse herself by saying that when she arrived in the vicinity of the turning ship there was in fact room for her to pass; (per GREER, L.J.) r. 3 is a regulation for the purpose of ensuring the safety of vessels navigating the river at the time the turning movement is taking place quite as much as it is directed to the safety of the turning vessel herself, & that the rule has to be applied until the turning vessel no longer presents any obstacle "au passage"; & (per CUR.) while the C. was to blame, the B. was also to blame for keeping her speed & not stopping & reversing her engines until the risk of collision was apparent. Decision of the President varied by holding both vessels to blame in equal degrees.—THE "CHATWOOD," [1930] P. 272; 100 L. J. P. 1; 143 L. T. 735; 18 Asp. M. L. C. 165, C. A.

6212a. St. Katherine's Docks—Sufficiency of signal.] —Bye-law 26 of the Port of London River Bye-Laws, 1914–21, provides that "A steam vessel coming out of dock or leaving a wharf or tier shall signify the same by a prolonged blast of the steam whistle, except in the case of a vessel coming out of the St. Katharine Docks requiring the bascules of the Tower Bridge to be raised in order to get into position in the river which shall signify the same by a prolonged blast of the steam whistle followed by three short blasts in rapid succession."

PART XII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 5.—E. (d).

m i. ——.]—A collision occurred between the I., & the McG., soon after midnight, in a narrow channel of the St. Lawrence River between buoys 23 & 24, south of the fairway, & close to buoy 23. The weather was fine & clear, somewhat overcast, but without haze, & visibility was good. Both ships were going at full speed. The McG. outbound, going with the stream & a tide of 3 knots an hour & the I. inbound. When the McG. was abreast of the buoy 24 she gave a one-blast signal which was answered by the I. when abreast of buoy 23, indicating that they would pass port to port. The I. always going at full speed, then directed her course to port instead of keeping to starboard, contrary to the signal given, & to Art. 25, shoving the McG. to the south; & the collision occurred, the I. striking the McG. on the port side just amidships, with her port bow :—Held : as the two vessels were travelling port to port after exchanging signals indicating they would keep their course, the speed of the McG. in no way contributed to the collision, but that the collision was entirely due to the fault of the I. in not keeping to starboard of the channel & neglecting to slow up or stop as good seamanship required.—STANDARD OIL CO. 6121 iii. —— In narrow channel —Check signal.]—Where a vessel is overtaking another in a narrow channel such as the Welland Canal & signifies her desire to pass by blowing one blast, but receives no reply, she is bound to wait, & not attempt to go forward so as to affect the overtaken vessel until permission is obtained. Rule 29 of the Rules of the Road for the Great Lakes is imperative, & overrides the General Rules which deal with conditions not covered expressly by said Rule.

The "check" signal is not recognised by the Great Lakes Rules, & its meaning & effect can only be determined by the circumstances under which it is given & received.—SINCENNES-MCNAUGHTON LINES v. "STEEL CHEMIST," [1928] Exch. C. R. 182.—CAN.

Defts.' steamship having, on the flood tide, come stern first out of the lock of the St. Katharine Docks into the Upper Pool of the Thames, was in collision with the pltfs.' steamship. When entering the lock defts.' steamship sounded a signal of one long blast followed by three short blasts, & this signal she twice repeated as she passed through the lock & into the river. It was contended for pltfs. that she ought in addition to have sounded the prolonged blast mentioned in the first part of bye-law 26 :—Held : the framers of the bye-laws must have had in mind that almost the only occasion when a vessel leaving St. Katharine Docks would require the bascules of the Tower Bridge to be raised was when she was coming out of the docks stern first on the flood tide & so would need all the room she could obtain in which to turn head down river ; the combination of one long blast & three short blasts conveyed a warning to those whom it might concern that a vessel was leaving the dock & in doing so coming astern ; if the bye-law required a vessel in those circumstances also to sound the general warning signal of a prolonged blast prescribed in the earlier part thereof, it followed that she must also, while going astern, sound three short blasts if & when any other vessel in the crowded reach came in sight ; & such a series of blasts would be wholly unnecessary & lead to confusion, & defts.' steamship was right in sounding only a signal of one long & three short blasts.—THE FALCON (1931), 47 T. But for the position of the anchor, the use of fenders would have avoided damage to either vessel. The judge held that the master of the H. knew of the position of the anchor & took the risk of coming in contact with the V. when the rush of the flood tide swung the H., which was aground, athwart the creek & into contact with the V. lying moored on the opposite bank. 6628a. —— Detention due to collision—Owner unable to use ship owing to contract during period of detention.]—On Mar. 12, 1927, resps.' steamship suffered damage by a collision with applts.' steamship, for which the applts. admitted liability. The damage did not render resps.' vessel unseaworthy, & she continued trading without effecting repairs. While she was so trading her owners by a memorandum of agreement dated Dec. 21, 1927, contracted to sell her. The agreement set forth that the vessel was " due London on Dec. 24, thence H. & A., expected ready for delivery between, say, Jan. 10 & Jan. 31, & to be delivered to buyer at Antwerp or a U.K. port at seller's option, but not later than Feb. 25, 1928, subject to buyer's approval afloat & to bottom examination in dry dock, as specified in Clauses 4 & 5 of this contract . . . 4. The buyer shall commence the inspection of the steamer afloat within twenty-four hours of receiving notice of steamer's readiness for inspection, & if on superficial inspection the buyer is satisfied with the general condition of the steamer, seller shall at his own risk & expense open up the engines, boilers & tanks for the inspection of the steamer afloat by the buyer. . . . The buyer shall declare acceptance or refusal of the steamer in writing within twenty-four hours after completion of such inspection afloat . . . 5. For examination of bottom &/or other water parts &/or tailend shaft, seller agrees to put the vessel into dry dock. . . ." The steamship arrived at Antwerp on Jan. 10, 1928, & her owners gave notice to the buyer of her readiness. On Jan. 16 they proceeded to open up the vessel's engines, boilers & tanks for inspection, & while the vessel was in that condition & therefore unable to trade, they took the opportunity to effect the repair of the collision damage, which was of such a nature that it could be repaired while the ship was afloat. The repairs admittedly occupied four days, & were completed on Jan. 24. Subsequently the vessel was put into dry dock for bottom examination. On the reference to assess the damage caused by the collision resps. claimed (inter alia) loss & expenses in respect of four days' detention while their ship was undergoing repairs :—Held : inasmuch as resp. shipowners had entered into contractual obligations which prevented them from trading with the vessel & earning profits during the time when the repair of the collision damage was being executed, they had not suffered any loss by the detention of their vessel in consequence of the collision, & were therefore not entitled to recover from the wrongdoer.—THE YORK, [1929] P. 178 ; 98 L. 6653a. —— —— ——.]—A British battleship damaged by collision was put into a naval dry dock for her repairs. The ship's effective life was estimated at twenty years & she was under four years old at the time of the collision. In assessing the damages the registrar allowed nothing in respect of the use of dock & cranes, on the ground that the Admiralty had suffered no pecuniary expenses or loss, & in respect of the loss of use of the ship for fifteen days, the time estimated for the collision repairs, he allowed interest at 2½ per cent., on half the initial costs of the ship for the fifteen days. The Admiralty appealed :—Held : that the case must go back to the registrar for re-assessment, for (i) the ship occupied the dock & used the cranes, etc., to the exclusion of other vessels & some allowance, therefore, must be made to the Admiralty in respect of these items, & (ii) having regard to the estimated life of the ship, her annual depreciation & cost of maintenance, the amount awarded for detention appeared to have been computed on a wrong basis.—THE WEST WALES, [1932] P. 165.

6694a. —— —— On special contract.]—In Nov. 1928, pltfs.' dredger L. was sunk through the negligence of defts., who in May, 1930, admitted liability. At the time of the casualty pltfs. were engaged in dredging operations in Patras Harbour, Greece, under a constructional contract with the Harbour Commissioners. The contract was a profitable one to pltfs., but contained severe terms as to penalties if the work was not completed within the specified period. Pltfs. had strained to the utmost their resources of cash & credit to obtain the necessary plant which would qualify them to perform the contract, & had not the means to purchase another dredger when the L. was sunk. In order to carry on the contract, therefore, after the lapse of some time, pltfs. hired the dredger A. at a high rate. Ultimately the Harbour Comrs. purchased the A. & resold her on easy terms to pltfs.

In assessing the damages the registrar allowed the value of the L. which he took as being the price paid for the A., some £9,000 odd. He allowed in addition the cost of hiring the A., certain expenses while the plant was lying idle, a certain sum to compensate pltfs. for delay in receiving their profits on the contract, & interest on the several sums from varying dates. Defts. moved in objection to the report, & LANGTON, J. confirmed the report. Defts. appealed :—Held : the assessment had proceeded on the wrong basis ; the losses sustained by pltfs. owing to the fact that they were using the L. in the performance of a very special contract with the Harbour Comrs. were not the direct & natural consequences of the collision & must be excluded ; if pltfs. were given the value of the L. as a going concern at the time & place of her loss, which the ct. would take in round figures at £9,000, plus interest at 5 per cent. to the date of judgment, no extra sums could be awarded in respect of loss of profit or the hiring of the A.—THE EDISON, [1932] P. 52 ; 101 L. 6711 i. —— No market for such type of ship.]—On Aug. 14, 1926, a hopper digger barge belonging to the trustees of the Clyde Navigation was sunk in collision with the s.s. Ronda, admitted that those in charge of her were solely to blame for the accident. In an action at the instance of the trustees, brought on Jan. 24, 1928, to assess & recover damages for (inter alia), the loss of the barge, it was proved that there was no market for such a vessel, so that the test of market value was not available. The Lord Ordinary awarded the pursuers the cost of a reasonably efficient second-hand hopper barge, & the cost of adapting it for their special purpose :—Held : the Lord Ordinary's method of assessing the value of the barge was not erroneous.—CLYDE NAVIGATION TRUSTEES v. BOWRING S.S. Immediately after the sinking of the ketch, & before any expenses were incurred in removing her, defts. abandoned her. Pltfs. jointly incurred expenses in removing the obstruction, & sued to recover the amount from defts. :—Held : (1) the ketch having sunk through the negligence of defts., they became liable at common law for the damage caused by the obstruction to the navigation of the river & the blocking of the approach to the wharf, & they could not escape liability for that damage by abandoning the wreck; (2) the damages recoverable were the reasonable cost of removing the obstruction.—DEE CONSERVANCY BOARD v. MCCONNELL, [1928] 2 K. The owners of the barge had given notice that they abandoned their vessel. On a motion by defts. to set aside the service of the writ :—Held : the claim was for "damage done by a ship," namely, damage done by defts.' ship to pltfs.' dock by putting an obstruction in it, with Supreme Ct. of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 22 (1), (a), (iv.), & was properly commenced by a writ in rem.—THE CHR. The valuer appraised the ship on the footing that she was employed & likely to be employed, but the fact that she was under a profitable time charter which had nearly seven years unexpired was not disclosed to the valuer :—Held : an appraisement should be based on the value of a ship to her owners as a going concern; the earning power under the charterparty should be taken into account as one of the elements of value; accordingly the appraisement was not conclusive; &, on further evidence adduced in ct., the value should be raised from £72,820 to £85,000.—THE CASTOR, [1932] P. 142; 101 L. voyage out & home, if there be either an outward or an inward cargo in such voyage, but without making any advance if there should be both.

Must we not suppose that the legislature intended to use these words in the sense in which they are commonly understood; that is, as descriptive of a voyage commencing from & terminating in the country to which the ship belongs, or, as here, in some particular port of such country? If the words would fairly admit of different meanings, it would be right to adopt that which would be most favourable to the interest of the public, & most against that of the co.; because the co. in bargaining with the public ought to take care to express distinctly what payments they were to receive; & because the public ought not to be charged, unless it be clear that it was so intended (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—GILDART v. GLADSTONE (1809), 11 East, 675; 103 E. 8629a. —— —— No duty to disclose condition of berth.]—Pltfs.' steamship was damaged by lying in an uneven berth at a wharf owned by defts., a railway co. Defts.' harbour master at the wharf acted as ship's agent for pltfs. for the limited purposes of reporting the ship at the Custom House, paying the pilot, & providing the master with funds to pay the labourers discharging the cargo. Before pltfs. arranged to send the vessel to the wharf the harbour master had in writing informed them that the berths were "perfectly safe for steamers to lie aground." Defts. alleged that the vessel came to the wharf subject to printed conditions, known to the harbour master, whereby the railway co. did not represent, warrant or guarantee that the berths alongside the wharf were safe or suitable for the accommodation of vessels, & all vessels brought alongside remained at the sole risk of their owners & on the terms that the co. should "in no event whatever be liable for any damage . . . however caused to or suffered by any such vessel." The harbour master did not in fact know that the berth was defective:—Held: (1) even if the harbour master ought to have known of the defective condition of the berth, which was doubtful, it was not his duty to impart to pltfs. information, acquired as harbour master, which would be against the interests of defts. & of the harbour master to disclose; (2) the notice did not form part of the contract between pltfs. & defts., & afforded defts. no defence; & accordingly pltfs. were entitled to judgment.—THE HAYLE, [1929] P. 275; 99 L. 8697a. Damage "in connection with" towage—What amounts to.]—Pltfs.' steamship with two tugs in the employ of defts., the Port of London Authority, fast to her, was proceeding from the Albert Dock to the Victoria Dock. Defts.' lock foreman had signalled to her to enter the narrow Cutting, some 300 feet long, between the two docks, but at about the same time he had signalled to another tug that she could enter the Cutting from the opposite end. In order to avoid collision with that tug the steamship put her engines astern, with the result that she got out of position & struck the walls of the Cutting, doing herself damage. Defts. relied on the terms of the towage contract, which contained a clause that the owners of the ship being towed or transported would "indemnify & hold harmless the Port Authority" against claims in respect of damage of any kind "arising in the course of & in connection with the towage or transport," & whether caused or contributed to by any negligence on the part of the Port Authority's servants:—Held: (1) the clause was not an indemnity against party & party claims, but only against third party claims; (2) the damage did not arise "in connection with" the towage or transport; & accordingly the shipowners were entitled to recover the amount of the damage caused by the negligence of defts.' servant.—THE CARLTON, [1931] P. 186; 100 L. 8685 iii. ——.]—In an action of damages brought by a shipowner against harbour trustees for injuries sustained by his ship through being given a foul berth in their harbour, it was established that the berth in question was in a tidal river; that débris discharged into the berth from a sewer formed a mound on the bottom of the berth which was a danger to ships taking the ground at the ebb of the tide; that when dredging the berth defenders, in view of this tendency, made it their practice to dredge at the locus of the mound to a greater depth than at other parts of the berth, but that no regular system of examination existed; that the berth had in fact been dredged some three weeks before the ship arrived, but that no special precaution had been taken to ascertain its condition before assigning her to it:—Held: defenders had failed to establish that they had taken reasonable care to make sure that the berth should be in a safe condition for vessels using it; & accordingly, as the ship had been injured owing to the condition of the berth, defenders were liable for the damage occasioned by their negligence.—CORMACK (OWNER OF THE S.S. 8715a. -.]—Pltf., a lighterman, was in charge of a barge, which was being taken from a dock through a lock. The dock & lock were both the property of defts. While pltf. was navigating the barge under the orders & directions of defts., a rope attached to the barge broke & struck pltf., causing him personal injuries. Pltf. had no option to refuse to take the rope on board. Defts. relied on the terms of a notice, exhibited on the pierhead of the lock, to the effect that lightermen availing themselves of the facilities & assistance of defts.' servants must do so at their own risk, & upon the understanding that no liability whatsoever should attach to defts. or their servants for any injury from whatever cause arising to or by the craft or to or by any person on board thereof :—Held : the words of the above notice were primâ facie adequate to exempt defts. from liability for the negligence of their servants, & the fact that pltf. was compelled to regulate the barge according to the directions of the dockmaster was in no way inconsistent with the fact that he was in the circumstances " availing himself of the facilities & assistance " of defts., & did not deprive defts. of the exemption afforded by the notice.—WICKETT v. PORT OF LONDON AUTHORITY, [1929] 1 K. 8732a. Survey by Lloyd's Register—Liability of individual surveyor—Negligence.]—Pltf., who was the owner of a yacht, requested the society known as Lloyd's Register to make a special survey of the yacht for classification. The society stipulated for freedom from liability, & the survey was conducted by two of the society's surveyors. Deft., who was one of these two surveyors, was responsible for the mainmast. The society certified that the yacht had been reported to be in a good & efficient state & that she had been classed as A1. In fitting out the yacht for sea pltf. found that the mainmast was rotten in places & wholly unfit for use, & he claimed damages from deft. for negligence & breach of duty :—Held : there was no privity of contract between pltf. & deft., & that independently of contract deft. owed to pltf. no duty of care or skill with regard to the survey, & therefore the action failed.—HUMPHERY v. BOWERS (1929), 45 T. PART XXV. SECT. 2.

8746 i. Amount of Interest.]—The Crown, in Apr. 1918, pursuant to Order in Council passed under War Measures Act, 1914, requisitioned resps.' ship. The Exchequer Ct. of Canada fixed the compensation at $11,000 with interest thereon from date of requisition to date of judgment. The Crown appealed against the allowance of interest :—Held : the allowance for interest should be set aside. The right to interest does not depend on the income earning capacity of the property requisitioned. Where interest is allowed, it is on the ground of express or implied contract or by virtue of a statute; & no such ground existed here. Interest was really asked for here as damages for detention of the compensation money pending the ascertainment of what was due; & as such it could not be recovered.—R. v. MACKAY, [1930] S. C. h i. —— Value at time of requisition.]—The S. was requisitioned by the Canadian Government in 1918. In 1924 the claimant was notified of the release of the vessel. At that time she was lying partly submerged, at Kingston, a derelict hulk of no value, & claimant refused to take delivery thereof :—Held : on the facts, the question of hire disappeared, & that the controversy resumed itself into a question of compensation for the value of the vessel so appropriated, as at the date of the requisition thereof, & not for the profits that could have been made out of the vessel during the period of requisition.—MACKAY v. R., [1928] Exch. 8755a. ——.]—The C. M. was requisitioned on behalf of the Crown in 1917 by a charterparty, which provided that the Crown should not be liable for marine risks, but should be liable for "all consequences of hostilities or warlike operations." Whilst so requisitioned, the C. M. sailed from New York in convoy, destined for Nantes, then a war base, but also an ordinary commercial port, with a cargo, 84 per cent. of which in weight was for the civil commissariat, & 16 per cent. in weight was for war purposes. She was the third ship in the second column from the port hand in the convoy, another vessel, the W. F., which admittedly was at all material times engaged upon & carrying out a warlike operation, being in the corresponding position on the port column. While the convoy was proceeding at night without lights the steering-gear of the C. M. suddenly broke down, she sheered seven points off her course & came across the bows of the W. F., by which she was struck & sunk. There was no negligence on the part of those on board the C. M.:—Held: (1) the arbitrator was entitled to find that the C. M. was at no material time engaged, upon or carrying out a warlike operation, notwithstanding a portion of her cargo consisted of war material; (2) the loss of the C. M. was not the consequence of a warlike operation, inasmuch as the dominant & direct cause of the loss was the break-down of her steering-gear & her sheering off her course.—CLAN LINE STEAMERS, LTD. v. BOARD OF TRADE, THE CLAN MATHESON, [1929] A. 179 i. When application granted—Solicitor called to the Bar—Appointed to judicial office—Office abolished.]—A solr., admitted in 1894, was struck off the roll at his own request in 1900 in order to be called to the Irish Bar. He was called to the Bar in the latter year. In 1918 he became a judge of the Chancery Div. of the then High Ct. in Ireland, & later in the same year a Lord Justice of the then Ct. of Appeal in Ireland. He held the latter office until 1924, when, following the change of government in Ireland, the office was abolished. Subsequently he was called to the English Bar, but, owing to illness, was compelled to abandon his practice. He was then disbarred both in Ireland & in England at his own request, with a view to his being readmitted a solr. in the Irish Free State. He now applied to be so readmitted. The Incorporated Law Society did not oppose the application : —Held : the application be granted having regard to the special circumstances of the case, viz., that appct. did not retire from his judicial office voluntary, but owing to its abolition ; that as a solr. he would not be an officer of, or practise in, any ct. in which he sat as a judge ; that upwards of five years had elapsed since he had ceased to hold judicial office, & during the greater part of that time he had lived out of Ireland ; & that the reason for the application was the state of his health, which required active occupation, this motive displacing the idea of any improper or corrupt consideration behind the application. To what court appeal lies—Divisional Court—Not " matter of practice & procedure " within Supreme Court of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 31 (3).]—Resps., a firm of solrs., acted for applt. in defending him in criminal proceedings before magistrates & at the assizes. Applt. was found guilty & sentenced to imprisonment. In respect of those proceedings resps. delivered their bill of costs in summary form to applt.'s attorney, who paid it. A few years later applt. took out an originating summons under Solicitors Act, 1843 (c. 73), asking for delivery of a detailed bill of costs. The master made an order for its delivery. The judge at chambers set aside the master's order, but gave leave to appeal :—Held : the appeal did not relate to a matter of practice & procedure within above sub-sect., & therefore that the appeal lay not to the Ct. of Appeal but to the Div. Upon taxation the taxing officer allowed the amount charged :—Held : there was no agreement as to the amount & no obligations upon the solrs. to state to the client during the course of preparation that their original rough estimate of the probable amount of their bill, before they had entered upon the work, which proved to take ninety hours of the time of one of the solrs. in consultations, drafting, revising, redrafting, etc., was inadequate; & the amount of the bill was not excessive.—Re SOLICITORS, [1931] 1 D. sc. " Fair & reasonable "—What is.]—In deciding whether a contract between a solr. & client is " fair & reasonable to the client," within sect. 73, Law Society Act, R. S. M., 1913, the word " fair " is to be taken as relating to the means by which the contract was brought about, & " reasonable " as relating to the quantum of remuneration therefrom resulting to the solr. In deciding whether the amount is reasonable the actual work which the solr. was called on to do is a factor but not the sole factor to be considered; & where the contract is one on the contingency & percentage basis, the mere fact that under the percentage agreed on the amount payable to the solr. in the event of success has turned out to be in excess of the costs taxable on the ordinary solr. & client basis is not ground for holding the contract unreasonable. The reasonableness of such excess must depend on the reality & extent of the risk the solr. undertook & the amount of work anticipated at the time he assumed his obligation.—GALBRAITH v. MURRAY, ROBERTSON & THOMAS, [1930] 3 W. 107a. —— Acceptance by agent of purchaser subject to ratification—Withdrawal by vendor before ratification.]—Pltf. was chairman of the board of management of a charity. Deft. wrote a letter to the board saying that he would sell certain property to the board for £6,500. At a full meeting of the board instructions were given to arrange for an inspection of the property by members of the board on a specified date. A deputation, consisting of pltf. & twelve other members of the board, viewed the property & had an interview with the deft. The price of £6,500 was again mentioned, & deft. was told that all the members of the board present had resolved to buy the property, & that they could carry the necessary resolution, & they purported to accept deft.'s offer subject to a formal meeting. The secretary of the charity stated that the deputation was not a quorum & could not act as a properly constituted board. On the next day deft. wrote to the secretary promising that the deeds of the property should be left to be inspected by the solr. to the charity, & that his own solr. would forward a form of contract; & the secretary thereupon sent out a notice to members of the board of a special meeting to be held two days later "to receive the report & recommendation of the deputation." On the day of that meeting deft. telegraphed to the secretary cancelling all negotiations. The meeting, however, passed resolutions to ratify the deputation's acceptance of deft.'s offer to sell for £6,500, & to instruct the solr. to the charity to require deft. to complete. In an action by pltf. on behalf of himself & of all other members of the board for specific performance of an agreement to sell the property to the charity for £6,500 :—Held : (1) on the facts the members of the deputation did not warrant their authority to bind the board, & that their acceptance of the deft.'s offer was subject to ratification by the board; (2) where an offer is accepted by an agent subject to ratification by the principal there is no contract or contractual relation until ratification, & at any time before ratification the offer may be withdrawn.—WATSON v. DAVIES, [1931] 1 Ch. 455; 100 L. In Mar. pltf. retook possession of the equipment & testified that he did so because deft. had defaulted in paying certain instalments :—Held : if the omission of express reference in the written agreement to the equipment deprived deft. of any remedy at law, the case was a proper one in which to apply sect. 13 (i) of King's Bench Act, which authorises "the administration of justice in all cases in which there exists no adequate remedy at law," & justice could be done only by replacing the parties as nearly as possible in the same position in which they were before the agreement was reduced to writing.—MCLEOD v. KRYSKO, [1930] 3 W. veyance specially prepared "—Absence of model form.]—Where one or more of the material terms of an alleged contract cannot be determined, either by interpretation or as being of a kind which the law will supply, there is no contract, even though there has been an act of part performance, & the ct. can grant neither specific performance nor damages.

Pltf. signed an agreement, in the form of a letter prepared on behalf of deft., to purchase certain premises subject to the conditions indorsed thereon, & to take the conveyance " in the model form of conveyance specially prepared " for use in relation to the same. The conditions stated (inter alia) that the property sold was subject to restrictions appearing in the model form, & that if the purchaser should not after notice withdraw any objection which the vendor could not or would not remove, the vendor might by notice in writing annul the agreement. The premises were part of property conveyed to deft. by three conveyances, among others, dated respectively 1908, 1910 & 1911. They were comprised in the 1908 conveyance, & were part of what was known in deft.'s agent's office as block 4, other parts of the property being there known as blocks with other numbers. Most of the property had come to deft. subject to restrictions against user for trade purposes. At the date of the agreement the restrictions were obsolete in regard to blocks 4, 7 & 9 ; but in all dealings with property comprised in those blocks deft. had imposed like restrictions. No model form had been prepared for use in dealings with block 4, & through a mistake of deft.'s agent, pltf. received one appropriate to block 8. Pltf. took possession before completion, & soon raised the question of turning the premises into a shop. After long negotiations, during which the question of restrictions was thoroughly discussed, deft. refused permission, maintaining that, despite his agent's mistake in sending the wrong model form, the restrictions against trade ought to stand ; & a new draft conveyance, incorporating such restrictions, was prepared on his behalf. Pltf. refused to execute it, & sought by this action to enforce the original agreement subject only to restrictions in one of the schedules to the conveyance of 1908, & thus free from restrictions on trading :—Held : there was no enforceable contract, as by reason of the non-existence of the appropriate model form of conveyance there were missing from the original agreement material terms which the ct. could not supply, & also that damages could therefore not be assessed.—STIMSON v. GRAY, [1929] 1 Ch. 629 ; 98 L. 707a. Property subject to old closing order.]—On July 11, 1929, the purchaser bought Lot 2 at a sale by auction & paid a deposit. The particulars of sale described Lot 2 as an unrestricted freehold, practically an island block, with four frontages to Little Orford Street & three other streets in Chelsea, the block forming an excellent building site, when the existing buildings came into hand. On examining the vendors' registered absolute title the purchaser found Entry 7 in the Charges Register stating in effect that on the transfer of Lot 2 & other property to the vendors on May 23, 1929, by mtgees. selling under their power of sale in a mtge. of Feb. 17, 1903, from Co. A., the former owners, the vendors by way of indemnity to the mtgees., but not further or otherwise covenanted to perform the obligations of Co. A. under a deed of Dec. 23, 1905, made between Co. A. & the Chelsea Borough Council & under a London County Council Order of Dec. 12, 1905. The deed of Dec. 23, 1905, made in pursuance of a large building scheme by Co. A. provided for the stopping up (inter alia) of Little Orford Street & for making certain new streets, including a new transverse street bisecting Lot. 2. The Borough Council were to obtain the necessary Closing Orders, & Co. A. were to lay out the new streets at their own expense. By their order of Dec. 12, 1905, the London County Council on the application of Co. A. sanctioned the new streets subject to certain conditions including a condition that Co. A. should covenant to lay them out, & on Dec. 21, 1905, Co. A. covenanted accordingly. On July 10, 1906, on the Borough Council's application the justices made a Closing Order for Little Orford Street. For financial & other reasons this part of Co. A.'s scheme had not yet been proceeded with. Little Orford Street was still open ; it was in fact repaired by the Borough Council ; & at the date of the contract neither the vendors nor the purchaser knew of the Closing Order's existence. On discovering Entry 7 the purchaser required the vendors to delete it from the Register & to obtain a release of the obligations, &, on their refusal, he issued a vendor & purchaser summons for a declaration that a good title was not shown. On subsequently discovering the Closing Order he discontinued the summons & brought this action claiming a declaration that he was entitled to repudiate the contract, damages for breach, & return of the deposit. The vendors denied any breach & counterclaimed for specific performance :—Held : (1) the twenty-four years' old Closing Order did not affect the title, but, if & so far as it was inconsistent with the particulars, merely raised a case of innocent misrepresentation, on which the purchaser could neither repudiate the contract nor recover damages, his only remedy being to resist specific performance. Therefore, the purchaser's action failed ; (2) on the vendors' counterclaim for specific performance that there was in fact no misrepresentation in the particulars, as the word " street " even in London did not necessarily mean a public highway. There was therefore no ground for refusing specific performance.—BARNES v. CADOGAN DEVELOPMENTS, LTD., [1930] 1 Ch. 479 ; 99 L. J. Ch. 274 ; 142 L. T. 626.

Defts. took up their residence on the land & built a house & other improvements thereon referable only to said agreement. Pltf. brought an action to recover possession, & defts. counterclaimed for specific performance. The co. not having proceeded to drill, the city notified it that the city would not perform its part of the contract after a date specified, which was prior to that to which the contract was found on the trial to have been extended by agreement of the parties. The co. then sued for a declaration that the contract was a good & subsisting contract extending to said later date, which should be specifically performed by deft., & for an extension of time in which to complete the well or wells, & for damages. Said later date had passed at the time of the trial :—Held : although the contract had been broken by the city, it was one with respect to which it was impossible to decree specific performance; moreover, it was beyond the power of the ct. to extend the time, &, since the question whether the co. had really sustained any damage depended upon a question which could not be answered, viz., whether by said date the co. could or would have sunk the well or wells & have found sufficient gas to justify it in carrying it to the city's main, pltf. could recover nominal damages only.—MEDALTA POTTERIES, LTD. v. MEDICINE HAT CITY, [1931] 1 W. STATUTES.

Part I.—In General.

3a. Meaning of Act of Parliament—Act of Imperial Parliament.]—In 1800, by the Act of Union, 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 67, the two Parliaments were united, & thereafter the words "some Act of Parliament" mean an Act of Parliament of the United Kingdom. Now looking at the Lotteries Act, 1923 (c. 60), it is clear to me that the words "some Act of Parliament" mean some Act of the Imperial Parliament. Although it is true that in 1922 an Act of the United Kingdom set up a Legislature for Ireland, that has not altered the meaning of the expression, "Act of Parliament" in the Act of 1823, & it is impossible to say that an Act passed by the Irish Legislature is an "Act of Parliament" within Lotteries Act, 1823 (c. 60), s. 41 (SLESSER, L.J.).—R. v. REGISTRAR OF JOINT STOCK COMPANIES, Ex p. MORE, [1931] 2 K. 78a. —— ——.]—One further point was taken upon the Superannuation Act, 1859 (c. 26), with which it is necessary to deal. The marginal notes of sect. 3 refer to "existing rights" & of sect. 12 to "right." It was contended that these catchwords could be used to explain the meaning of sects. against which they appear. For my part I cannot allow this. As explained by BAGGALLAY, L.J., in A.-G. v. Great Eastern Ry. Co., No. 70, marginal notes are not a part of an Act of Parliament. The Houses of Parliament have nothing to do with them, & I agree with the learned Lords Justices in that case, BRAMWELL, JAMES, & BAGGALLAY, that the cts. cannot look at them. Their imperfections, spoken of by BRAMWELL, L.J., are illustrated by the note of sect. 9 of this Act (LORD HANWORTH, M.R.).—NIXON v. A.-G., [1930] 1 Ch. 566, 593; 99 L. J. Ch. 259; 143 L. 764a. ——.]—It was suggested by the A.-G. in the course of his argument for the Revenue Officers, that the ct. was entitled to consider some of the provisions of the later Derating Act as affecting the construction of the 1928 Act. It was contended that as the later Act obliged railways to pass on the benefit of the derating by reduction of railway rates to the users of railways the definition clauses of the 1928 Act should, if possible, be read as applying only to that part of their property which earned rates that could be reduced in proportion to the derating benefits received by the railway, & therefore the Act should if possible be read as exclusing from the privileged classes warehouses for the use of which a customer pays rent & not railway rates & therefore could not be given the advantage of having the derating benefit passed on to him. It was further argued that if railway warehouses are outside the definition for these reasons, dock warehouses should also be deemed outside the definition. In my judgment this argument ought not to have any weight attached to it. The Act of 1928 cannot be interpreted by what Parliament chose to do by an Act of 1929. We are not entitled to assume that the need of so wording the Act as to confine the prospective advantages of differential rating to those hereditaments whose rateable occupiers could pass on the benefit to their trade customers was present to the mind of the Legislature when they passed the Act of 1928. We can, however, treat as relevant the purposes for which the Act was passed as stated in the title (Greer, L.J.).—Bottomley v. West Derby Assessment Committee, Mersey Docks & Harbour Board v. West Derby Assessment Committee, Bottomley v. Mersey Docks & Harbour Board, Bottomley v. Liverpool Grain Storage & Transit Co., Ltd., [1932] 1 K. The application of c. 61, 1925–26 (Sask.), entitled An Act respecting Improvements under Mistake of Title, is not confined to mistakes of title, but extends to all cases, including those of mistake of the identity of the land or of its boundaries, where a person has made "lasting improvements under the belief that the land is his own." purpose of interpreting the earlier. It is, of course, certain that Parliament can by statute declare the meaning of previous Acts. It would be competent for them to do so, even though their declaration offended the plain language of the earlier Act. It would be an unnecessary step to take, unless it were intended, contrary to the general principles of legislation, to make the explanatory Act retrospective, seeing that the subsequent statute could by independent enactment do what was desired. It is also possible that where Acts are to be read together, as they are in this case, a provision in an earlier Act that was so ambiguous that it was open to two perfectly clear & plain constructions could, by a subsequent incorporated statute, be interpreted so as to make the second statute effectual, which is what the cts. would desire to do, & it is also possible that, where a statute has created a crime or imposed a penalty, a subsequent Act showing that that crime was intended to have a limited interpretation or the circumstances regarded as narrow in which the penalty attached, would be used for the purpose of giving effect to the well-known principle of construction to which I referred at an earlier stage (LORD BUCKMASTER).—ORMOND INVESTMENT CO. v. BETTS, [1928] A. 1248a. —— Unless contrary construction clearly intended.]—There is a well-known canon of construction applicable to private Acts of Parliament that if the words used by the statute are ambiguous, the meaning that is most favourable to the public should be adopted ; but I do not think that this has the effect of preventing the ct. from saying that if, when the whole of the statute in question is considered, it appears by necessary intendment that the privilege claimed was intended to be granted, the ct. should refuse to draw this inference because the Act does not contain express words creating the privilege claimed (GREER, L.J., in a dissenting judgment).—BOURNEMOUTH-SWANAGE MOTOR ROAD & FERRY CO. v. HARVEY & SONS, [1929] 1 Ch. 686 ; 98 L. 1364a. -.]—" May " always means may. " May " is a permissive or enabling expression ; but there are cases in which, for various reasons, as soon as the person who is within the statute is entrusted with the power it becomes his duty to exercise it. One of those cases is where he is applied to to use the power which the Act gives him in order to enforce the legal right of appct.

PART IV. SECT. 2.

b i. -.]—Sect. 1 of c. 30, 1923, provided for the appointment of one or two examiners for the city of Halifax. The Act was to come into force on a day to be fixed by proclamation. C. 54 of 1924, passed May 9, 1924, repealed s. 1 of c. 30, 1923, & substituted another sect. providing for the appointment of one or two examiners for the city of Halifax. On May 23, 1924, it was proclaimed that c. 30, 1923, as amended, should come into force on June 1, 1924. On the same day, May 23, 1924, M. was appointed as an examiner for the city of Halifax. Applt. contended that his appointment was void, because made under the authority of a statute that was not in force at the time of his appointment : —Held : the proclamation that c. 30, 1923, as amended, should come into force on June 1, 1924, had the same effect as if that date had been fixed by the statute itself as the date when it should become effective as law ; & it was common ground that in the latter case appointments could be made in anticipation of the statute coming into force ; the proclamation made that certain which had been contingent ; it must be presumed that everything was done regularly unless the contrary was shown ; the proclamation & order of appointment bore the same date & were gazetted the same day ; & it must be presumed that the proclamation preceded the appointment ; the appointment was, therefore, valid.—MCKENZIE v. HUYBERS, [1929] 4 D. 1777a. —— —.]—Had this provision been contained in the English statute I entertain no doubt that in the absence of express penalty where some one was in terms by statute in a public matter required to do a certain act, or if the act were to be done, to do it in a certain way, that if that person failed to obey that statute, the act done would be in contempt of the statute, & therefore, though there were no express penalty provided, the ordinary common law rules would apply. In such case, the matter being one of public obligation & the act done in contempt of the statute, in an appropriate case the remedy would lie for misdemeanour (SLESSER, L.J.). —THE TORNI, [1932] P. 78, 90; 101 L. 217a. —— —— What amounts to "loss sustained" by principal.]—By an agreement in writing between pltfs., who were stockbrokers & members of the Stock Exchange, & defts., who were also stockbrokers but not members of the Stock Exchange, the latter agreed that in consideration of receiving 50 per cent. of any commission on business introduced by them to pltfs. they would be liable for 50 per cent. of any "loss sustained" by pltfs. in connection with such business. Defts. introduced to pltfs. one W., & as a result of his transactions he incurred a debt to pltfs. no part of which had been paid. W. executed a deed of assignment of his property for the benefit of his creditors, & both pltfs. & defts. were assenting creditors to the deed. Pltfs. claimed that on the execution of that deed of assignment a loss had been sustained by them within the meaning of the abovementioned agreement, & they brought an action to recover 50 per cent. of W.'s debt :—Held : the mere signing of the deed of assignment by W. did not establish a loss sustained by pltfs., & that in the absence of evidence of actual loss sustained by them the action failed.—Stanley (Montagu) & Co. v. Solomon (J. The broker sold the shares for its own purposes at a lower price, & when pltf. demanded his certificate the broker tendered him another certificate of the same co. for the same number of shares. This pltf. refused ; & sued for conversion :—Held : pltf. was entitled to judgment &, in the absence of other evidence of the value of the shares at the date of the sale, the amount to which pltf. was entitled was that for which the shares were sold. f i. —— Fictitious transactions—What must be proved.]—Where a stockbroker acting as agent for a customer does not obey the latter's orders in making sales & purchases, but reports to him fictitious transactions, it is not necessary for the customer, in order to make out a cause of action for the recovery of the money paid to, & the value of the securities deposited with, the broker, to prove that all the transactions so reported were fictitious. The customer's right to maintain such an action is not affected by the fact that some of the transactions in the series of dealings between him & the broker were for cash, nor is his right of action dependent on his returning or tendering a return of the shares which he had in fact received.

Pltfs. were, to the knowledge of defts., members of the T. Stock Exchange. Pltfs. bought the shares upon the Exchange on the same day & at the named price. Defts. knew that the shares would be bought on the Exchange & according to its rules & customs. Pltfs. were not able to procure delivery of the certificates for the shares until Sept. 27. On Oct. 1 they drew on defts. for the price, attaching the certificates to the draft. Defts. on Oct. 4 refused to take delivery on account of the delay:—Held: in the absence of an express stipulation as to the immediate forwarding of the certificates or of a demand to forward them at once, the delay in procuring & forwarding them was not unreasonable & defts. were not justified in repudiating the contract.—CRANG & CO. v. PLOTKE & CO., [1931] 1 D. 373 iii. —— ——.]—In an action in which stockbrokers were held liable in damages to a customer for selling without his authority shares of his which they were holding for him:—Held: in assessing damages, the date when pltf. would have sold the shares had he not been prevented from doing so by their prior sale by the brokers should be determined on the assumption that he would have done what prudent people would have done & have sold when the hour came to sell. In the present case it was held that this point of time was fixed as at that date when pltf., after objecting to a statement of his account which showed said shares as sold, requested that they be placed to his credit because he wanted to sell them. He was, therefore, awarded the difference between the low market price on that day & the price at which defts. had previously sold.—SUNDERLAND v. SOLLOWAY MILLS & CO., LTD., [1930] 3 W. W. 400 i. Property available for distribution among creditors—Shares purchased by broker for client.]—In determining on the bkpcy. of a stockbroker whether certain shares, certificates for which were in his possession at the time of the bkpcy., are the property of a claimant thereto who had been dealing, as a buyer of such shares, with the broker, or are assets in the hands of the trustee, the distinction must be observed between the case where the relationship of the broker & the claimant was that of vendor & purchaser & the case where the relationship was that of agent & principal. In the former case the shares will not be held to be the property of the claimant unless certificates therefor have been specifically appropriated to the claimant's contract. In the latter case, i.e. where the relationship was that of principal & agent, it must be held that the certificates on hand include those for the shares bought for the claimant if the certificates on hand of the kind in question are sufficient to meet the demands of all purchasers of such shares; & the claimant will be entitled to delivery of the certificates provided he has either paid, or pays therefor in full, or if he has to his credit on the books of the broker an amount sufficient to meet the balance, if any, due from him on said shares.—Re STOBIE-FORLONG-MATTHEWS, LTD., Re KERN AGENCIES, LTD., [1931] 1 W. 400 ii. —— Card of membership of Exchange.]—A registered broker in the Sir Dinshaw Petit Native Share Brokers' Hall, Bombay, was declared a defaulter & his card of membership was forfeited by the directors. Shortly afterwards he was adjudicated an insolvent under Presidency Towns Insolvent Act, 1909, & by virtue of the material sections thereof all his property wherever situated which might belong to or be vested in him vested in the Official Assignee of Bombay & became divisible among the insolvent's creditors. In an action by the Official Assignee claiming against the Native Share & Stock Brokers' Assocn. a declaration that the card of the insolvent & all rights & benefits annexed thereto were vested in the Official Assignee, & that he was entitled to the net proceeds of their sale:—Held: by virtue of the nature & character of the assocn. as regulated by the deed of assocn. & the rules made thereunder, in the case of a defaulting member who was expelled from the assocn., no interest in his card remained in himself & none that could pass to his assignee. —BOMBAY OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE v. SHROFF (1932), 48 T. If there are not available sufficient share certificates of a particular description to satisfy the purchases by the different customers, the latter should be given their pro rata number of the shares which are available.—Re CLARK (R. 33a. Restriction of motor coaches in certain areas —Validity of regulations.]—A motor coach co., which held a number of metropolitan stage-carriage licenses, owned coaches which plied for hire on regular services in the metropolitan area & home counties. These coaches started from Upper Regent Street, London, where the booking office of the co. was. The Minister of Transport gave notice that he proposed to make regulations under London Traffic Act, 1924 (c. 34), s. 10, which in effect provided that motor coaches should not at any time on any week-day be on any street within a prescribed "inner area" of London, & that they should not be on any street within a prescribed "outer area" except at certain permitted hours. Upper Regent Street was within the outer area, & just on the border of the inner area:—Held: the Minister had power under the Act to make the proposed regulations.—R. v. MINISTER OF TRANSPORT, Ex p. SKYLARK MOTOR COACH CO., LTD. visions of Part IV., & may provide that existing licences in force before the commencement of the Act shall continue in force for a period fixed by the Order. By Public Service Vehicles (Transitory Provisions) No. 2 Order 1931, dated Mar. 13, the Minister ordered that where a person was, on Feb. 9, 1931, operating a service of public vehicles, & had before Mar. 31, 1931, applied for a road service licence under the Act, it should not be deemed to be an offence for him to continue that service pending the grant or refusal of that application. The prohibition contained in sect. 72 (1) of the Act was first brought into force, by Order of the Minister of Transport, on Apr. 1, 1931. Defts. commenced to operate a service of express coaches over a route between London & Aylesbury on Feb. 26, 1931, & applied in the prescribed manner for the grant of a road service licence from the Comrs. of the Eastern Area through which the route passed before Mar. 31, 1931, but their application was refused & an appeal to the Minister from the refusal dismissed. Defts. were later prosecuted & convicted at petty sessions for running their service without a road service licence, but, notwithstanding the conviction, continued to do so. In an action by the A.-G., at the relation of other motor coach owners holding licences to operate on the same route, for an injunction to restrain defts. from continuing their service :—Held : (1) the action was maintainable notwithstanding that the Act created a statutory offence & provided a penalty for its breach ; (2) as defts. were not operating a service of coaches on the route in question on Feb. 9, 1931, they did not come within the terms & conditions of Public Service Vehicles (Transitory Provisions) Order, No. 2 ; (3) in fixing Feb. 9 as the critical date on which coach services must have been in operation to obtain the protection of the last-mentioned Order, the Minister was not acting ultra vires the Act or unreasonably ; (4) sect. 81 (3), dealing with appeals to the Minister from a refusal to grant a new licence to a person who had held an old licence did not apply to defts. as they had never held any licences for the particular route under the Act, only under earlier superseded Acts ; (5) the ct. made a declaration in favour of the relators on defts. undertaking not to renew the service without obtaining a licence.—A.-G. v. PREMIER LINE, LTD., [1932] 1 Ch. 303 ; 101 L. sq. Licence granted subject to approval of time-table—Failure to observe time-table—Liability of owner.]—Art. 14 of the Omnibus Bye-laws for Aberdeen, 1926, is as follows : " the proprietor of any omnibus shall submit, for the approval of the magistrates, a time-table showing the time of arrival at & departure from the stance . . . & every such omnibus shall leave the aforesaid stance . . . punctually at the time stated in the said time-table as approved by the magistrates." A co. owning motor omnibus, with which it was duly licenced to ply for hire in Aberdeen, obtained from the magistrates approval of a time-table showing the starting times of its omnibuses from a particular stance. On a day when it was anticipated that, owing to special traffic congestion, the arrivals at the stance of the co.'s incoming omnibuses would be delayed, a servant of the co. acting with the manager's approval, took out an additional omnibus to augment the usual service. He started from the stance with this omnibus at a time which was not one of those authorised in the co.'s approved time-table. In a prosecution of the manager, as representing the co. for the contravention of art. 14 :—Held : a contravention of art. 14 by one of the co.'s servants acting within the scope of his employment, was an offence for which the manager, as representing the co. was responsible.—BEAN v. SINCLAIR, [1930] S. (2) A general trade licence shall not at any time be used upon a vehicle which is being used for the conveyance of passengers for profit or reward. . . . (4) Subject to the provisions of paras. (1) & (2) of this article a vehicle may be used upon a public road under a general trade licence for any purpose connected with the business as a manufacturer or repairer of or dealer in mechanically propelled vehicles of the holder of such licence, & so long as such vehicle is bonâ fide being used for such purpose the holder of the licence shall not by reason only that some other or further use is being made of the vehicle be deemed to commit a breach of these regulations":—Held: the words "some other or further use" are limited to a use by the holder of the licence, & do not cover the delivery, for reward, by an intending purchaser of a motor vehicle of his own goods to his customers during a demonstration run.—WESTOVER GARAGE, LTD. v.

7 miles on a public highway he "did drive a motor car, viz., a motor omnibus, at a speed exceeding 20 miles per hour, viz., about 27 miles per hour, contrary to the Motor Car Act, 1903, s. 9." The weight of the omnibus unladen exceeded 3 tons. None of the Statutory Orders were libelled in the complaint. The sheriff having repelled an objection that sect. 9 did not apply to the omnibus, & having convicted the accused:—Held: the complaint as laid was irrelevant, in respect that the provisions of sect. 9 of the 1903 Act applied only to motor vehicles under 3 tons in weight; to make it relevant it was necessary to libel the Statutory Orders which made vehicles exceeding 3 tons in weight subject to a speed limit.—DURNION v. PATERSON, [1930] S. g ii. —— —— Whether notice of prosecution necessary.]—Two police officers, who had detected a heavy motor car travelling in excess of the speed limit of twenty miles an hour, overtook & stopped the car, & one of them thereupon informed the driver that he had been travelling at a speed exceeding twenty miles an hour, & that his speed was twenty-six miles an hour. The driver was subsequently prosecuted for an offence against the Order of 1905. In defence he pleaded that he had not received the warning required by sect. 9 of Motor Car Act, 1903:—Held: a prosecution for a contravention of the Order of 1905 is not a prosecution for an offence under sect. 9 of Motor Car Act, 1903; &, accordingly, the warning or notice required by that sect. is not a condition precedent to conviction for a contravention of the Order.—TAYLOR v. HORN, [1929] S. C. (J.) 111.—SCOT.

g iii. —— Evidence of—Speedometer.]—The driver of a motor charabanc was convicted of exceeding the speed limit of twenty miles an hour. The only evidence was that of two police officers, who followed the charabanc along the street, travelling in a motor cycle combination fitted with a recently tested speedo-meter. They deponed that, for a distance of 300 yards, their motor cycle kept 20 yards behind the charabanc, & that, during this distance, the speedometer registered a speed of twenty-six miles per hour. An objection to the sufficiency of the evidence, on the ground that the method of registering the speed of the charabanc was unreliable, repelled; & conviction sustained.—TAYLOR v. HORN, [1929] S. 188 b i. Driver's licence—Driving car while disqualified—In place to which public have access.]—The driver of a motor vehicle was convicted of an offence under sect. 7 (4) of Road Traffic Act, 1930, on the ground that, while disqualified for holding a driving licence, he had driven a vehicle on a road forming the access from a public highway to a farm. The road in question was part of the farm & led only to the farmhouse, where it terminated. It had no other houses on it, & it was not maintained by any public authority but by the farm tenant in terms of his lease. There was no gate at the entrance to it, & no intimation that it was not open to the public; & except at times in summer, when the farmer placed a pole across it to prevent the straying of cattle, there was no obstacle to prevent the public having access to it. The road was used by the public as an access to the farm, & members of the public not having business there also frequently walked on it. They had, on several occasions, been turned off by the farmer when there were growing crops in the adjoining fields:—Held: the road was a road to which the public had access within Road Traffic Act, 1930, s. 121 (1).—HARRISON v. HILL, [1932] S. The car was kept in a yard between the father's house & his store, & one of the two car-keys was either in the house or in the store where it was accessible to the son. TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES.

Part I.—Definitions.

4a. —— Broadcasting.]—Their Lordships think broadcasting falls within the description of "telegraphs." No doubt in everyday speech telegraph is almost exclusively used to denote the electrical instrument which by means of a wire connecting that instrument with another instrument makes it possible to communicate signals or words of any kind. But the original meaning of the word "telegraph" as given in the Oxford Dictionary is:

"An apparatus for transmitting messages to a distance, usually by signs of some kind" (per CUR.).—Re RADIO COMMUNICATION IN CANADA, A.-G. OF QUEBEC v. A.-G. OF CANADA, A.-G. OF ONTARIO, A.-G. 24a. Erection of posts on railway—Acquiescence—Implied licence—Revocability.]—Whether any & what restrictions exist on the power of a licensor to determine a revocable licence to occupy land depends upon the circumstances of each case. In 1926 the Crown proceeded against applts. alleging that poles, carrying telegraph wires, which they had erected on the roadway of a Canadian Govt. railway, were a trespass thereon, & claiming damages; alternatively the Crown claimed a declaration of the applts.' rights, if any. As to the main section of the telegraph line, the poles, as they stood in 1926, had been erected upon the roadway between 1905 & 1910 without leave or licence. As to two branch lines, the poles had been erected in 1893 & 1911 respectively, in each case while an agreement was in negotiation though no agreement was eventually concluded. The whole telegraph line, which was about 500 miles in length, was used by the public as well as by applts.:—Held: (1) on the facts, at the date of the proceedings all the poles were on the roadway with the licence of the Crown. Although the applts. had originally been trespassers in respect of the main line poles, many years' acquiescence & a claim to the payment of rent, had long since prevented them from being so regarded; in the case of the branch lines, it was to be inferred that the poles had been erected by licence. (2) The licence was revocable in the absence of any facts from which a contract that it should be irrevocable could be implied; having regard to the circumstances, the licence could be revoked only by a notice determining it upon a specified future date such as would give the applts. sufficient time, not only to remove the poles & wires, but also to arrange for erecting them elsewhere.—CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. A telephone line to a summer hotel was erected many years ago across deft.'s property. It was never used for more than a few months in summer, & for years it was not used at all. No easement for the extension of wires over deft.'s lands existed : & it did not appear that the telephone co. acquired any right to use the line. So far as was established in evidence, the pole was a nuisance to deft. & he acted in what he thought was the exercise of a right when he cut it down :—Held : he had good grounds for supposing that he had a right to abate what was to him a nuisance on his own land ; according to the evidence, the telephone co. was a mere trespasser there.—R. v. PIMMETT, [1931] O. n i. —— Order imiting liability—Whether binding on sender of telegram.]—The order of the Board of Railway Comrs., contemplated by sub-sect. (2) of sect. 348 of Railway Act, R. S. C., 1927, merely determines the extent to which a railway co. may limit its liability with respect to the carriage of traffic, leaving it to the co. to make such limitation if it sees fit to do so ; but does not prevent the co. from carrying traffic without limiting its liability. General Order No. 162 of said Board, approving conditions of liability, set out therein, with respect to the transmission of telegraphic messages :—Held : to be an order made under the powers given by the provision then in force corresponding with sub-sect. (2). It, therefore, has not the effect of making a statutory contract between the sender of a telegram & the co., but only authorises such a contract to be made ; &, consequently, the conditions are not binding on a sender who had in fact no knowledge of them & to whom they cannot be held to have been communicated.—JANKELSON v. CANADIAN NATIONAL TELEGRAPHS, [1931] 1 W. Resp. objected that the part assigned to him was not one of the three leading comedy parts, &, on the refusal of applts. to recast him, declined to appear in the play & sued applts. for damages for breach of contract. At the trial of the action before a judge & jury the jury found for resp. for £1,000 damages for loss of publicity & for three weeks' salary, & judgment was entered accordingly. The Ct. of Appeal affirmed the verdict & judgment except as to the salary :—Held : (1) upon the construction of the contract, it bound applts. to give resp. an opportunity of appearing in public in a part answering the stipulated description; (2) it was competent to the jury, having regard to the character of the contract, to give damages to resp. for loss of publicity.—HERBERT CLAYTON & JACK WALLER, LTD. v. OLIVER, [1930] A. ——— ———.]—Our attention has been quite rightly called to the cases which have been decided in the Ct. of Appeal & the House of Lords with regard to the rights of an actress or an actor, or a public performer, who has been deprived of the opportunity of gaining the prestige & reputation that he would have obtained if he had been allowed to perform in the agreed character. It may be, & I think it is, that very special considerations apply to an agreement with an artist who is to perform in public, because it is a matter of common knowledge that in a large majority of the cases the consideration to the artist when he accepts the engagement is just as much, if not more, the opportunity, certainly in the early stage of the artist's career, to appear before the public & make his reputation, which is of much greater value than the mere money wages fixed for the period of his employment. It seems to me it is for that reason that it is regarded as the essence of the matter that the artist should have the opportunity for which he has bargained, & these considerations make exceptional principles applicable to the case of artists who perform in public (GREER, L.J.).—Re GOLOMB & PORTER & Co.'s, LTD., ARBITRATION (1931), 144 L. 164a. —— Subsequent order permitting Sunday opening subject to conditions—Invalid.]—It was the practice of a certain County Council, in granting licences to use premises for cinematograph exhibitions, to impose the condition that the premises should not be so used on Sundays, Christmas Day or Good Friday; but also to entertain applications for permission to open the premises for cinematograph entertainments on those days. A co. applied for a licence to open & use premises for cinematograph entertainments, & also for permission to open the premises for such purposes on Sundays, Christmas Day & Good Friday. In compliance with this application the County Council made an order to the effect that, "subject to arrangements at the premises being completed to its satisfaction, the council will take no action for the present in the event of the above-named premises being opened for cinematograph entertainments on Sundays, Christmas Day & Good Friday as from & including Sunday, July 6, 1930, provided: (i) that a sum of £35 be paid to charity in respect of each Sunday, Christmas Day & Good Friday on which the premises are opened for cinematograph entertainments." 498a. Clause against soliciting or canvassing customers — Contract with infant.]—Deft., while still an infant, entered into an agreement of service with C., a dairyman, as a milk roundsman. C. sold his business to pltfs., including the benefits of contracts of service with his employees. After a short time deft. left the service of pltfs. & served another dairyman, in the conduct of whose business he solicited & served the customers of pltfs. When deft. entered the service of C. he entered into an agreement of service with C. This agreement contained a restrictive clause with regard to serving soliciting or canvassing customers of the employer, & it was admitted that if the agreement with C. was binding on deft., it was also binding on him with pltfs. Pltfs. claimed an injunction & damages for acts committed by deft. which were alleged to be in breach of the agreement :—Held : the restrictive words were too wide & indefinite to be enforceable, especially in the case of a contract with an infant. The word " customers " alone was used in so expanded a sense that that by itself was sufficient to render the restrictive clause inoperative.—EXPRESS DAIRY CO. v. JACKSON (1929), 99 L. J. K. n i. —— Whether extinguished by withdrawal from service.]—Under a contract covering a certain period between a travelling salesman & his employer, the pltf., the salesman, agreed to give his whole time to his employer's service, & that he would not sell or offer for sale any goods other than those of the employer. The contract placed no restriction on him after the date of the expiry of the contract, nor did it expressly restrict him from selling other goods if before that date he should be discharged for cause under a clause stipulating a cause for his discharge. The salesman, after working under the contract, left the service & entered that of a concern selling competing goods ; & his withdrawal was accepted by the pltf. as a breach of contract :—Held : the restriction was not intended to govern the salesman after termination of the contract by breach, & that, if so intended, it was so wide, & general as to be unreasonable & unenforceable.—GERLACH-BARKLOW CO. v. MACPHERSON, [1928] 3 W. PART V. SECT. 8, SUB-SECT. 1.—A. (b).

525 iv. ——.]—Pltf. & deft. Z. had been partners in the restaurant business. Z. sold out his interest therein to pltf. & covenanted with him that he, Z., would not during the next three years " carry on or engage in, either directly or indirectly, & whether as a principal, agent, director of a co., servant or otherwise, or take part in the business of a restaurant or cafe or store " within the city of Victoria. Deft. P. opened a combined cafe & candy shop & employed Z. to manage the latter. Pltf. sued Z. for damages for breach of the covenant & for an injunction to restrain further breaches & also claimed damages from Z.'s wife & P. for inducing Z. to commit such breach & from all the three defts. on the ground that they had wrongfully conspired to injure his business :—Held : the appeal should be allowed, the injunction prayed for granted & damages awarded against the three defts.—LERIK v. ZAFERIS (B. 539 ii. ——.]—An agreement by the vendor of a restaurant business that she would " neither directly or indirectly have any interest or share or part in any other restaurant or similar place " for five years in the town of B., held not to have been broken by the fact that the vendor became a paid cook for P., a restaurant proprietor who at the time of said sale was employed by the vendor as a cook, & also lent said P. money, without obtaining therefor any right or interest in the restaurant, to be applied by P. in payment of the amount owing on P.'s purchase of the building in which she was carrying on said business.—FONG v. BOEHLER (Sask.), [1929] 4 D. 539 iii. ——.]—An agreement for sale by deft. & another of their business to pltf. co. contained a covenant by deft. that for a period of years, within a specified radius of Wellington, deft. would not " be engaged or beneficially interested in or in any way connected with . . . any trade or business similar to that hereby agreed to be sold." On proceedings against deft. for an injunction to compel observance of the covenant :—Held : the wording of the covenant was wide enough to cover deft.'s employment as a servant in a similar business.—SIMMONDS & OSBORNE, LTD. v. HIGHAM, [1931] N. Z. L. R. 502.—N.Z.

539 iv. ——.]—On the sale of a garage business the vendor covenanted " not to enter into the garage business " within a radius of one mile from the garage sold. The vendor became an employee of a garage within said area ; but there was no evidence that the employment was not a genuine one & concealed an interest in the business :—Held : the covenant had not been broken.—MORRISON v. MCTURK, [1931] 3 W. Deft. left pltfs.' employment & became a salesman to motor-car dealers within the prohibited area. In an action for an injunction to restrain deft. from an alleged breach of the agreement :—Held : as deft.'s employment with pltfs. was not of a confidential nature the restrictive clause was not reasonably necessary for the protection of pltfs.' business, & the action failed. —VINCENTS OF READING v. FOGDEN (1932), 48 T. Pltf., a physician practising in Nanaimo, who contracted to give professional service to certain miners there, engaged deft. to assist him in that work under an agreement which provided that on its termination deft. would not, for five years, practise in the city of Nanaimo or within a radius of 20 miles thereof. 699 i. Construction of covenant "carrying on business."]—Deft., who had been carrying on the business of selling & delivering milk to retail customers in the town of W., sold his business & the goodwill thereof to pltf. under an agreement which described the business as "dairy business" & in which deft. covenanted that he would not during five years from that date "either by himself or his agent carry on business of selling or delivering milk within the town of W." Deft. thereafter made daily sales of milk to one X., a retail milk vendor in W. The sales were made on the deft.'s premises in W., delivery of the milk to X. was taken there, & X. used it to augment the supplies distributed by him to his customers in the same town :—Held : said sales to X. constituted a breach of the covenant & pltf. was given damages & an injunction.—SNELL v. MIETTINENEN, [1931] 2 W. Prior to the passing of the 1927 Act, various committees of a local authority passed resolutions, which were confirmed by the council, to the effect that certain of their employees be required to become members of one of the trade unions in the resolutions referred to. By that Act it was provided that it should not be lawful for any local or other public authority to make it a condition of the employment, or continuance in employment, of any person that he should or should not be a member of a trade union, & that any such condition should be void. Shortly after the passing of the Act instructions were given by a committee that only men belonging to a specified trade union should be employed in respect of certain casual labour; & an employee, who was dismissed accordingly, obtained a declaration in the county court that his dismissal was illegal. A member of the council thereupon brought forward a motion having for its object that instructions should be given that the resolutions of the committees should cease to be operative; but the motion was defeated :—Held : in the circumstances the ct. should declare that it was not lawful for the local authority to require any person, as a condition of employment or continuance in employment, to become or to be a member of a trade union.—A.-G. v. BIRKENHEAD CORPN. It was proved or admitted that the whole of the money had been in the possession of one or other of them, but it was contended that the money was not in their possession at the date of the charge, & that that fact was a necessary ingredient of the offence, & further that the information was out of time :—Held : the offence of withholding money referred to in Trade Union Act, 1871 (c. 31), s. 12, was a continuing offence; & it was not necessary to prove that the money was in the possession of the two officers at the date of the charge if there was evidence that money belonging to the 1063 i. Officers — Election — Construction of rules.]—Pltf., a member & a trustee of a trade union, was duly nominated for the presidency, his nomination paper being perfectly regular & in order. The committee of management resolved, without any warrant under the rules of the union, to reject his nomination on the ground of personal unfitness for the office, & subsequently the returning officer declared the other candidates, H., one of defts., duly elected unopposed, no ballot having been held, H. himself presided at the meeting in question, which so resolved, without having afforded pltf. an opportunity of being heard. The meeting consisted of seven members, of whom only two had paid their subscriptions, although the rules required a quorum of five financial members. The rules provided for an attendance fee of 2*s.* 6*d.* for each member of the committee, of whom the president was an ex officio member, in respect of each committee meeting :—Held : the decision of the committee of management was invalid on the following grounds: namely, the committee had no power to reject pltf.'s nomination; H. was present, presiding at the meeting; the committee did not afford pltf. an opportunity of being heard on the question of his eligibility for office; & there was no quorum of qualified members.—CRADDOCK v. DAVIDSON, [1929] S. c i. —— Claim based on arbitration decree.]—The rules of a master plumbers' assocn. provided that members who tendered successfully for contracts should pay a percentage on these contracts to the funds of the assocn. A claim made by the assocn. against a member in terms of the rules was disputed by him, & a minute of reference was entered into by the parties referring the matter to arbitration & agreeing to abide by & implement the arbiter's decree, & consenting to registration & execution. The arbiter decerned in favour of the assocn. Thereafter the member was sequestrated, & the assocn., founding on the decree-arbitral, lodged a claim in the sequestration, which his trustee in bankruptcy rejected, in respect that, under Trade Union Act, 1871, s. 4, it was unenforceable :—Held : while the original claim could not have been entertained in a ct. of law in respect that it was based on an agreement excluded by sect. 4, no such restriction affected the claim here in question, which was a claim based upon a new & independent agreement by the parties to arbitrate & to implement the arbiter's decision—EDINBURGH MASTER PLUMBERS' ASSOCN. v. MUNRO, [1928] S. In this capacity he supervised all their departments, including the lithographic department. The Society contended that he was still working at the trade of a lithographic printer :—Held : pltf. had ceased to follow any employment connected with the trade, & was not practically working at the trade, within the meaning of the rules of the Society, & he was accordingly entitled to superannuation benefit.—MCCORD v. SPROAT, [1931] N. 25a. ——.]—Applications were made in the joint names of a Canadian Co. & an English Co. for the registration in respect of common soap, class 47, & in respect of perfumed toilet soap, shaving cream, shaving soap & shampoos, class 48, of a trade mark consisting of the word "Palmolive," & for the registration in respect of toilet soap (perfumed) of two marks, the first consisting of the word "Palmolive" shown in gilt lettering on a black band across a representation of a green crêpe paper background, but unlimited as to colours, & the second consisting of the word "Palmolive" shown on a black band & also across a seal at the end of the band. The applications, which had been advertised before acceptance, were opposed by Lever Brothers, Ltd., & others, on behalf of themselves & all other members of the perfumery manufacturers' section of the London Chamber of Commerce :—Held : the evidence showed that the words "Palm" & "Olive" had been used in the trade to describe soap containing palm oil & soap containing olive oil respectively ; the word "Palmolive" was descriptive of appcts.' soap containing palm oil & olive oil, & would be deceptive if used upon soaps not containing those oils ; in spite of the evidence showing that to a large number of persons the word "Palmolive" did in fact distinguish appcts.' goods, the word was not adapted to distinguish within sect. 9 (5) ; the mark consisting of the word "Palmolive" in gilt lettering on a black band across a representation of a green crêpe paper background might, if limited as to colours, be regarded as satisfying the provisions of sect. 9, provided that any right to the exclusive use of the word "Palmolive" were disclaimed ; & the objection taken to the applications on the ground of the presence upon the register at the date of the applications of three marks, consisting of or comprising the word "Palmolive," & registered in the name of a different proprietor, would have been removed if the registrations of those prior marks had been subsequently cancelled. Observations were made as to what constitutes a "joint adventure." The applications were refused.—Re PALMOLIVE TRADE MARK (1931), 49 R. P. C. 269.

27a. Addition of diminutive suffix.]—The word "Consolette," as applicable to a gramophone model intermediate in size between a table & a pedestal or "console" model is not an invented word capable of being registered as a trade mark under Trade Marks Act, 1905 (c. 15), s. 9 (3), as it is merely a diminutive form of the word "console," which is in common use in the gramophone trade. The mark, therefore, was expunged from the register.—S. M. T. GRAMOPHONE CO., LTD. v. ITONIA GRAMOPHONES, LTD. (1931), 47 T. L. R. 324 ; 48 R. P. C. 309.

(2) It is not necessary for the validity of a trade mark that the public should know the name of the proprietor of a trade mark, but in the public mind such mark meant a particular manufacture.—CONTINENTAL OIL CO. v. CONSUMERS' OIL CO., LTD., [1932] Ex. C. R. 136.—CAN.

sb. Official control or guarantee signs or stamps.]—The amendment of the Trade Mark & Designs Act passed in 1928, adding paragraph (g) to sect. 11 of R. S., 1927, c. 201, was intended as a partial adoption of the terms of Article 6 (ter) of the Convention for the protection of Industrial Property, signed at The Hague in 1925, & to which Canada was a signatory. The effect of the addition of paragraph (g) was merely to add to the grounds upon which the Minister might refuse to register a mark. The fact that the Minister is now empowered, by said paragraph, to refuse to register trade marks which consist in whole or in part of "official control or guarantee signs or stamps" adopted by another country, is indicative of the fact that prior to 1928 it was not intended by the Trade Mark Act that a trade mark might be refused registration upon the ground that it consisted of "official control & guarantee signs or stamps."—BIRMINGHAM JEWELLERS & SILVERSMITHS' ASSOCN. v. STOCK, [1929] Ex. purifier. The powder was supplied sometimes in the form of bricks & sometimes in powder form. The application was refused by the registrar, on the grounds (a) that the mark was not " capable of distinguishing " the goods of appct.; (b) that it might be calculated to deceive; (c) that it too nearly resembled a mark " Brico " already registered for similar goods. Appct. appealed to the ct.:—Held: the registrar had correctly decided that the word " Brick " was not " capable of distinguishing " appct.'s goods within Trade Marks Act, 1919 (c. 79), s. 2 (2), & there was too great a similarity between the word " Brick " & the mark " Brico." The appeal was dismissed with costs.—Re HANS LAURITZEN'S APPLICATION (1931), 48 R. P. C. 392.

77a. —— ——.]—The Liverpool Electric Cable Co., Ltd., applied to register the words " Liverpool Cables " in Parts A. & B. of the register in respect of electric cables. The applications were refused on the grounds that, although evidence went to show that those words indicated to the trade the co.'s electric cables, the word " Liverpool " was not primâ facie capable of distinguishing those cables or of becoming distinctive of them; that Liverpool was one of a class of geographical names which were of such importance that the names ought not to be registered to any one trader; that the word " Liverpool " describes the common characteristic of vast quantities of goods, namely that they come from Liverpool, & that phrase " Liverpool cables " therefore meant, not the cables of the applicant co., but cables manufactured or dealt in at Liverpool:—Held: the Registrar had proceeded upon the right grounds, & that his decisions were correct; the Registrar is not bound to accept an application in Part B. to register upon proof of user or that the mark is in fact distinctive; it is part of his duty to consider as a judicial officer applications put before him; he may refuse registration if not satisfied that the proposed mark is capable of distinguishing; in considering whether a geographical name is registrable, both the locality & the goods must be taken into consideration; & the name of such an important commercial centre as Liverpool, even though it may in fact be distinctive of the goods in respect of which it is sought to register it, is not registrable.—Re LIVERPOOL ELECTRIC CABLE CO. 152a. —— User in foreign country.]—Notox, Ltd., applied to register the word " Notox " as a trade mark for hair dye, etc. The application was opposed by an American co. who alleged user by them of the mark in America & abroad. The opponents had also, four days before the application, sent out a thousand circulars to hairdressers in London advertising their goods under the mark. Appct. co. had been incorporated about nine months before the application & had made some sales under the mark. The Assistant-Comptroller decided to register the mark. The opponents appealed:—Held: the appct.'s right to registration was not affected by the opponents' user abroad, & the thousand circulars sent out by the opponents were not sufficient to cause a liability to confusion such as to destroy the right to registration. The appeal was accordingly dismissed.—Re NOTOX, LTD., APPLICATION BY, FOR A TRADE MARK, Re INECTO INCORPORATED (1930), 48 R. P. C. 168.

—— Discretion of Court of Appeal.]—Magdalena Securities, Ltd., a Canadian Co., applied to register the word "Ucolite" as a trade mark for partially coked coal. The application was opposed by Low Temperature Carbonisation, Ltd., on the ground that the mark would conflict with the opponents' registered trade mark "Coalite." The registrar decided to register the mark. The opponents appealed. Leave was given to them to take the further objection, which by agreement had been treated as a ground of objection before the registrar, that appcts. had at the date when registration was applied for no bonâ fide intention to use the mark as a trade mark. At the hearing of the appeal, some of the declarants were cross-examined & further evidence was adduced:—Held: (1) in a case where the ct. has materials before it which were not before the registrar, the ct. has to exercise its discretion under sect. 8 (2) of Trade Marks Act, 1919, although generally speaking it ought to have considerable regard to the decision of the registrar, taking into account the fact of his special experience; the appcts. had failed to show affirmatively that the mark was not calculated to deceive, & therefore the application ought to be disallowed; (2) on the evidence there was within Trade Marks Acts no bonâ fide intention on the part of appcts. *at the date of the application to use the mark applied for upon or in connection with the goods in question for the purpose of indicating that they were the goods manufactured by appcts. This application was refused by the Comr. of Patents for the sole reason that one L. had registered the letters "B. L." as a specific trade mark in the year 1885. This latter mark was never renewed. Hence this appeal:—Held: the trade mark "B. L." having expired in the year 1910, was not at the time of the application of B. & L. O. Co. a registered trade mark within sect. 11 (b) of Trade Marks & Designs Act; & the Comr. of Patents was not justified in refusing the application aforesaid solely because of the registration aforesaid made in the year 1885.—BAUSCH & LOMB OPTICAL CO. v. COMR. sl. Moreover, pltf.'s product & that of deft. were not of the same class, the one being a cake soap & the other a liquid, & the action of pltf. should be dismissed.—LEVER BROS., LTD. v. WILSON, [1932] Ex. so. "Sure to rise"—"Bound to rise."]—Pltf. had a registered trade mark for baking-powder, a prominent part of which consisted of a plate with figures of loaves over which were the words "Sure to rise." Deft. was the registered owner of a trade mark, part of which consisted of the words "Bound to rise" placed round the top of a balloon. There were many dissimilarities in the details of each mark. Deft.'s mark had been registered in 1882, & pltf. had used its mark for about fifty years & had registered it in 1912. Deft. placed part of its trade mark, namely, the words "Bound to rise," above a cake on a prominent part of its labels:—Held: deft. had not made an exact or substantial copy of pltf.'s trade mark, nor had deft., by putting part of its registered mark, namely, the words "Bound to rise," above a cake on a prominent part of its label, infringed the trade mark of pltf., as the words "Bound to rise" had not been so used by deft. as to be calculated to cause its goods to be taken by ordinary purchasers for the goods of pltf.—EDMONDS, LTD. v. SELF-HELP, LTD., [1932] N. (who had no intention of interfering in any way with appct.'s business) as the "Dorikin Studio":—Held: the words Dancing Studio were merely descriptive of the class of business carried on & could be ignored, & as there had been no confusion in fact the names "Doris Kinsman" & "Dorikin" were not so similar that it was likely they would be so confused. Interdict therefore refused.—PATLANSKY v. BROWN (1931), 52 N. L. R. 147.—S. AF.

Triangle & word "Triangle"—Triangle & word "Nicholson."]—From 1865 onwards resps., Nicholson & Sons, brewers of Maidenhead, had stencilled an outline triangle with "N" inside on their "best pale ale" casks & had also branded "Nicholson" thereon. In 1927 they applied to register the combination as a trade mark for bitter beer. Their application was opposed by appts., Messrs. Bass, on account of the similarity of the outline triangle to the well-known Bass solid triangle mark registered in 1876, but the Assistant Comptroller allowed the registration, limiting the outline triangle & "N" to the colours white or black. About the same time resps. applied to remove the word "Triangle" registered by Messrs. Bass in 1926 from the register, & the Assistant Comptroller ordered the removal:—Held: (1) resps.' mark had been used both as a mark of quality & of origin before Aug. 13, 1875, & was therefore registrable as an old mark. In the case of a distinctive mark non-recognition by the public is immaterial on the question of "user as a trade mark"; (2) resps.' mark was not prohibited from registration by sect. 11 as being calculated to deceive, inasmuch as the general prohibition in that section must be read subject to the specific exception in sect. 19, which impliedly authorised the Registrar to place upon the register an old mark so nearly resembling a mark of another already on the register as to be calculated to deceive; (3) in view of the extensive user of appts.' mark in connection with bottled beer & the absence of any evidence that resps. had used their mark for bottled beer, bottled beer should be excluded from the specification of goods in respect of which resps.' mark was registered; (4) the registration of resps.' mark involved as a consequence the removal from the register of appts.' mark consisting of the word "Triangle."—BASS, RATCLIFF & GRETTON, LTD. v. NICHOLSON & SONS, LTD., [1932] A. 277b. "Abermill"—"Hammermill."]—An application by appts., A. P. & Sons, was made for registration of a trade mark in respect of paper goods in class 39, & was opposed by the H. Paper Co., whose business was carried on in the United States of America, but which had business in this country. The H. Paper Co. had a trade mark in the United States "Hammermill Bond," which they made use of in this country after 1920, from that time exporting goods to this country, & each year sold about £2,000 in value of the goods in this country. In May, 1923, appts. adopted the mark "Abermill Bond," which they now sought to register, & their trade under that mark had been over £20,000 a year. Appts. chose the mark "Abermill" in reference to the locality where their paper for stationery was produced near Aberdeen, without any thought of the word "Hammermill" quite honestly, though they were aware of the mark "Hammermill Bond." On June 13, 1931, the Assistant-Comptroller decided that if the application had been under sect. 19 of the combined Trade Marks Act he would have refused the application, on the ground that there was a resemblance calculated to deceive, but though, therefore, he would not have registered it if it had been a new mark & the application had been under sect. 19, he exercised his discretion under sect. 21 of the Acts, & treated the case as within that section, because of there having been an honest concurrent user of the mark by the appts., & made the order for registration of "Abermill Bond":—Held: (1) the ct. ought to be very slow to upset the exercise of the discretion of the Comptroller or Registrar, who had to adjust various considerations; (2) accepting the view of the Comptroller & CLAUSON, J., that sect. 19 alone did not avail to secure the admission of the mark to the register, as to sect. 21 there having been an honest choice of the word "Abermill" & an honest user over a period of six years & no confusion having been proved, the ct. ought to permit the registration of the mark under sect. 21, even if it were deemed to be identical or nearly identical with the trade mark of the H. Paper Co., as that section was in no way controlled or limited by sect. 19.—Re HAMMERMILL PAPER CO.'S OPPOSITION, Re PIRIE (ALEX.) & SONS, LTD. (1932), 146 L. T. 493; *sub nom. 353a. Withdrawal of application.]—On May 28, 1929, applts. had applied to register a trade mark. Their application was refused, & the registrar in his decision dated Feb. 28, 1930, referred to certain trade marks already registered & owned by resps. Leave was given by the ct. to applts. to serve notice of appeal to resps. Applts. did not inquire as to the objections proposed to be relied upon by resps. At the hearing resps. disclosed for the first time that they had a certain other registered trade mark. The learned judge intimated that, if resps. wished to put that matter in evidence, they would only be allowed to do so subject to terms as to costs. Resps. did not seek to rely on the matter. Thereupon the learned judge directed that the matter ought to be relied on by the registrar, who was also a party to the proceedings. Counsel for the registrar was given leave to rely upon the said registered trade mark as a ground of further objection. Applts. then sought leave to withdraw their application without payment of any costs at all :—Held : on applts. by their counsel withdrawing their application there be no order on the motion.—Re COLUMBIA PICTURES CORPN.'S APPLICATION (1932), 49 R. Prevention of deception—Not right to control conditions of resale.]—The statutory right now conferred on the registered proprietor of a trade mark by Trade Marks Act, 1905 (c. 15), s. 39, is the same as that which was conferred by Trade Marks Registration Act, 1875 (c. 91), s. 3, namely, the right to use the mark as a trade mark to indicate that the goods upon which it is placed are his goods & to exclude others from selling under the mark goods which are not the goods of the registered proprietor. This right does not carry with it any right to control, by the imposition of conditions or restrictions, the selling or dealing with the goods under his mark by other persons.

In an action for an injunction to restrain the infringement of pltfs.' trade marks by the sale of the Brut wine in England & from passing off that type of pltfs.' wine as & for pltfs.' wine prepared for the English market:—Held: (1) deft. by the sale of the Brut wine in England, although prohibited by pltfs., under the very marks which pltfs. themselves adopted to distinguish that type of their wine, were not guilty of passing off the Brut wine as & for pltfs.' type of wine prepared for the English market; (2) deft. was in no wise affected by the restrictions sought to be imposed by pltfs. against selling or dealing with the Brut wine in England. 511a. —— Use unknown at time of registration—Mark registered for "cinematograph films"—Whether "talkie films" included.]—Appcts., Columbia Pictures Corpn., an American Corpn. manufacturing & dealing in cinematograph films, applied to rectify the register by excluding "cinematograph films & goods of a like description to cinematograph films," from the specification of goods for which resps.' three trade marks, all of which contained the word "Columbia" prominently, were registered in class 8. An application by the corpn. for a mark which contained the figure of Liberty & the words "Columbia Pictures" had been refused registration under sect. 19. The following ground of objection was (inter alia) relied on by appcts.: (1) there had been no bonâ fide user by the resps. of any of their said trade marks in respect of cinematograph films or goods of a like description during the five years immediately preceding the application to rectify. Resps. did not nor had they ever made cinematograph films for commercial purposes. At the end of 1927 cinematograph films with sound accompaniment began to be shown commercially. Later the sound accompaniment was provided by a photographic record of the sound made at the side of the film used to project a picture on the screen. Resps. had no objection if the words "cinematograph films" were held only to describe films for the production of visual pictures, to the exclusion of this class of goods from their specification of goods in class 8. But if the words were held to include films used to record & reproduce a sound accompaniment, then resps. objected to the exclusion of such goods:—Held: "cinematograph films" included films which record & reproduce acoustic matter whether alone or jointly with visual matter; films for acoustic reproduction, sought to be excluded, were not known at the date of the resps.' registration; in these circumstances non-user during the five years immediately preceding the application to rectify could not be attributed to a deliberate intention not to use or to a deliberate intention to abandon such trade marks in respect of such goods; the question of exclusion was a matter of discretion & special circumstances must be considered; & the

Deft subsequently registered the words "Flora Dew" as its trade-mark for a similar drink, displaying said trade mark in & about its shops much in the manner employed by pltf., & in a pronounced manner following the interior arrangement & equipment of pltf.'s shops:—Held: deft. could not be said to have adopted his mark with a view of giving a distinctive description to his beverage, but rather to take advantage of the business connection & efforts of a rival trader, & such trade mark being liable to mislead, should be expunged from the register. sm. Assignment in gross.]—One H., doing business under the trade name of the Carp Flour Mills, registered the trade mark "Mello-Creme" in 1925, for use in the milling & sale of a breakfast food, & used the same in his business. In 1927, H., by deed, assigned to pltf. the said trade mark with the goodwill of H., relating to the sale of cereal foods under the said mark. Notwithstanding this assignment, H. continued to carry on his business as before, using the trade mark along with his trade name on the cartons of the product milled & sold by him ; & the goodwill aforesaid was never, in fact, transferred. Pltf. did not manufacture but merely sold the product of H., marked as aforesaid, with nothing on the product associating it with them. 949a. Director of company—Registration by company.]—Pltfs., who were the registered proprietors of a design registered in 1928 in class 1 in respect of its application to fruit peelers, brought an action for infringement of their copyright in the design against defts. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the author of the design was G., a director of the deft. co., & that the application for registration was made in fraud of defts., who first became aware of the existence of copyright on Apr. 12, 1929. Defts. further alleged want of novelty & subject-matter, & that pltfs. had not complied with the provisions as to marking contained in sect. 54 (1) (b) of Patents & Designs Act, 1907 to 1928. Defts. moved to rectify the register by expunging the design:—Held: the author of the design was H., a director of the pltf. co., & that therefore the application was not made in fraud of defts., & the design had not been published in any of the alleged anticipations, none of the features of the design were solely dictated by the functions which the article was called upon to perform, & the design was valid & subsisting & had been infringed. Pltfs. were granted an injunction & an order for delivery up, but inasmuch as they had failed to comply with the provisions as to marking contained in sect. 54 (1) (b) of Patents & Designs Acts, 1907 to 1928, & it was proved that defts. had no notice of the existence of copyright in the design prior to Apr. 12, 1929, an inquiry as to damages was ordered limited to infringements after that date. 970a. ——.]—Registration in class 3 was obtained for a design in respect of its application to a golf ball. The representation of the design on the register consisted of a freehand drawing comprising two views of the design from different aspects. Golf balls made & sold by pltf. co. were not in fact made in strict accordance with the design, although sold in wrappings marked with the registration number thereof. The managing director of deft. co. was in fact the author of pltf.'s registered design, which he had assigned to them while in their employ. The alleged infringing balls were substantially identical with the Maxfli balls made & sold by pltfs. Defts. alleged (inter alia) that pltf.'s design was only new or original in certain features having regard to certain prior users & prior publications:—Held: obvious or fraudulent imitation of the design had not been established. 1099a. —— ——.]—Pltfs. had manufactured & sold since 1926 fencing under the name "Chequerboard," & in 1930 they commenced an action against defts. alleging that they had passed off fencing not of their manufacture as their "Chequerboard" fencing. At the trial of the action two managers of magazines, the manager of an exhibition & an architect's assistant were called as witnesses to prove that the mark was distinctive of pltfs.' goods. Defts. had displayed on their premises, as a background of the display in their shop, panels of fencing which were not of pltfs.' manufacture, & pltfs. alleged that defts. had attempted to sell & in fact sold these panels in response to orders for "Chequerboard" fencing :—Held : the mark was primâ facie descriptive, & the evidence adduced was not of members of the public but of people in a special position to know of the origin of the goods, & was not sufficient to prove that the mark was distinctive of pltfs.' goods ; & in any event there was not sufficient evidence to establish any passing off by defts. 1100a. "Lechat Camel Hair Belting"—For "Camel Hair Belting."]— F. R. & Co., Ltd., the proprietors of a trade mark, consisting of the words "Camel Hair" registered in July, 1908, in class 35 in respect of Belting, commenced an action to restrain deft. from passing off goods not pltfs.' manufacture as being pltfs.' goods. Pltfs. alleged that deft. had fraudulently passed off & was threatening & intending to pass off belts & belting not of pltfs.' manufacture or merchandise as & for pltfs.' belts or belting by using upon, or in connection therewith, the words "Camel" or "Camel Hair" ; they claimed a further injunction to restrain deft. from advertising or offering for sale beltings under the description "Lechat's Camel Hair Belting" or under any other name in infringement of their trade name or trade mark in breach of an undertaking given by deft. in 1926. Deft. admitted that the designation "Camel Hair" used alone & without other distinguishing matter denoted both to the trade & to users of belting that such belts or belting were the product of pltfs. Deft. alleged that he had not used upon or in connection with belts or belting not being of pltfs.' manufacture or merchandise the words "Camel" or "Camel Hair" alone, but only with additional matter sufficient clearly to distinguish such belting from the belting of pltfs. Deft. admitted giving the undertaking on which the claim to the second injunction was founded, but denied that he was bound thereby, alleging that he was induced to give the same by certain untrue representations of pltfs. Deft. sold their goods as Lechat's Camel Hair Belting, the goods being manufactured by a Belgian firm of manufacturers of beltings known as "Etablissements J. Laroche Lechat Société Anonyme" : —Held : pltfs. had failed to prove their allegation that deft. had passed off or attempted to pass off belts or belting not made by the pltfs. as & for pltfs.' goods ; deft. had so used prefix "Lechat" & "J. Lechat's" as sufficiently to distinguish their belting from that of pltfs. ; & pltfs. had not made out their alleged breach of the undertaking of Dec. 3, 1926. On the expiration of the term in a lease of certain works to pltfs., where they had carried on their business, defts., fifteen months afterwards, had procured a lease of the same works, with the exception of certain mines of clay. Defts. issued a circular & card tending to lead the public to suppose that defts. had succeeded to the business of pltfs., & were working the same material as pltfs. had formerly used :—Held : although the words of the circular & card might be literally true, yet, if they tended to mislead the public, the ct. would restrain them from further circulating or issuing such or any similar circular or card.—HARPER v. PEARSON (1860), 3 L. 1120b. Representation as to edition prescribed for examination.]—Pltfs. were the publishers of, & owners of the copyright in, a book entitled " Hazlitt's Selected Essays," edited by George Sampson, which included thirteen essays & notes on the essays. In 1927 & 1928 the book was prescribed by the London University as one on which candidates for matriculation would be examined. One of defts. published & sold & the other defts. sold a book entitled " Hazlitt's Selected Essays, Edition Hollingworth," containing twenty of such essays, including the thirteen selected by Sampson. Pltfs. commenced an action against defts., alleging that defts. had passed off the Hollingworth edition as & for the Sampson edition of pltfs. by representing that the Hollingworth edition was that prescribed for the London Matriculation Examination, & also alleging infringement of copyright in their selection of essays :—Held : if the fact were that a purchaser had been misled into thinking that defts.' book had been prescribed for a certain examination, that was simply a representation as to quality & would give pltfs. no right of action, there had been no passing off of defts.' book as pltfs.' & there was no infringement of copyright.—CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS v. UNIVERSITY TUTORIAL PRESS (1928), 45 R. 1120c. Goods sent in reply to order by plaintiff.]—Pltfs., who had for some time used the device of a swan with the word " white " on labels on porcelain enamelled baths of their manufacture, applied on two occasions to register the device, first in class 1 in relation to enamel, secondly in class 13 in relation to baths & the like. Both applications were refused. On Jan. 25, 1926, the B. W. Assocn. registered under sect. 62, in respect of a standardised brass tap approved by the Ministry of Health, the device of a swan with the letter B. W. A. The attention of pltfs. was drawn to the sale by defts. of one of these standardised taps in Feb. ; & later, upon ordering " ½-in. brass globe cocks Ministry of Health pattern swan," pltfs. received a like tap from defts. Pltfs. thereupon brought this action to restrain defts. from passing off, & at the same time moved to rectify the register by removing therefrom the B. W. Assocn.'s standardisation mark :—Held : pltf.'s device of a swan was known to the trade as indicating, not taps, but porcelain baths of pltfs.' manufacture or merchandise enamelled with a particular characteristic enamel ; the presence on the register of resps.' standardisation make, & the use of it upon brass taps made to the Ministry of Health specification was not calculated to deceive the trade into believing that such taps were merchandise or manufacture of pltfs. ; the sending of one of such taps by defts. in response to pltfs.' order was a reasonable response to that order : pltfs. had proved neither that the device of a swan indicated their taps to the trade, nor passing off by defts. ; & both the action & the motion failed.—WILSON'S & MATHIESON'S, LTD. v. MEYNELL & SONS, LTD., Re WILSON'S & MATHIESON'S LTD.'S APPLICATION (1929), 46 R. 1137a. —— —— ——.]—Pltf. co. was incorporated in Great Britain in 1909, for the purpose of carrying on a business, by means of manifold shops, for the sale of a large variety of articles at a price not over 6*d.* each. Deft. co. was incorporated on June 17, 1929, & was the buying agency of another co. which was incorporated in Australia under the name of Woolworths, Ltd., for the sale of a large variety of articles of a similar class to pltf. co.'s goods, but mainly at a higher price. There was no one with the name of Woolworth connected with deft. co. or its parent co. in Australia. The memorandum of deft. co. was framed so as to include the power to carry on retail business. Pltf. co. brought an action against deft. co. claiming an injunction restraining deft. co. from trading under its present title & from using the term " Woolworth " as part of its title or from using any other title calculated to deceive the public or to lead the public to believe that deft. co. was in any way connected with the pltf. co. :—Held : the evidence had not shown that there had been up to the time of the action any real confusion ; but by the name " Woolworths " pltf. co. was understood to be meant, not only among the general public, but also among traders & manufacturers ; the name Woolworths (Australasia), Ltd., must suggest some connection with pltf. co. ; deft. co.'s name so nearly resembled the name of pltf. co. as to be calculated to deceive ; the area of the trading operations of the two cos. was so much the same in many ways that there was serious risk of confusion.—WOOLWORTH (F. Deft. had a shop in London for animals & birds & in the past winter had had a sideshow of animals during the circus which pltf. was holding at Olympia. In 1928 he started a travelling Zoo, & shortly before the action he added a circus & advertised it as " Chapman's London Olympia Zoo & Circus." Pltf. commenced an action against deft. for an injunction to restrain him from using the words " London Olympia " as descriptive of or in connection with Zoo-Circus or other circus or entertainment & gave notice of motion for an interlocutory injunction :—Held : the words " London Olympia Circus " had come to mean pltf.'s circus. 1163a. —— ——.]—Pltfs. brought an action to restrain deft. from passing off goods not of pltfs.' manufacture as & for pltfs.' goods. Deft. was originally registered under the name of Sidney Lyons, but his name was later changed to Joseph Lyons. Pltf. co. was well known & had two hundred & fifty shops in Great Britain, four of which were situated in the neighbourhood of Brighton. Pltfs. also had two hundred thousand retail agents, & spent one hundred thousand pounds per annum on the advertisement of their tea. Deft. who was the keeper of a boarding establishment at Brighton had notepaper headed "J. Lyons food specialists." He advertised for canvassers & his advertisement read "J. Lyons require. . . ." He provided his canvassers with sets of packets: (i) a cardboard box labelled "J. Lyons, pure domestic cocoa," (ii) a packet of J. Lyons' cake flour, & (iii) a silver foil packet containing tea & bearing a label worded "J. Lyons' superior tea Brighton depot 8*d*. net wt. ¼ lb." Pltfs. sold tea in quarter-pound packets with a label also printed in blue on a white ground, & worded "Lyons tea, J. Lyons & Co., Ltd., Cadby Hall, Kensington." Pltfs. alleged that by reason of the similarity between deft.'s goods sold by the canvassers on behalf of deft., deft. had intended to deceive & had deceived the public into buying his goods as & for those of pltfs. Deft. denied that the acts complained of were calculated to deceive or that they had led to deception. He further claimed to be entitled to trade under his own name provided that his trade was lawful & not calculated to deceive —Held: the phrases "Lyons Tea" & "Lyons Cocoa" had come to mean the goods of pltfs., the quarter-pound packets of tea, sold by pltfs. & deft. respectively, were exceedingly alike, the phrase "Brighton depot" was misleading, deft. had intended to deceive & had deceived the public into buying his goods as & for pltfs.' goods. An injunction was granted, together with five pounds damages & costs.—LYONS (J.) & CO., LTD. v. LYONS (J.) (1931), 49 R. P. C. 188.

1168a. —— —— Custom of mining company.]—Held: (1) the valley containing the bed of minerals a part of which was owned by the Spanish Co. had become known as the Tigon Basin, & therefore the word "Tigon" had acquired a geographical significance; (2) having regard to such geographical significance & the custom of mining companies operating in the same area to adopt a name by reference to the geographical name of that area, coupled with the name of a point of the compass, the use by deft. co. of the word "Tigon" was not calculated to deceive or cause confusion in the minds of the public; (3) as pltf. co. themselves had marketed neither sulphur nor any other product under the name "Tigon," there was nothing which, by the use of the word "Tigon," deft. co. could sell or pass off as or for the product or goods of pltf. co. The action was dismissed with costs, & pltf. co. having been granted an interlocutory injunction on motion with the usual undertaking, an inquiry as to damages was ordered on the application of deft. co., the costs of that inquiry being reserved.—TIGON MINING & FINANCE CORPN., LTD. v. SOUTH TIGON MINING CO., LTD. Deft. co. was incorporated in Nov. 1928, with a nominal capital of £1,000 for the purpose of carrying on the business of a high-class dispensing chemist in the neighbourhood of Barons Court, London, & had one shop in that district. Deft., I. J. Eppel, took medical degrees & was a qualified chemist in Dublin in 1912, & carried on there the business of a chemist's shop until 1923. Deft., I. J. The storage batteries were imported & sold as Edison storage batteries by deft. Monnot & later by defts. Edison Accumulators, Ltd., who did so in accordance with the terms of various agreements made between them & pltfs. In 1929, Edison Accumulators, Ltd., changed its name to Britannia Batteries, Ltd., a new co. was formed by Monnot under the name Edison Accumulators, Ltd., & the two cos. commenced to manufacture & sell in England storage batteries made by them under the name Edison. Pltfs. commenced an action to restrain defts. from passing off their batteries as those of pltfs. & from using the expression "Edison Accumulators" as part of their name. Defts. admitted that they had sold storage batteries not of pltfs.' manufacture as Edison batteries, but alleged that the name Edison was not distinctive of pltfs.' goods, but was descriptive of all types of nickel alkaline batteries, & particularly those made in accordance with certain letters patent, & that they were entitled to continue to describe the goods sold by them as Edison storage batteries:—Held: the words "Edison accumulators" & "Edison storage batteries" were at the date of the writ distinctive of pltf.'s goods, & that defts. intended to pass off goods made by them as those of pltfs. Injunctions were granted restraining defts. from passing off & from using the expression "Edison Accumulators" as part of their name, with costs. His cards were a light green in colour with the names of the dogs running printed & a selection of dogs to win made under the pseudonym "Stirling." These cards became well known to the public as Stirling green cards. Deft. Freeman also sold outside racing cards which were first a buff colour but subsequently were coloured light green. He then registered under Business Names Act, 1916 (c. 58), the business name of Stirling as being the proprietor & publisher of Stirling race cards. Shortly afterwards he incorporated deft. co. which he called Stirling Press, Ltd., & his race cards had printed on them "published by Stirling Press. Ltd." On the evidence the ct. was satisfied that some of the sellers of deft.'s cards sold them as Stirling cards:—Held: there had been a deliberate attempt to sell defts.' cards as pltf.'s cards. In 1931 pltfs., who were the registered proprietors of the mark, brought an action against Letrik, Ltd., for infringement of the mark & passing off by the use upon or in connection with electrical hair combs of the word "Letrik." Pltfs. manufactured & sold electrical goods & accessories, & they alleged that they had manufactured & sold under their trade mark "Lektrik" large quantities of electrical apparatus & accessories for use in connection with electrical hair wavers, hair dryers, & other hairdressing appliances. Defts. denied that the goods in respect of which pltfs.' mark was registered included electrical hair combs, & they further denied that pltfs. had manufactured & sold electrical apparatus for use in connection with hairdressing appliances as alleged, save in so far as pltfs. might have sold the usual switches, plugs, & sockets necessary in any electrical installation, & defts. denied that the mark "Lektrik" was distinctive of pltfs. in connection with hairdressing appliances. Defts. moved to rectify the register by excluding from the specifications of goods, in respect of which the marks in class 50 & another class were registered, electrical hair combs & goods of a like description, on the ground of non-user of the marks in connection with such goods:—Held: pltfs. had never manufactured combs, & the user of their mark had been on & in connection with goods of a wholly different character; the trade in electric light & heat accessories was distinct from the trade in combs & toilet articles, & the use of defts.' mark could not legitimately be said to constitute an infringement of pltfs.' registered mark, or to be calculated to induce the belief that defts.' combs were of pltfs.' manufacture or merchandise. The action was dismissed with costs & an order to rectify the register was made, as to the trade mark registered in class 50, in the terms of the notice of motion.—LUNDBERG (A. 1266a. "Navy-Spot"—For "Blue-Spot."]—Pltf. co., who were manufacturers of wireless apparatus, & had sold large quantities of loudspeaker units under the mark "Blue-Spot" & in cartons with a distinctive get-up, claimed an injunction to restrain defts. from passing off loudspeaker units by the use upon or in connection therewith of the word "Navy-Spot" or by using a similar get-up. The form & appearance of the two loudspeaker units were almost identical. Defts. admitted that the word "Blue-Spot" was distinctive of pltfs., but they alleged that their units were always sold in their cartons, which were different from pltfs.' The trial of the action was not defended:—Held: defts.' loudspeaker units as sold were calculated to deceive & to be passed off as pltfs.'. An injunction was granted & an inquiry as to damages was ordered, & an order as to delivery up of defts.' cartons & all parts of the units bearing the word "Navy-Spot" was made.—IDEAL WERKE A. 1350b. ——.]—Pltf. co. claimed an injunction to restrain deft. co. passing off emollient tablets as & for pltf. co.'s goods. In 1916 the trade mark "Snowfire" was registered in class 48 of which pltf. co. was the registered owner. The trade mark had been exclusively advertised & used in connection with an emollient preparation to be used for chapped hands & cracked lips. On one side of the carton containing the preparation was the word "Snowfire" in black on a red sky with snow mountains against a black background representing a dark sky & a brazier with a bright red flame & the words "Chapped Hands." On the other side were snow mountains against a black sky, the words "Snowfire," "Cracked Lips," & "Chapped Hands." Deft. co.'s carton showed on one side snow mountains with "Sunshine Snow" written below in red & a red sun with yellow rays, & on the other side the words "Sunshine Snow" were put into the sky instead of being placed down below & the sun was setting in a lower position. Deft. co. alleged that the features of which pltf. co. claimed a monopoly & the manner of the packing were common to the trade, & that the get-up was not calculated to deceive:—Held: the manner in which the product was packed & the shape & colour of the cartons was common to the trade, & pltf. co. had established no monopoly in regard to them; the distinctive feature of pltf. co.'s carton was the combination of snow mountains with the bright flame from the brazier forming a representation of the trade mark "Snowfire," but deft. co.'s get-up showed snow & the sun having reference to the name "Sunshine Snow" & there was nothing in the package or the get-up of deft. co.'s goods which so nearly represented pltf. co.'s goods in any distinctive feature as to be calculated to deceive; & there had been no infringement of pltf.'s trade mark. 1427a. —— ——.]—Pltfs. were manufacturers of a sweetmeat in the form of a transparent peppermint cube. They were the owners of a trade mark consisting of the word Glacier registered in class 42. Their sweetmeat had the word Fox stamped upon its base. Pltfs. had a substantial trade & their goods were very well known to the public. Deft. owned a number of retail shops in Leicester. He sold various kinds of sweetmeats, including one in the form of a transparent peppermint cube. Pltfs. alleged that sweetmeats of this last kind had been sold by deft.'s shop assistants in response to requests by customers for Glacier mints. Five instances of passing off were alleged. In each case the sale complained of was alleged to have been in response to an oral trap order given by a person on behalf of pltfs. Pltfs. commenced an action to restrain passing off sweetmeats not of pltfs.' manufacture as & for pltfs.' Glacier Mints. Deft. denied the alleged passing off. The action subsequently came on for trial:—Held: in each of the alleged cases of passing off it was conceivable that deft.'s shop assistant did not hear, or did not properly hear, the word Glacier; the word might have been mistaken for a request for "glassy" sweets—for in Leicester sweetmeats of this character were often spoken of as "glassy" mints; & pltfs.' evidence was not sufficient to discharge the heavy onus placed upon them in an allegation of passing off. The action was dismissed with costs.—FOX'S GLACIER MINTS, LTD. v. JOBLINGS (1932), 49 R. P. C. 352.

Deft., who owned a garage, sold there petrol & lubricating oil, but, if asked for Wakefield Castrol XL oil, said he did not stock it. His house was a mile & a half away & he got his wife to sell the very small amount of petrol & oil which might be asked for there. He took to the house two empty tins marked Wakefield Castrol XL oil, from one of which he had blacked out the words "Wakefield Castrol." Pltfs., to protect their trade, sent out employees to discover any dishonesty by the selling as their Wakefield Castrol XL oil of other XL oil. Two of their employees called at deft.'s house, & after asking for & buying some petrol alleged that they asked for two pints of Castrol XL oil. Defts.' daughter, 14 years old, attended to customers

The concentrate was used by the bottlers, in accordance with a formula supplied by applt., in the preparation of a beverage called "Orange Crush," the concentrate forming less than 1 per cent. of the finished article. The beverage was sold by the bottlers within their respective areas to their customers. Applt. sued resp. for passing off under the name of "Orange Crush" a beverage not manufactured or sold by the applt. as a beverage manufactured or sold by it:—Held: applt. had no legal interest in the business said to be injured by resp.'s representations; there was no connection between the commodity sold to the public as "Orange Crush," & applt.'s business except that applt. supplied one of the ingredients contained in the finished article, & this of itself was not sufficient to identify the beverage sold to the public with the business of applt. so as to justify the assertion that the commodity sold to the public was the goods of applt.—ORANGE CRUSH (AUSTRALIA), LTD. v. GARTRELL (1928), 41 C. & poured out of the tin on which the words "Wakefield Castrol" were blacked out a pint. The supply then gave out & she asked in the house whether there was any more XL oil & was told there was not. The oil the daughter poured out was not Castrol XL oil, but XL oil of another name. The employees asked her to give a receipt & she made out one for one pint of oil 9*d*. The price 9*d*. was substantially less than the price at which Wakefield Castrol XL oil was sold. She was then told she had not given a receipt for Castrol & was asked to put the word Castrol on the receipt. She added the words "Castrol XL." Pltfs. claimed an injunction against deft., his servants, & agents:—Held: it was necessary in trap order cases for a pltf. to prove beyond peradventure his case, but that had not here been done, as there was no suggestion that deft. had ever traded dishonestly at his garage & no proof that the daughter acted dishonestly: further, there was no evidence that a train was laid by deft. so as to enable an innocent agent to commit something which would amount to dishonest trading. Therefore no injunction could be granted against deft., & the action was dismissed with costs.—WAKEFIELD (C. C.) & CO., LTD. v. RUSSELL (1930), 47 R. P. C. 473.

Since 1917 magnetos had been imported into this country, manufactured by the American Corpn. & bearing the word "Bosch" as a part of the identifying marks. Pltfs. commenced an action against defts. to restrain them from passing off magnetos by using in connection with them the name "Bosch" & such marks as "Z.R.4.":—Held: there was no sufficient evidence that an American Bosch magneto could not properly be described as a Bosch magneto without other distinguishing words, & accordingly the word "Bosch" when applied to magnetos was not distinctive of pltfs.; & deft. was not intending to pass off magnetos not manufactured by pltfs. as manufactured by them.—ROBERT BOSCH AKTIENGESELLSCHAFT v. COOK (R. Pltfs. were the registered proprietors of a Trade Mark No. 321,009 registered in 1910 consisting of the words Trinity Street, Street being in small letters, above a triangle within which was a monogram, & the word "Brand" below the triangle. On their hosiery, however, they had used a mark consisting of the words "Trinity Street Brand," above "All Pure Wool made in England," the word "Trinity" being in large letters & the word "Street" in small letters, & against those words was "Registered 321,009." Defts.' hosiery was dyed by a firm, whose works were in Trinity Lane, Hinckley, & they put on a mark consisting of the words "Trinity Dye & Finish," above a shield containing a representation of the arms of the Borough of Hinckley:—Held: pltfs., having made a misrepresentation in the mark which they had used that it was a registered trade mark, had disentitled themselves to relief & that the motion must be refused. E., who resold a number of such wipers to defts. The Marble Arch Motor Supplies, Ltd., who resold to the public. Pltfs. instituted an action against defts., claiming an injunction to restrain passing off, an inquiry as to damages, & an order for delivery up:—Held: the wipers complained of had been manufactured & sold to deft. E. by the C. Applts. had adopted a ticket with a different picture, but also including a lotus flower, & a combination of three marks similar in general appearance to resps.' three marks, but with a rose instead of a lotus flower. The ct. at Allahabad found that applts. had adopted these marks fraudulently, & that they were calculated to lead to passing off, & granted an injunction & damages. No case of actual deception was proved. The estimate of damages in particulars to the plaint which was verified by affidavit was Rs.25,000. The ct. awarded damages on the following basis: applts. were proved to have sold cloth bearing the marks complained of to the value of Rs.3,200,000; the ct. assumed that, if offered without these marks, only 40 per cent. of this quantity would have been sold, & gave as damages 9 per cent. as profit on the remaining 60 per cent., i.e. Rs.172,800. Applts. appealed:—Held: the injunction was rightly granted, but the damages must be calculated by estimating the trade lost to resps. by reason of the use of applts.' marks. & the damages should be reduced to Rs.67,000.—JUGGI LAL-KAMLAPAT & JUGGILAL-KAMLAPAT MILLS OF CAWNPORE v. SWADESHI CO., LTD. The roads in the garden city were vested in the pltfs. & were to remain so vested until made up & taken over by the highway authority. Deft. gave notice that he intended to hold an open air meeting in the neighbourhood of a church on pltfs.' property at the junction of two roads. Bottles marked with name of plaintiff—Refilled by defendant.]—Applts., who were manufacturers of aerated water, marked their name on the bottles & claimed an exclusive right of property in them. Resp. was a grocer who had no contractual relationship with applts., & he had in his shop a soda fountain by means of which he supplied customers with aerated beverages for consumption off the premises. The customers had to bring a bottle or other receptacle, & in practice resp. filled it without examination & without inquiring into the customer's right to use it. Occasionally applts.' bottles were used in this way. In an action by applts. against resp. to restrain him from receiving from customers bottles marked with applts.' name for the purpose of filling them with beverages :—Held : there was no duty on resp. to ascertain which bottles were applts.' property, & the action failed.

185a. —— Delivery to bailee.]—In the end of 1924 the Metropolitan Police found at the house of pltf. & took into their possession a quantity of goods including certain cloth. Pltf. was brought before the police ct. on charges of receiving, & some of the evidence there given tended to show, but did not prove, the identity of the cloth which had been stolen from a firm of carriers. Pltf. was committed for trial at the London sessions on indictments charging him with having received certain of the goods other than the cloth knowing them to have been stolen. & on an indictment charging him with a similar offence in respect of the cloth, & in Feb. 1925, he was convicted on the first-mentioned indictments & sentenced to five years' penal servitude. He was never tried on the indictment relating to the cloth, but it was allowed to remain upon the record. On Apr. 2, 1925, pltf. not having as yet made any credible claim to the cloth, the Receiver for the Metropolitan Police District handed handed it over to the firm of carriers, who claimed it, taking from them a written indemnity. On Jan. 16, 1931, pltf., having less than six months before made an unsuccessful demand for the cloth as his property, brought an action against the Receiver & the firm of carriers claiming damages for detinue & conversion of the cloth. The first-named deft. relied, among other defences, upon the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61). The jury, having heard the evidence, found that it did not establish the identity of the cloth with that stolen from the carriers, & they returned a verdict for pltf. against both defts. :—Held : the first deft. in handing over the cloth to the second defts. in Apr. 1925, had acted in "intended execution" of a "public duty" within Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61), s. 1, & as the action in respect of the act of conversion so effected had not been commenced within six months after that act, it was not maintainable in respect thereof. Pltf. could not elect to rely only on his claim in detinue, so as to make the time run from his demand & to bring the date of the action within six months after the cause of action. Therefore, judgment should be entered for the first deft. against pltf., & for pltf. against the second defts.—BETTS v. METROPOLITAN POLICE DISTRICT RECEIVER & CARTER PATERSON & Co., LTD., [1932] 2 K. P. who had retained possession of the S. car, sold it on behalf of pltf. co. to C. on hire purchase. C. made default under his hire purchase agreement, & P., without authority from pltf. co., seized the car, & sold it to deft. co. who in turn sold it to W. Deft. co. never had actual possession of the car. Before the sale to W. was completed pltf. co. demanded the car, but the deft. co. refused to deliver it up & completed its purchase from P. & its sale to W. P. delivered the car to W. Pltf. co. then sued for conversion of the car & the jury found a verdict in its favour :—Held : there was sufficient evidence of ownership in pltf. co. & of possession of the car by deft. co. to justify the finding of the jury; but even if deft. co. had not been in physical possession of the car, its denial of pltf. co.'s right amounted to a conversion in the circumstances.—MOTOR DEALERS CREDIT CORPN., LTD. v. OVERLAND (SYDNEY), LTD. 664a. —— ——.]—In 1925, a certain piece of land, known as B. Lodge, was sold to J. & M. In the conveyance a quantity of timber trees, saplings, etc., was excepted out of the sale by the vendors, who reserved to themselves the right to cut & remove them before Oct. 11, 1927. In 1926, pltf. purchased the timber trees, etc., & proceeded to cut & remove them. A large amount of the cut timber was, however, left on the land after Oct. 11, 1927, & in these circumstances J. & M. stated that pltf. had lost his title thereto & forfeited his right to remove it, & they claimed it as their property. As the result of an action in 1930 against J. & M. it was held that the property in the timber remained in pltf. after Oct. 11, 1927, & a certain sum by way of damages for conversion against J. & M. was at the instance of the judge agreed between all parties to the proceedings & awarded pltf. In the meanwhile J. & M. purported to sell the cut timber to the present defts. Pltf., who had taken no steps to enforce the order which he had obtained against J. & M., gave notice on June 10, 1930, to defts. that the sale by J. & M. to them was ineffective, as J. & M. had no title to the timber, & requesting the return of the timber to him. Defts. having refused & repudiated liability, pltf. commenced an action, & by his statement of claim asked for a sum by way of damages for conversion; the conversion relied on being the refusal by deft. co. to return the timber in compliance with the notice of June 10, 1930 :—Held : whether a judgment in trover was in the alternative form or was merely one for the value of the goods or for damages for their conversion, it did not by itself & apart from special circumstances divest the owner of the property of his title thereto unless & until the judgment was fully satisfied.—ELLIS v. STENNING (JOHN) & SON, [1932] 2 Ch. 81; 101 L. 493a. —— After variation of original settlement.]—Testator bequeathed his residuary estate upon trust for his children in equal shares & declared that as to the share of his son E. a moiety thereof should be held upon trust to pay & make over the same to the trustees of a settlement dated Sept. 23, 1916, to be held by them upon the trusts of such settlement, so far as the same should be then applicable & capable of taking effect. By the settlement so referred to, which was made after the marriage of E. with his wife G., a certain fund was vested in the trustees thereof under which E. took the first life interest & upon his death G. took an interest during her widowhood with remainders over upon trusts for E.'s children by his wife G. or any future wife. Testator died in 1917, & in 1928 the marriage was upon G.'s petition dissolved, & an order was made under which the trusts of the settlement were varied ; the effect of this variation being to deprive E. of any interest under the original trusts thereof, to give G. an immediate life interest, & to vest the settlement fund after her death in P., the only child of her marriage with E.:—Held : upon the proper construction of testator's will, the share of E. in his father's residuary estate ought to be held upon the trusts of the settlement as originally framed without regard to the order varying those trusts.—Re GOOCH, GOOCH v. GOOCH, [1929] 1 Ch. 740 ; 98 L. Many years after B.'s death his customary heir C., since deceased, was admitted to two plots, but no one was admitted to the third; so that on Dec. 31, 1925, the best right to admittance was in the customary heirs of C. & B. On the same date the equitable title to the land stood vested in T. & X. as joint tenants in fee, subject to the equitable rentcharge then vested in Y., subject to proof of his title. 1499a. Acquisition from married woman trustee—In order to defeat judgment.]—Where the ct. in giving judgment against a married woman, who is a defaulting trustee, orders that the judgment be satisfied out of her separate estate, & execution proves useless, it is not open to pltf., in a new action, to obtain against her judgment in a different form for payment of the moneys into court. As against her the matter is res judicata. But if it appear that she has transferred the moneys to a person with knowledge of the proceedings against her, action will lie against the transferee as constructive trustee. Pltf. obtained against the first deft., a married woman, judgment for payment out of her separate estate of the sum in dispute & costs. Evidence disclosed that the first deft. had parted with the whole of the sum, having transferred most of it to her sister, the second deft., who was not a party to the proceedings but knew of them at the time. Execution in respect of the judgment thus proving useless, pltf. now brought this action, alleging that the first deft. had paid the money to the second deft. in order to defeat any judgment for the pltf., & that the second deft. received the money as constructive trustee :—Held : judgment could be given against the second deft., who had received the moneys as constructive trustee.—GREEN v. WEATHERILL, [1929] 2 Ch. 213; 98 L. Two of these trustees died prior to 1907, & the third, E., being desirous of retiring from the trust, C. & W. were in that year appointed new trustees. This appointment was subsequently discovered to be invalid. The legal estate was never divested from E., who died intestate in the U.S. in 1915, & no representation had been raised to his estate. 2033a. —— Misapplication of trust funds—Payment to wrong person.]—The indemnity conferred on trustees by Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 30 (1), does not apply where a trustee, even though as the result of an honest mistake, has misapplied trust funds by paying them to the wrong person.

The selling agents of a colliery co., which had sold its undertaking & was being voluntarily wound up, claimed £19,088 damages for alleged breach by the co. of the agency agreements. There had in fact, as the ct. held, been no breach of the agreements. The liquidator consulted the solrs. of a large shareholder, who was opposed to the claim, & they said they had advised their client that there was a valid claim but that the amount of damages was uncertain. Without taking further advice or obtaining the opinion of the ct., a course the liquidator had recognised to be open to him, the liquidator settled the claim for £15,000. A summons was taken out by a contributory to obtain repayment of this sum to the co., on the ground that the liquidator had been guilty of misfeasance, & the liquidator, whose bona fides was not in question, claimed the benefit of the indemnity given to trustees by Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 30:—Held: without deciding whether the liquidator was a trustee within the meaning of the Act, even if he were: (1) he was not entitled to indemnity under sect. 30 (1), because that sub-sect. does not extend to a case where a trustee had misapplied trust funds coming to his hands; (2) he was not, on the facts, entitled to relief under sect. 61.

Even if a liquidator is a trustee within Trustee Act, 1925, he is, as a paid trustee, disentitled to relief under sect. 61 (per CUR.). —Re WINDSOR STEAM COAL CO. (1901), LTD., [1929] 1 Ch. 151; 98 L. J. Ch. 147; 140 L. T. 80, C. A.

By a codicil power was conferred upon the trustees after the expiration of five years from testator's death to sell his residuary estate or any part thereof by public auction but not by private contract. Upon a summons raising questions, whether the trustees or the persons entitled to the surplus income until cesser of the annuities were the proper persons in whom the land ought to be vested by the exor.; &, if the trustees were the proper persons, whether the annuitants were persons whose wishes ought to be given effect to by the trustees for sale:—Held: the annuitants were persons beneficially interested in possession within Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 26 (3), whose wishes should be consulted by the trustees for sale.—Re HOUSE, WESTMINSTER BANK v. EVERETT, [1929] 2 Ch. 166; 98 L. The settlement contained various powers to the trustees appropriate to the management of real estate, but no power to postpone conversion. In 1906 a partition of the entirety of the estate was effected, & certain hereditaments appropriated & conveyed to the trustees in satisfaction of the undivided share settled. 568a. —— ——.]—The construction by the Canvey Island Comrs. of certain works, an embarkment, cartway & ditch, along a strip of land adjoining the Thames on the south of the island, for the purpose of coast preservation, did not operate to vest the soil of that strip in the Comrs. as owners, but the ownership remained in those persons whose lands bordered on the river, & who, provided they do no damage to the works of the Comrs., are entitled to free access thereto from the river. The fact that those owners, or their predecessors in title, were compensated at the time of the erection of the works to the extent of the full value of the lands affected does not imply that the fee simple of the lands was purchased by the Comrs., nor can such an inference be drawn from the terms of the Canvey Island Acts, 1792 & 1883. The ownership acquired by the Comrs. under those Acts is similar to that acquired by a local authority laying sewers in a street, namely, an ownership in the works themselves & just so much of the soil upon which the works are constructed as will enable them to be erected & maintained.—PORT OF LONDON AUTHORITY v. CANVEY ISLAND COMRS. & CANVEY ISLAND URBAN COUNCIL, [1932] 1 Ch. 446; 101 L. 821a. —— Removal of goods purchased—Licence.] —Pltf. railway co. were the owners of two docks & the quays thereof at Kingston-upon-Hull. These docks were used extensively by fishing vessels. The catches were landed on the quays & there sold by " Dutch auction." The purchasers carted away their purchases to various points on the quay where they had offices rented from the railway co. Here the fish was sorted & packed for transport. The railway co. provided facilities for the transport of fish by rail, but the practice had grown up for the merchants to provide mechanical road transport. While the railway co. had no objection to road transport for reasonably short distances, they had serious objection to that form of transport for long distances ; not only on account of the loss of revenue, but also on account of the serious congestion of the vehicles at the docks, which interfered also with the control of the railway-wagons on the quay sidings. They therefore sought to exclude the long-distance road transport by a system of licensing. Some merchants accepted the conditions ; defts., among others, did not. Pltf. railway co. brought the present action against defts. to establish their position, & asked for a declaration that they were entitled to refuse admission of road transport to the docks except under licence & subject to conditions, & also asked for an injunction against the merchants, giving effect to the declaration. Defts. contested this right & claimed that they were entitled to bring their own vehicles & remove their fish irrespective of the destination ; they based their contention mainly on their rights at common law & the provisions of the Hull Docks Act, 1861 :—Held : (1) the common law right of access to the docks & quays had gone except so far as preserved by the North-Eastern Railway (Hull Docks) Act, 1883, or subsequent statutes. The rights of the parties were, therefore, governed by the Act of 1883. Under the Act the railway co. were not bound to allow fish sales to take place on the quays in question, & had power to exclude defts. in the first instance. The railway co., however, had given a licence to defts. to attend the fish sales & become owners of goods on the quay, & defts. thus acquired a statutory right to remove them, & by inevitable implication they also had the 821b. —— —— ——.]—Pltfs. in this action asked for a declaration that they were entitled to have access to the harbour at Lowestoft & to bring their own motor-lorries without licence or conditions on to the quays. The railway co. were the owners of the harbour & docks undertakings. Here the trawlers discharged their catches, which were sold by auction, on the quay. The buyers were either local merchants or persons who came from a distance. The practice had grown up for purchasers to bring heavy motor vehicles to transport their goods to great distances, & the railway co. sought to limit this practice by a system of licensing vehicles using the harbour & excluding vehicles not so licensed. Pltfs. based their claim on their common law right of access to the dock & to attend the fish market which they alleged was established there:—Held: (1) at common law fish taken by English sea-fishing boats (being non-customable) could be landed anywhere, & deft. railway co. had no monopoly in this respect regarding their own quays; but, being owners of the quays, they had all the common law rights of an owner of property in so far as those rights had not been restricted by statute, & had therefore the right to exclude from the quays persons who had no lawful occasion to be there; (2) there was nothing in the Harbour Docks & Piers Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 27), s. 33, which compelled deft. co. to allow fish to be sold or cleaned or packed on the quays, nor was any duty imposed on the co. by the statutes relating to their undertaking to allow a fish market to be held on its quays. The mere fact that the Legislature contemplated the continuance of fish sales by conferring powers to regulate those sales by by-laws did not create an obligation to hold those sales; (3) as pltfs. were not assisted by common law or statute, they could only rely on their contractual relationship with the railway co., & while their contracts, if any, were in force they were entitled to use vehicles free from the conditions of the licence sought to be imposed. Failing such contractual relationship they were bound by the conditions imposed by the railway co. on which they were allowed access to the quays.—BRITISH TRAWLERS' FEDERATION v. LONDON & NORTH-EASTERN RY. Therefore, where testator, who died in 1912, by his will settled certain chattels including three family portraits to be held upon trusts which should as nearly as the rules of law & equity permitted correspond with the limitations of real estate in tail, & set out such limitations at length, but settled no real estate upon the same limitations :—Held : testator had attempted to create an entailed interest in the chattels but had not succeeded, & therefore the trustees of his will had no power to sell them under sect. 130 (5). Some time prior to his death he delivered to his law agents, who had custody of his trust-disposition & settlement, a sealed envelope bearing the following holograph endorsation: "To be placed with my Last Will & Testament—T. R." After his death the envelope was found to contain three documents of a testamentary character, all holograph of the testator. Only one was signed. One of the unsigned documents began in these terms: "I T. R. desire to make the following alterations & additions to my last Will & Testament namely." Certain directions followed, & the document concluded with these words: "Written by my own hand at L. A. the 17th day of October 1921":—Held: the trustees were bound to give effect to the directions contained in the unsigned document, on the ground that the facts connected with the document, taken in conjunction with the directions in the trust-disposition & settlement, showed that testator intended it to be read along with his formal settlement, of which he had effectually made it a part.—RONALDS' TRUSTEES v. LYLE, [1929] S. PART VII.

r i. ——— ———.]—Sect. 14a of Wills Act Amendment Act, 1924, fixes a time as to when the validity of a will of the class referred to therein is determined, viz., when it was made. Therefore, if a British subject, when outside the province, makes a will which meets the requirements of said sect., its validity is not destroyed by the fact that testator afterwards ceases to be a British subject. Where a person while domiciled in British Columbia & owning realty therein makes a will valid as to realty in that province, & he acquires a foreign domicile & makes a holograph will, invalid as to realty in British Columbia, revoking all previous wills & disposing of both realty & personalty, & dies domiciled in said foreign country, the British Columbia will remains effective as to the British Columbia realty.—Re COLVILLE ESTATE, [1931] 3 W. In 1921 testatrix executed a third codicil, which referred only to the will & codicil of 1893, altered some of the provisions of the will & otherwise confirmed it :—Held : the effect of the codicil of 1921 was to revoke both the will of 1907 & the codicil of 1911, & to revive the will & codicil of 1893. —Re BAKER, BAKER v. BAKER, [1929] 1 Ch. 668 ; 98 L. 1657a. —— ——.]—The question whether a will has been revoked by a subsequent instrument depends entirely upon the intention of the testator as expressed in that instrument. The rule laid down in Baker v. Story, No. 1655, & earlier cases that a second will will revoke an earlier one though it is ineffective to confer any gift, if such failure is due to the incapacity of the devisee or legatee & not to any infirmity in the will itself, is no longer acceptable since the decision in Ward v. Van der Loeff, No. 1662.

Testatrix by a will made in 1914 gave her residuary estate upon trust to pay an annuity to her son H., & subject thereto for her grandchildren who should attain twenty-one. In 1921 she executed a document which she described as her last will, by which she gave the whole of her estate to H. absolutely, but it contained no clause revoking former wills. The later will was ineffective, though admitted to probate, owing to the wife of H. having attested it :—Held : the earlier will was restored, there being no intention shown by testatrix in the later one to revoke it.—Re ROBINSON, LAMB v. ROBINSON, [1930] 2 Ch. 332 ; 99 L. After a further bequest of jewellery, plate & portraits so as to devolve as heirlooms with the said mansion house so far as the rules of law would permit by (sic) the person or persons for the time being entitled to the possession or receipt of the rents of the same mansion house, testator thereby further gave, appointed, devised & bequeathed all the rest & residue of his real & personal estate unto & to the use of his trustees to such uses, upon such trusts, & for such ends intents & purposes as the Wick estate might under the trusts of his will for the time being be held so far as the rules of law would permit. By a codicil dated August 4, 1927, after reciting that he was desirous of giving to his stepdaughter C. (pltf.) a residence in England, testator appointed, devised & bequeathed to her for her life his said house Wick Episcopi & all the furniture, books, linen, plate & effects therein or belonging thereto & also the land he occupied therewith. After testator's death in 1928 pltf. C. took out an originating summons to determine (inter alia) the question whether pltf. was entitled for her life to the whole or any & if so what part of the rents, profits & income arising out of the residuary real & personal estate of the testator or of the income of the proceeds of sale thereof, or whether deft. W. was entitled during her life to the said rents, profits & income or to some & what part thereof, or to whom the same were payable :—Held : testator intended by the codicil only to give certain defined property to pltf. for her life for the definite purpose, namely, the provision of a house in England, mentioned in the codicil & that the codicil could only be read as interpolating into the will an interest in favour of pltf. in respect of the property specifically mentioned in the codicil ; & therefore deft. W. was entitled during her life to the rents profits & income of testator's residuary real & personal estate, & the proceeds of sale thereof. Further, the jewellery, plate, etc., included in the gift of heirlooms contained in testator's mansion house at the date of his death, were in the events that had happened, to be enjoyed by deft. 2732a. —— ——.]—Testator, by his will, devised land to P. subject to the payment of certain annuities, of road-making charges for which testator was liable, & of estate & other death duties, & subject also to the proviso that if within twenty years of testator's death P. should desire to sell the land, he was to give the Governors of the N. Grammar School the option of purchasing the land at the price of £300 an acre, such offer to be subject to the payment by the Governors of the said annuities & road charges, & acceptance to be notified within three months. The land, of about 22 acres in area, was in fact worth £670 an acre at the date of testator's death. In accordance with the condition P. offered it to the School Governors at £300 an acre, & the offer was duly accepted & the land sold & conveyed to the Governors for £6,688. The value of the land for the purposes of death duties was assessed at £14,720. On a summons being taken out to determine whether the Governors were liable to pay a rateable proportion of the estate & succession duties levied upon the value of the property :—Held : the condition being one in restraint of alienation except to a particular purchaser was void for repugnancy, & not binding upon the devisee. One of the children in 1927 joined a religious society which had a rule providing that the society should receive the income of the property of members, though every member retained a right to dispose of the capital. The child in question had not quitted or renounced the society within six months from the testator's death :—Held : the child's share of the residue was not forfeited.—Re BELL, BELL v. AGNEW (1931), 47 T. In 1917, when the will was made, applt. was only twelve years of age, & testator knew that applt.'s mother was a Roman Catholic, & that he was being brought up in that religion. According to the law of Germany, where applt. & his parents were domiciled, applt. could not effectively change his religion without their consent until he was twenty-one years of age. On reaching that age he proved that he had become of the Lutheran religion, & he had since remained so:—Held: the intention of testator was that applt. should have an opportunity of choosing his religion, & as he was entitled in law to postpone his choice until he was twenty-one, but not beyond, he was entitled to receive the annuity, also arrears from the date of testator's death, as until he reached twenty-one his enjoyment of the annuity was free from condition.—PATTON (W. 2961b. — —.]—Testatrix, who died in 1915, bequeathed a sum of money to trustees to accumulate the income until her nephew should attain the age of 24 years & afterwards to pay him the income, provided that he should not be a Roman Catholic at her death, or, if he was, that he should cease to be one within 12 months thereafter, the payments to continue until he should become a Roman Catholic, with a gift over if the gift failed. At the death of testatrix the nephew was a child of about nine years of age. He was the son of a Roman Catholic & was being brought up in that faith. In 1917 NEVILLE, J., decided (No. 2961) that within the meaning of the will the child was not a Roman Catholic at the death of testatrix & that he was to have an opportunity of making a choice in the matter when he attained 21 years of age. In 1931, when the legatee was 24 years of age & had never wavered in his adherence to the Roman Catholic Church, the trustees applied for a decision of the question whether the gift over had taken effect:—Held: although the proviso as to the child's ceasing to be a Roman Catholic within 12 months was void, yet, as the will provided that even after the age of 24 years the legatee was to benefit only until he became a Roman Catholic, & as this provision included his being a Roman Catholic at that age, the gift over took effect.—Re MAY, EGGAR v. MAY, [1932] 1 Ch. 99; 101 L. Testatrix left no issue of her own, but at her death there were six children of her husband's first marriage living:—Held: there was no implication of a gift over to those children on failure of the gift to the husband by lapse in any event, & therefore the residuary estate of testatrix was undisposed of & passed to her next of kin.—Re GRAHAM, GRAHAM v. GRAHAM, [1929] 2 Ch. 127; 98 L. 4921a. Money invested in Swansea Harbour Trust —Statutory substitution of Great Western Railway Stock.]—The undertaking of the Swansea Harbour Trustees was vested in the Great Western Railway Co. by the Great Western Railway (Swansea Harbour Vesting) Act, 1923, which provided that stock of the Great Western Railway should be issued to holders of stock of the trustees in substitution therefor. Sect. 12 of the Act provides: "Stock of the co. substituted by virtue of this Act for any stock of the Trustees . . . shall be held upon & subject to the same trusts liens charges powers & other legal or equitable rights privileges & restrictions as affected the stock . . . for which by virtue of this Act the stock of the co. is substituted . . . & any reference in any Act of Parliament deed will codicil book document instrument or writing to any such stock . . . shall be deemed to be a reference to the stock of the co. . . . by virtue of this Act substituted therefor":—Held: the latter part of the sect. was not restricted in meaning by regard to the first part, & it applied to any reference to stock of the trustees in any "document instrument or writing" in existence when the Act of 1923 came into force, even though the "document instrument or writing" was not then effective to create trusts liens charges powers or other legal or equitable rights privileges or restrictions.

By his will made in 1913 testator bequeathed "the sums of £3,500 & all other moneys that I may at my death possess invested in the Swansea Harbour Trust" upon certain trusts. In 1923 testator received, pursuant to the Act of 1923, £2,800 5 per cent. consolidated preference stock of the Great Western Railway Company in substitution for his holding of £3,500 4 per cent. Swansea Harbour Stock, & continued to hold the Great Western Railway stock till his death:—Held: the reference in the will to the property bequeathed was a reference to stock of the Swansea Harbour trustees within the meaning of the Act; by virtue of the latter part of sect. 12 of the Act the bequest operated to pass the substituted

5332a. Manuscript letters.]—(1) Testator by his will made a settlement of his two mansion houses & then bequeathed "all the pictures prints statues sculptures articles of vertu books furniture & plate in my mansion houses . . . unto my trustees upon trust to allow the same, hereinafter called 'the said heirlooms,' to be used & enjoyed" as in the will mentioned. Included in testator's estate were 155 original manuscripts of the series of letters & papers known as the Paston letters. All the originals of the series had belonged to Sir John Fenn, who, towards the end of the eighteenth century, had had these 155 letters inlaid into sheets of paper, which he had then had bound in three volumes. Testator had acquired them so bound, & they were still so bound at the date of his death. On a summons on behalf of the tenant for life under the settlement asking whether the 155 letters were included in the chattels settled by the will to devolve as heirlooms or formed part of testator's residuary estate, &, if the answer to the first part of the question was in the affirmative, that the tenant for life might be authorised to sell them:—Held: the three volumes containing the MSS. of the Paston letters passed under the will as heirlooms under the word "books."

(2) There must be many objects of antiquity or curiosity which are not, ordinarily speaking, articles of vertu. I have suggested two, a prehistoric axe-head & an Egyptian mummy. I do not think that anybody in ordinary parlance would describe either of those things as an article of vertu. For my part I think that an article of vertu must be in some sense a product of the fine arts; & the phrase connotes, if not artistic merit, a certain effort on the part of the person who originally produced it, in the direction of what he conceived to be the fine arts (MAUGHAM, J.). —Re TOMLINE'S WILL TRUSTS, PRETYMAN v. PRETYMAN, [1931] 1 Ch. 521, 526; 100 L. Therefore, the residuary property both real & personal passed by the gift either (a) on the ground that under Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), real & personal estate were now pari passu liable to the payment of debts, or (b) because when once it was clear that the word "monies," was not used in its strict sense the ct. could give effect to testator's manifest intention to include the whole of his property in the gift.—Re MELLOR, PORTER v. HINDSLEY, [1929] 1 Ch. 446 ; 98 L. 6527a. —— ——.] — The primary meaning of "shall die" in a will is "shall hereafter die." In the absence of some context to indicate a contrary intention it cannot be construed as equivalent to "shall have died" or "shall be dead," so as, in an original or substitutional gift to the issue of a child or other person who "shall die," to let in the issue of one who was already dead at the date of the will.

Testator by his will directed that after the death of his wife his trustees were to stand possessed of his residuary estate for all his children in equal shares "provided nevertheless in case any child of mine shall die in my lifetime leaving issue living at my death such issue shall stand in place of such deceased child, & shall take equally between them if more than one the share of my residuary estate which such deceased child of mine would have taken if he or she had survived me." One of testator's sons died three weeks before the date of the will, leaving one child, a daughter, surviving him, & these facts were known to testator when he made his will:—Held: there being no context in the will, such as a gift to children who "shall attain the age of twenty-one years," the word "shall" must be strictly construed as referring to the future only, & therefore the daughter of the deceased son was not entitled to any share in the residuary estate. —Re WALKER, WALKER v. WALKER, [1930] 1 Ch. 469; 99 L. By his trust-disposition & settlement, in which he stated that he had already by inter vivos deed made sufficient provision for his daughter, he directed his trustees, after payment of his debts, testamentary & funeral expenses, & certain legacies, to make over the "free residue" of his estate in equal shares to his wife & son. The son & daughter claimed & were paid their legitim, the son forfeiting, in terms of the will, its provisions in his favour. A question having arisen as to whether "free residue" fell to be ascertained before or after deduction of the legitim fund:—Held: "free residue" primarily meant residue after deduction (inter alia) of the legitim fund, & that there was nothing in the language of the trust-disposition & settlement to indicate that the testator had intended to give these words any other than their ordinary meaning.—SAMSON v. RAYNOR, [1928] S. 6304 l. Provision for conversion & distribution when all attain age.]—Testator devised & bequeathed his residuary estate upon trust to convert & to divide the same equally between such of his grandchildren as should attain the age of twenty-one years, excepting certain named grandchildren, & empowered the trustees to postpone conversion & distribution for such time as they in their absolute discretion might deem expedient & in the meantime to carry on testator's business. He then gave directions for the distribution of the income of the business during the period of its continuance. At the date of testator's death there were a number of grandchildren, of whom one had attained the age of twenty-one years. The trustees had postponed conversion for several years, & during that period other grandchildren were born:—Held: the "rule of convenience" laid down in Andrews v. Partington, No. 6266, had no application until conversion, inasmuch as (a) upon the true construction of the will there was no occasion for the operation of the rule until conversion had taken place, & (b) the will contained an expression of a contrary intention. Therefore, the class of grandchildren entitled to share in the residuary estate was not closed until the date of conversion.—PERMANENT TRUSTEE CO. OF NEW SOUTH WALES, LTD. v. R. (1929), 30 S. R. N. 6702 l. Reference in will to illegitimate child—As "niece."]—By his will testator, out of his residuary estate, gave a sum of money to "my niece J. M., daughter of my late sister Martha," & gave other sums to children of his other brothers & sisters including "my niece J. R., daughter of my late sister Margaret." He finally directed that the ultimate residue of his estate be held in trust for "the children of my brothers & sisters share & share alike." J. M. was the illegitimate & only daughter of the testator's sister Martha. J. R. was legitimate:—Held: J. M. was included in the trust for the children of the testator's brothers & sisters.—Re MITCHELL, BALLARAT TRUSTEES, EXORS. & AGENCY CO., LTD. v. NATIONAL TRUSTEES, EXORS. & AGENCY CO. trinsic evidence admissible to prove the contrary.—Testatrix, who died in 1928, by her will gave a bequest to "my nephew, Arthur Murphy." She had two legitimate nephews & one illegitimate nephew, all bearing that name. So far as concerned the legitimate nephews, it was impossible to determine which the testatrix meant:—Held: although, if there were only one legitimate Arthur Murphy & one illegitimate, the former would take, yet, as there was an ambiguity, evidence could be received to show who was the person really intended, & on this evidence the words meant the illegitimate nephew.—Re JACKSON, BEATTIE v. MURPHY (1932), 49 T. 6728a. "Grandchildren of any degree"—All lawful descendants except children.]—By his will testator disposed of two equal fourth parts of his residue, in the will called "the residuary trust fund," as therein mentioned, & directed his trustees, after the death of one of his daughters, whom he named, & her husband, & subject to or in default of any exercise of a general power of appointment by her, to hold another equal fourth part "in trust as to the capital & income for all my grandchildren who may be living at the time in equal shares." By the second of two codicils he directed that his trustees, at the death of the survivor of his son J. & J.'s wife, should divide the amount of the remaining fourth part "into as many parts as there may be grandchildren of any degree of mine then living, & give to each one a part, part & part alike." Testator had five children. One predeceased him without leaving issue her surviving. All of the remaining four married, three having issue of their marriages. J. predeceased his wife, there having been no issue of the marriage. At the date of the death of J.'s wife, there were living lawful grandchildren, great-grandchildren & great-great-grandchildren of testator. By this summons the trustee of the will & codicils asked (inter alia) whether, on the true construction thereof, the words "grandchildren of any degree of mine then living" included lawful grandchildren & remoter descendants of the testator living at the death of J.'s widow. There was evidence that a great-grandchild of testator was shown to him at a date before the execution of the codicils:—Held: the words "grandchildren of any degree" included all testator's lawful descendants, save his children, living at the date mentioned in the second codicil.—Re HALL, HALL v. HALL, [1932] 1 Ch. 262; 101 L. 7034a. Son born "within due time after my death."]—By a will devising estates in strict settlement the testator declared that if any son of W. or M. should be thereafter born "whether during my lifetime or within due time after my death" the estate in tail male therein devised to such son should not take effect, & in lieu thereof he devised the estates to the use of such son for his life, with remainder to the use of his first & other sons in tail male. The will also contained a name & arms clause requiring every person who became entitled to the possession of the estates as tenant for life or in tail to take & use the name & arms of X. upon pain of forfeiture to the next person entitled in remainder. Testator died in 1899. Pltf., the eldest son of M., was born in 1909, & on the death of W. without issue in 1925 became tenant in tail in possession subject to the effect, if any, of the above proviso cutting down estates tail to estates for life. Immediately after attaining the age of twenty-one years, in 1930, pltf. executed a deed disentailing the estates:—Held: the expression "within due time after my death" referred to the period of gestation. Pltf. not having been born in testator's lifetime or within nine months of his death did not come within the clause cutting down his estate tail to a life estate, & having duly disentailed the estates, was not bound to comply with the name & arms clause.—Re WATSON, CULME-SEYMOUR v. BRAND, [1930] 2 Ch. 344; 99 L. 8032a. —— ——.]—By his will dated May 22, 1879, testator bequeathed certain chattels to his exors. upon trust to " permit the same to go along with & be used & enjoyed so far as the rules of law & equity will permit by person or persons who under or by virtue of this my will shall for the time being be in the actual possession or entitled to the receipt of the rents & profits of the mansion & demesne of W. included in & settled by " a resettlement dated Oct. 31, 1874, but so as not to vest absolutely in any tenant in tail by purchase until he attained twenty-one years of age. The will also contained a bequest of residuary personal estate. The W. estate was not settled by testator's will but by the resettlement, & the words " this my will " in the bequest of chattels were therefore construed as " the resettlement." In the events which had happened testator's daughter, E., was on July 6, 1917, tenant for life in possession under the resettlement, & his nephew A. tenant in tail in remainder expectant on the event which happened of testator's three daughters dying without sons. By a disentailing deed of that date A. disentailed the property comprised in the resettlement with the consent of E. as protector of the settlement, & A. & another daughter of testator joined in conveying the property to E. in fee simple. E. survived testator's other daughters & died in 1930. In the events which had then happened testator's great nephew B. would, but for the disentailing deed, have then become tenant in tail in possession. He died soon afterwards. On a summons raising the question who on the death of E. became entitled to the chattels, LUXMOORE, J., who would apart from authority have held that the chattels fell into residue, decided on the authority of Hogg v. Jones, No. 8022, that B. became entitled to the chattels absolutely on E.'s death. On appeal :—Held : reversing the decision of LUXMOORE, J., but without deciding whether the chattels belonged to E. absolutely or fell into residue, as B. had never been in the physical possession of the mansion house & demesne of W., he did not become entitled to the chattels on E.'s death.—Re DUNCOMBE, WRIXON-BECHER v. FAVERSHAM, [1932] 1 Ch. 622; 101 L. 8534a. ——.]—By his will testator gave all his residuary real & personal estate to his trustees upon trust to pay the rents, profits & income to his wife for life & after her death upon trusts for sale & to divide the proceeds into two equal portions, one to be paid to his son A. & the other on certain trusts for his daughter B. & her children as therein mentioned. By a codicil testator, after reciting that since the date of his will he had purchased a freehold house, devised the same on trust for his wife for life & on her death for E. for life. He then directed his trustees on these events happening to sell the house & "divide the proceeds thereof equally between the children of 'my son A. & my daughter B.'" A. was married, with one child, a son. B. was also married, & had six children. A.'s son having died, his legal personal representative was one of the defts. to the summons. One of B.'s children, a son, also died, & his legal personal representative was also a deft. :—Held : although on the authorities a gift to be equally divided between the children of A. & B. ought, in the absence of surrounding circumstances, to be construed as a gift in equal shares to the individual B. & the children of A., the construction must in each case depend on the particular context & all the surrounding circumstances; the gift in the codicil included all testator's grandchildren, both A.'s & his daughter B.'s children, & accordingly the proceeds of sale were divisible in sevenths.—Re DALE, MAYER v. WOOD, [1931] 1 Ch. 357 ; 100 L. children, & further directed as follows : " & if any child of mine shall die without leaving a child, who being a son, shall attain the age of twenty-one years, or being a daughter, shall attain that age or marry, then the share in the settled fund, whether original or accruing, of any such child of mine shall be held in trust for my other child in such shares as shall correspond with their respective original shares." One of testator's sons died childless ; afterwards, another died, leaving one child, who attained twenty-one years of age ; after, a third son died childless :—Held : the use of the word " other " in the accruer clause did not import that the child, or children, referred to therein should survive the point at which the accruer clause came into operation. Upon the death of the third son, the effect of the accruer clause upon his share was to require its division among all such children, or their representatives, of testator, as has not already died without leaving any child who attained twenty-one years of age, or who being a daughter, married.—MURPHY v. PAXTON (1930), Argus L. The will proceeded : " I declare that the share of any child of mine in my residuary estate shall be subject to deduction, therefrom of any sum or sums owing by her or him to me at my death or any sum or sums payable by me upon any guarantee made or to be made by me or my exors. on her or his behalf." Testator had guaranteed the overdrawn bank account of R. one of his children, & at the time of testator's death this account was overdrawn to the extent of £1,396 0*s.* 10*d.* The exors. of testator paid off this sum to the bank in accordance with the said guarantee :—Held : the declaration operated as a gift to R. of the whole of his indebtedness to the estate.—In the Will of ANTHONY HEADLAM (1925), 21 Tas. On an application by the wife & the daughter under Family Protection Act, 1908, s. 33, for further provision out of the land situated in New Zealand :—Held : (1) the validity of a will affecting an immovable, such as land, & the rights of succession thereto, including testator's capacity to deal with his whole estate so far as consisting of such land, is governed by the lex situs & not by the law of domicil ; consequently Family Protection Act, 1908, applies to a will so far as it affects land situated in New Zealand, whether testator be domiciled in New Zealand or elsewhere, & an order in respect of such land may be made under that Act in favour of those who are entitled to further provision out of testator's estate ; (2) testator, in failing to make any provision in his will additional to that which the widow (who died after testator but before the hearing of the application) became entitled to by Scottish law, had not failed to make adequate provision for his wife's maintenance & support ; & as to the daughter, who was in delicate health & able to do light work only, & who was possessed of resources received subsequent to the death of testator, such improved means should be taken into account in disposing of the application, & an order should be made providing a sum of £1,000 for her out of the immovable situate in New Zealand, additional to what she took by Scottish law.—Re BUTCHART, BUTCHART v. BUTCHART, [1932] N. f i. —— —— To redraw will.]—On an application for relief under Testator's Family Maintenance Act, R. S. B. C. 1924, c. 256, the ct. has no power to redraw the will & dispose of the estate as it may think right & just.—Re ELWORTHY ESTATE, ELWORTHY & HALE, [1928] 2 D. L. R. 421 ; [1928] 1 W. W. g i. ——.]—Testator's Family Maintenance Act, R. S. B. C., 1924, was not intended to authorise the ct. to make a new will for testator, but only to alter the will in so far as might be necessary for the proper maintenance of testator's wife, husband or children. It is always a question of fact in each case whether or not an order under the Act should be made ; & with respect to children the Act refers only to children for whose maintenance at the time of the testator's death no adequate means of support are available. If the children are at least as well established in life as testator was in his or her lifetime, the Act should not be applied where the surviving parent is the beneficiary under the will. The discretion which is given the ct. to apply the Act where it thinks it just & equitable in the circumstances to do so is not judicially exercised unless the object, intent & spirit of the Act are observed. If a higher ct. is convinced that the judge of first instance did not take a proper view as to the scope of, & the application of the powers conferred by, the Act, it may & should interfere. If, too, a higher ct. is satisfied that the facts of the particular case are such that it was not intended that the powers conferred by the Act should be exercised, it may intervene. In such cases the order made would be based on a wrong principle. If, too, a higher ct. is convinced that on all the facts the judgment under appeal is clearly wrong, it should be set aside.—WALKER v. MCDERMOTT, [1930] 1 W. W. R. 332 ; sub nom. MCDERMOTT v. WALKER, [1930] 1 D. L. R. 945 ; 42 B. C. R. 184.—CAN.

h i. —— ——.]—Under Testator's Family Maintenance Act, R. S. B. C., 1924, the provision, which the ct. is authorised to make in the circumstances stated in sect. 3, is " such provision as the ct. thinks adequate, just & equitable." The conditions upon which this authority rests are that the person whose estate is in question has died leaving a will, & has not made, by that will, in the opinion of the judge, adequate provision for the "proper maintenance & support" of the wife, husband or children, as the case may be, on whose behalf the application is made. What constitutes "proper maintenance & support" is a question to be determined with reference to a variety of circumstances. It cannot be limited to the bare necessities of existence. For the purpose of arriving at a conclusion, the ct., on whom devolves the responsibility of giving effect to the statute, would naturally proceed from the point of view of the judicious father of a family seeking to discharge both his marital & his parental duty; & would of course consider the situation of the child, wife or husband, & the standard of living to which, having regard to this & the other circumstances, reference ought to be had. If the ct. comes to the decision that adequate provision has not been made, then the ct. must consider what provision would be not only adequate, but just & equitable also; & in exercising its judgment upon this, the pecuniary magnitude of the estate & the situation of others having claims upon testator, must be taken into account. Applying these principles to the circumstances of this case, where the only daughter of the deceased brought an application under the Act for an order directed against his second wife, sole beneficiary under the will:—Held: the judge was right in deciding that the widow should be called upon to forego part of her annual income in order to make some provision for the appct.—WALKER v. MCDERMOTT, [1931] S. C. R. 94; [1931] 1 D. L. R. 662.—CAN.

k i. —— ——.]—On an application under Family Protection Act:—Held: taking into consideration the value of testator's estate, & the facts that of the appcts. three were adult sons capable of maintaining themselves, & the fourth was a daughter who was being maintained by her husband, & that the daughter benefiting under the will had cared for testator through a long illness & was left with her invalid mother to care for, the claims of said daughter were paramount, & what was left to her was none too much, & the application should be refused.—Re CAVANAGH, [1930] N. l i. —— ——.]—Where provision was made in a will for the maintenance of two of testator's children J. & M., &, further, special provision was made for the sharing of the estate by J. & M., & no provision was made for a third child, W., born after the date of the will:—Held: the power of the ct. was limited to ordinary "maintenance & support," &, on the facts, that one-third of the net income from the estate from the date of the marriage of the testator's widow was a reasonable allowance.—In the Estate of LADE (1925), 21 Tas. l ii. —— —— Power to rescind or alter order—Whether increase in benefit authorised.]—The power conferred upon the ct. by Testator's Family Maintenance & Guardianship of Infants Act, 1916, s. 6 (4), to "rescind or alter" any order making provision under that Act, does not extend to authorising an increase to any benefit that has been awarded to an appct. upon an original application.—Re MOLLOY (1928), 28 S. R. N. S. W. 546; 45 N. S. W. W. N. 142.—AUS.

l iii. —— ——.]—On an application by a widow for relief under Testator's Family Maintenance Act the ct. should not attempt to make a new will or speculate as to how the estate might have been better divided, but should merely determine whether in view of the widow's needs & the property left by the testator he has made adequate provision for her proper maintenance & support. Its duty is to place itself, in all respects, as far as possible, in the position of the testator, & to consider whether or not, having regard to all existing facts & surrounding circumstances, the testator has been guilty of a breach of the moral duty which a just, not a loving, husband owes his wife, &, if it finds that he has been so guilty, to make such an order as appears to be sufficient, but no more than sufficient, to repair it.—Re FERGUSON ESTATE, Re TESTATOR'S FAMILY MAINTENANCE ACT, [1929] 2 W. widow re-married, & thereupon, the exors. applied for the rescission or variation by reduction of the ct.'s order:—Held: (1) the order was not unappealable merely because stated to be until the further order of the ct.; (2) not having been appealed against, the effect of the order was to preclude the ct. from considering whether it was beyond the power of the ct. to make provision for the maintenance of a testator's widow by a series of periodical payments extending until after her re-marriage; & (3) considering the matter as one of discretion only, the re-marriage of the widow did not of itself constitute sufficient reason for the rescission, variation, or suspension of the order.—Re ROBERT COLLIN (1929), 29 S. Testator, by his will, in addition to the weekly allowance to his widow, had bequeathed a weekly sum to a daughter & also to a stranger in blood. The balance of the income was given to a grandson of testator for life, & the real estate was directed to be held in trust after his death for his child or children then living, with gifts over if there were no such child:—Held: in fixing the burden of the provision made by the order the whole of testator's real estate was to be regarded as one property settled successively within sect. 5 (2) of the Act.—Re SMITH, [1928] S. Before the completion of the term, the worker refused to obey a lawful order of the employer & left the employment without notice :—Held : the Agricultural Wages (Regulation) Act, 1924 (c. 37), did not prevent the making of an agreement for employment for a fixed term with payment of a lump sum equivalent to the prescribed rate at the end of the term, & the Act did not entitle a worker who had broken his contract to demand any wages for the period during which he was in fact employed.—POCKNEY v. ATKINSON, [1930] 1 K. By the orders made for that county under Agricultural Wages (Regulation) Act, 1924 (c. 37), washing & mending were not benefits or advantages which might be reckoned as part payment of wages in lieu of payment in cash. 74a. Power of Minister to define "trade"—Validity of Order.]—By Trade Boards Act, 1918 (c. 32), s. 1, Parliament has given the power of defining or specifying a definite trade for which he may make a special order to the Minister of Labour, with this qualification, that there must be some subject-matter which can be reasonably described as a trade before its exact limits are defined. The Minister may define a trade by exclusion as well as by description. A special order does not exceed the scope of the very extensive powers given to the Minister & is not bad, on the grounds (1) that it defines a trade by reference to the place where it is carried on; or (2) that it includes a number of occupations or vocations whose collocation is fortuitous except for the fact that all the work is done in or in connection with a trading establishment; or (3) that an employee by its terms might be within or outside the scope of the Acts according to the particular part of the premises on which at a particular moment he might be.—R. v. MINISTER OF LABOUR, Ex p. NATIONAL TRADE DEFENCE ASSOCIATION, Ex p. INCORPORATED ASSOCIATION OF PURVEYORS OF LIGHT REFRESHMENTS, Ex p. STRAND HOTEL, LTD., [1932] 1 K. The cleansing of army blankets, sheets & the like was also carried on. A number of laundresses, including M., who was a "hand washer," & A., a "drier," were employed for this purpose. The laundry was within the precincts of the army barracks, but was situated in a separate building & quite distinct from the building where the soldiers resided. Although the laundry was not conducted with a view to profit, the facts did not exclude the possibility of a profit being made :—Held : M. & A. were not employed in domestic service, as they had all the characteristics of ordinary industrial workers; their service was entirely impersonal; & their work, in the circumstances in which it was carried on, was of a purely industrial character.—MINISTER FOR INDUSTRY & COMMERCE v. STEWART & LOWRY, [1930] I. 123b. —— Tramway undertaking—Depot cleaner & lavatory attendant.]—In the first case B. was employed by the Blackpool Corpn. as a lavatory attendant & a depot cleaner at the corpn.'s tramway depot. In the second case J. was employed by the Liverpool Corpn. as a lavatory attendant. In both these cases the tramway undertakings were owned & worked by the corpn. & were carried on for purposes of gain. In the third case W. was employed as a waitress by the Manchester Corpn. in refreshment rooms at H. Park, Manchester, which was over three miles from the centre of the city. Refreshments were there served to the public at a price which would just cover the cost. In the fourth & fifth cases M. was a waitress & D. a waiter, the former being employed at a pier restaurant & the latter at the "Lucullus" room at the Pavilion, Bournemouth, both being carried on by the Bournemouth Corpn. as part of their pier undertaking. It was admitted in all these cases that the employed persons were in domestic service :—Held : the test for making these persons insurable persons within the Act being (1) whether a trade or business was being carried on for the purposes of gain, & (2) whether they were employed in that trade or business. B. & J. were both insurable persons, as the tramway undertakings constituted a trade or business which was being carried on for the purposes of gain. The same reasoning applied to the two Bournemouth cases, but in the case of W. the Manchester Corpn. did not carry on the refreshment catering for the purposes of gain. W. was therefore not an insurable person under the Act.—Re MINISTER OF LABOUR, Re BLACKPOOL CORPN. & BARRITT, Re LIVERPOOL CORPN. & JACKSON, Re MANCHESTER CORPN. & WELSBY, Re BOURNEMOUTH CORPN., MILLARD & DEREZ (1931), 95 J. H. used to come to the farm about 5 o'clock in the morning, milk the cows, get ready a horse & cart, & then go into the city & distribute the milk. On his return he washed the cans, tended his horse, drove in the cows, again milked them & delivered the milk. t i. —— —— ——.]—R., a salmon factor, was the owner of several boats used for salmon fishing. At the beginning of a fishing season R. let a boat to one B., who proceeded to select a crew of two others, one of whom was H., & proceeded to fish in the ordinary way. R. was not aware that H. was a member of the crew of the boat. All fish caught had to be handed over to R., who sold them, retaining one-fourth of the proceeds of the sale of the salmon, & handing over the remaining three-fourths & the proceeds of the sale of any other fish caught to B. B. then divided all he received with the crew in proportions arranged between themselves. R. had no part in the arrangement between B. & the crew as to payment, & was not concerned as to how the money was disposed of. In the event of no fish being caught, R. received nothing & made no payment to B. or to the crew, & if B. failed to take the boat out to fish, R. could take it away from him. All repairs to the boat, nets, & tackle were done by R. at his own expense, but B. had full control over its management, the part of the river to be fished, etc., & could dismiss any of the crew, who had to obey his orders :—Held : there was no contract of service between R. & H., & consequently R. was not liable for insurance contributions in respect of H.—GALVIN v. MINISTER FOR INDUSTRY & COMMERCE & HIGGINBOTHAM, [1932] I. a (p. 1310) i. —— Employment under local authority in pensionable office.]—By an order made under National Insurance Act, 1913 (c. 37), s. 6, "employment under any local or other public authority in any pensionable office in a permanent capacity" shall be deemed not to be employment within the meaning of Part I. of National Insurance Act, 1911, the Order providing that "the expression 'office' includes any office, situation, or employment, & the expression 'pensionable office' means an office coming within the provisions of any Act authorising the grant of a superannuation allowance." A rural district council employed H. in Sept. 1899, temporarily to take charge of the waterworks system which supplied water to the town of C. shortly after the waterworks had been constructed. In Nov. 1899, H. was permanently appointed as "a person to drive the engine & the pumps, & perform any other duties he might be called upon to perform." The town of C. became on Apr. 1, 1900, an urban sanitary district by virtue of two orders of the Local Govt. Board, & the urban district council, which was created thereby, took over the waterworks. This council was under no obligation to take over the employees or officials of the rural district council who were employed on the waterworks, but H. continued to carry on his duties as before. H.'s wages were increased from time to time, & such increases were passed by the auditor of the Local Govt. Board. He furnished reports from time to time to the urban district council & frequently attended their meetings. At a meeting of the council soon after they had taken over the waterworks the opinion of the Local Govt. Board was sought as to the payment of H.'s wages, & the Board was requested to make an immediate adjustment of the council's property & liabilities. The Board replied that H.'s wages were to be paid by the council pending an adjustment of the accounts. There was no evidence as to the making of any such adjustment. The Board was fully aware of everything done at the meetings of the council, as copies of the minutes had to be transmitted to the Board :—Held : having regard to the provisions as to the granting of superannuation allowances contained in Part IV. of Local Govt. Act, 1925, H.

PART VI.

179 i. Widows', Orphans' & Old Age Contributory Pensions Act, 1925 (c. 70)—Meaning of "entry into insurance."]—A workman engaged in employment which, after July 5, 1912, rendered him compulsorily insurable under National Insurance Act, 1911, became insured as at that date, & paid his weekly contributions in full until Dec. 1922, when he passed out of insurable employment. For the purposes of the Insurance Acts he ceased, in Dec. 1924, to be an insured person. On Jan. 4, 1926, he again became insured as a voluntary contributor, & thereafter, until his death in July, 1927, he paid his weekly contributions, numbering 81, in full. His widow applied for a pension, but her claim was rejected on the grounds that sect. 5 (a) of 1925 Act had not been complied with, since it had not been established that 104 weeks had elapsed & 104 contributions had been paid since the date of her husband's last entry into insurance. The Dept. contended that "entry into insurance" in sect. 5 (a) must be construed consistently with National Health Insurance Act, 1924, & particularly sect. 3 (4) thereof, which in effect gave to that expression the meaning "last entry":—Held: sect. 5 (a) had been complied with, in respect that the "date of his entry into insurance" was the date when appct.'s husband first became an insured person, not the date when he again became insured as a voluntary contributor; & the meaning was not controlled by sect. 3 (4) of 1924 Act, which was not applicable in the case of voluntary contributors.—KERR v. DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH FOR SCOTLAND, [1930] S. C. 813.—SCOT.

179 ii. ——— ———.]—An appct. for an old age contributory pension had been insured as an employed contributor from Mar. 6, 1922, till Dec. 31, 1925. On Jan. 4, 1926, he became insured as a voluntary contributor, & continued so insured until the expiry of five years, on Jan. 4, 1931. He had attained the age of sixty-five in Mar. 1930. The Dept. rejected his claim, on the ground that the date of his entry into insurance must be taken to be Mar. 6, 1922, & he had not been in continuous insurance since that date:—Held: on a construction of Widows', Orphans' & Old Age Contributory Pensions Act, 1925, s. 8 (a) & proviso (i), the phrase "entry into insurance" meant entry into the qualifying period; &, accordingly, the date of appct.'s entry must be taken to be Jan. 4, 1926, & he was entitled to a pension on the expiry of five years from that date.—WYLIE v. DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH FOR SCOTLAND, [1932] S. C. 51.—SCOT.

179 iii. ——— Husband's employment within three years of death—Husband bedridden.]—A widow, aged sixty, applied for a pension. Her husband, who died on Nov. 1, 1928, had been employed from boyhood until 1914, & periodically from 1914 until 1921, as a share-fisherman. He became paralysed in 1922, & from that date until his death he was wholly incapacitated for work. For the last three & a half years of his life he was bedridden:—Held: appct. was not entitled to the pension claimed, in respect that it could not be held that her husband's normal occupation, at any time within three years before his death, was employment of the specified character.—MACDONALD v. DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH FOR SCOTLAND, [1931] S. C. 354.—SCOT.

n i. ——— Residence—Material date—Date of application.]—A claim for an old age pension under the Acts of 1925 & 1929, made on Mar. 4, 1930, was refused by the Department of Health for Scotland, on the ground that appct. had not satisfied the condition as to residence imposed by sect. 23 (1) (b) of the Act of 1925. Appct. had left Scotland in July, 1929, for the Falkland Islands, where he was still residing on Oct. 26, 1929, the date on which he attained the age of sixty-five:—Held: appct.'s right to a pension fell to be determined as at the date of his application; at that date the condition as to residence imposed by sect. 23 (1) (b) of the 1925 Act had been effectively repealed by sects. 13 (3) & 27 (5) of the 1929 Act; &, accordingly, appct., who otherwise was duly qualified, was entitled to an old age pension.—ROSS v. DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH FOR SCOTLAND, [1931] S.
